French Provincial Elegance

by KLING

As charming as a sunny morning in the French provinces, these two new French Provincial groups by Kling will bring warm and classic beauty to your bedroom. Look long at Chatillon and Chaumont ...imagine this fine furniture yours.

Each graceful group is available in Parisian White with soft highlights and tasteful gold accents (as seen in lovely Chaumont above) or the subtle interplay of grain and carving revealed by Ancestral Tan (like Chatillon below).

Each Parisian White piece is crafted of SOLID Northern hard maple, while the Ancestral Tan finish is used only on SOLID native wild cherry. Both groups, both finishes, are handsome proof of what skilled Kling craftsmen can create from carefully chosen fine hard woods. See them...soon.

KLING MEANS SOLID MAPLE • CHERRY • MAHOGANY

For helpful bedroom decoration and furniture care suggestions, send 35¢ (coins, please) for 24-page, full-color booklet. Kling Factories, Dept. HB-10, Mayville, N. Y.

Live luxuriously with BLOOMCRAFT draperies and MOHAWK carpets made of Avisco fibers!

Any decor from regency to modern is more luxurious with draperies of Bloomcraft's new "Cotillion"—a rich fabric of Avisco acetate and Colorspun* rayon, the colorfast Avisco fiber. This new drapery design, treated with great originality, comes in 8 light subtle color-combinations of solids and stripes.

Mohawk's "Tropicana", a Super L* carpet, has a tufted pile of soil-resistant, long-wearing Super L rayon—the special Avisco smooth carpet rayon. Multi-level looped pile adds new texture, conceals foot-prints, minimizes crushing, wears extra well. In a wide color range. Cotillion and Tropicana are available at fine stores everywhere.

Bloomcraft®, 15 E. 26th St., N.Y.C., makes the drapery fabric.

FOR REAL, RESTFUL COMFORT
The Fold-a-way Foot Rest

Leading Medical Journal Commends this rest for tired feet!

Put your feet up—relax the way the doctor ordered. The canny New England farmer who designed this foot rest over 100 years ago for a shut-in relative knew what he was doing because it keeps pressure off the calf! A boon for sales people, postmen, waiters, dentists . . . suggested as of value in the treatment of varicose veins, arthritis, fractures and many other conditions (ask your doctor). It tips to any position you choose—does not hook on to your chair. Mahogany finish. Folds for storage—have them on hand for "TV" viewer guests as well as for every member of your household.

$12,500 FOR ONE SILVER DOLLAR

Could you recognize a valuable coin? Pennies, nickels, dimes, quarters—the change in your pocket—could make you rich. You may be letting a fortune slip through your fingers, without realizing it. At dealers and auctions, thousands and thousands of dollars were paid for old coins, last year and every year, that someone, not necessarily a coin expert, had sense and know-how enough to spot.

FELL'S OFFICIAL UNITED STATES COIN BOOK tells all you want to know about every U.S. coin ever minted—from Colonial times to present. 17 fact-packed and illustrated chapters tell how to start a collection, likely places to find old and valuable coins, how to invest and speculate in coins, how and where to sell coins, how to spot the coins worth Big Money—and today's value of every U.S. Coin.

HOW TO MAKE 500% PROFIT

. . . or more on a risk-proof investment backed by the U.S. Government. Now anyone with foresight can invest in coins, profitably and wisely.

DO YOU HAVE THESE VALUABLE COINS?

You would be astonished at their worth! See page 105 for important information. Large Cents, 1793 to 1799, 1804, 1809, 1857. Indian Cents, 1878, 1908S, 1909S. Mercury Dimes, 1916. Morgan Quarters, 1897S, 1901S, 1913S. Washington Quarters, 1932D, 1936D—and many other common, yet valuable, coins.

MARVELOUS HOBBY

Young and old find coins a fascinating, educational hobby. Start a youngster or a family on the path to fun (and profit, too) by getting or giving this Official Guide.

GRATE IDEA for spaghetti, onion soup, broiled tomatoes, creamed onions, zucchini, or omelettes. An Italian-made grater takes a wedge of Parmesan cheese and grates exactly the amount you want where you want it. As grater is turned, steel blades chop the cheese fine. Strong washable ivory plastic with pastel top, $1.40. Nob Hill House, Box 1592, HB10, San Francisco 1, Calif.

DON'T BE STRAPPED for cash in an emergency. Snap this pretty cache for folding-money onto your bra or slip strap. Bosom Friend is plastic-lined, flatly inconspicuous. $1.25. Jewel Pouch snaps onto bra or slip strap, holds precious gems while traveling. $1.95. White, pink, or blue silk. Gentleman's plaid Money Holder, $1.95. Selden Cooper, Box 412, Hialeah, Fla.

WHIRLING DERVISH spins at a great rate to spray your lawn with fine "rain" or a downpour. It adjusts at a twist, waters 2500 square feet, attaches to standard garden hose and pushes into ground. Or you may use it as a hand sprayer. Leave it in ground all year—it never rusts! $1. From Hammer Co., 50 Farmington Ave., Hartford 5, Conn.

GOING TO THE DOGS is an unbreakable stainless-steel feeding dish. The smooth one-piece construction makes the dish easy to keep clean, and its heavy weight, low flat design make it untippable. Dish has a 2⅝-quart capacity, measures 8⅝" in diam., 2⅞" deep. $2.65 each. $5 for two. Sporting Dog Equipment Co., HB10, 1817 N.W. 18th Ave., Portland 9, Oregon.

INITIAL BOOK ENDS. Call it vanity, but there is something special about monogrammed possessions. When they're as finely done as these initials carved from solid-walnut blocks, who could resist that coveted personal touch? You may have same initial for both book ends or one of each. 5½" h., $7.95 pr. plus 50¢ post. Holiday House, 110 Bellevue Theatre Bldg., Upper Montclair, N.J.

HIDEAWAY HOME lets your pet pooch travel in style! A collapsible steel crate has a masonite floor, measures 25½ x 18 x 18" h. over all. For transporting your champion to field trials or for shipping him by air or rail, this is great. Chrome, $22.50; cadmium, $18.50 exp. coll. Other sizes avbl. Canvas cover, $10. The Doggery, HB10, 149 S. Beverly Dr., Beverly Hills, California.

GOOD THINGS COME IN 3'S and to prove it we show this solid-brass trio. We see them in an elegant dining room where every meal is a ceremony, where beautiful buffets are a ritual. Exquisite baroque mirror, topped with a captivating cherub, is 24½" h., 13" w., $30. Sconces have crystal prism drops, 8¼" h., 9¾" w., $25 pr. Trio, $50. Charlotte Thomas, 226 W. Wayne, Wayne, Pa.

A CHILD'S WORK OF ART is reproduced in color on a 6" tile, and you have a "masterpiece" that you wouldn't swap for a Rembrandt. Just send the drawing, signed and dated if you wish. Any size. It will be reproduced on tile, fired for permanency, felt-based. $6.45. Framed in black iron trivet, $7.45. 10-days' delivery. Young Rembrandt's, Loch Lane, Port Chester, New York.

IF KEATS SAW THESE, the world would have another ode. A salt and pepper set hand made of pottery in Greece is hand-painted with fascinating figures and scenes from Greek mythology. The workmanship and details are exquisite, the price tag unbelievable. Black finish with colorful decoration, 3" h., $3.50 pr. G. Wayne Tabor, Dept. 50, 7703 Claremont Dr., Dallas 28, Tex.

BE PREPARED for the problem of having the right coins for bridge tolls or parking meters with the Coin Caddy. It saves you the mad dash to the nearest store for change before you begin to shop because it keeps ready your nickels, dimes and quarters. Gold-metal caddy personalized with 3 initials, has magnet to grip your dashboard. $1.50. Gloria Dee, P.O. Box 2000, Mt. Vernon, N. Y.

All of these blankets are machine-washable. All are machine-dryable. But they're all so pretty I don't know which to pick.

Well, she could pick (from left to right) the Heirloom Brocade, the Bridal Rose, the Angelique, or the Hearts and Flowers. They're all Lady Pepperell blankets made of 100% Mark III virgin Acrilan acrylic fiber (with bindings of Chemstrand® nylon). They all proudly carry the Seal of Quality tag with the big red "A"-Acrilan trademark—Chemstrand's assurance of rigid quality control. Not shown, but for superb luxury, she might pick the Lady Pepperell velvet-bound Peeress in solid or print. And for the baby there are crib blankets in the same splendid quality, the same luxurious softness that's washable, non-allergenic, moth- and mildew-resistant. Yes, they're all also dry cleanable. She will always know she'll get all this matchless beauty and performance—because of the tag with the red "A." Blankets don't just get this tag. They earn it!

What you can get out of great plays on records

Fine performances of some of the world's greatest plays are now available to enjoy in the comfort of your home. Although recordings are no substitute for a good stage performance, they have some definite advantages of their own

By ARTHUR WHITMAN

■ The very qualities that make a play a classic give it value as a phonograph record. Only the plays that will bear countless repetitions can survive through the years. And a record is not worth having if it doesn't bear repeating, if it doesn't reveal undiscovered facets with each hearing.

Any classic, be it in literature, music, or the visual arts, must reward us anew each time we experience it. Great artists are those who manage to deepen the forms within which they work with insights and understanding beyond those of the ordinary mortal. It is this promise of greater revelation that brings us back to them again and again, that makes their work classic.

So it is with the theater. The "great" plays are those that touch recognizable basic truths about man and the human condition. Not all such plays are on records. And not all plays on records are classics. But those we're concerned with here are among the great plays of the world.

Experience with recorded plays goes back to 1938, when Columbia Records brought out Orson Welles's modernized version of Julius Caesar on a huge stack of 78-rpm records. Thus, producers know by now what is worth bringing out and what is not. As a consequence, there is almost no trash in the recorded drama catalog. Some plays, like those of Sophocles, have been thrilling audiences with their profound insights into mankind since long before Christ was born. Few persons will tire of hearing them or the work of more recent writers —Shakespeare, Wilde, even some of the contemporary dramatists.

The joys of seeing a play are well-known. But, like reading a play, hearing a play on records (with or without a text to follow) has values of its own. The greatest of these is convenience.

You can enjoy a play without such attendant complexities as long-range advance planning and the need to rush, dress, park cars, catch trains, and haul baby-sitters. The play is on your shelf, awaiting your pleasure. You listen when you like. A recording allows you to take advantage of odd bits of time. You can listen alone, in complete comfort with your feet up, enjoying an hour or two of creative rest during the day, or you can listen while you knit, sew, iron, or do some other quiet chore that engages the hand but not the mind.

If you choose to follow a printed text as you listen, you can engage yourself more fully with the dramatist and his ideas. You can substitute the visual experience of reading for that of watching the players on the stage.

YOU CAN ask friends over to listen to the plays with you, too, as often as you like. If you do, you may be surprised at the discussion that often follows group listening. Recorded plays stimulate conversation. Perhaps this is because people can concentrate more on the meaning of a recorded play. There is no visual spectacle calling for attention, and there is no distracting audience. If you happen not to understand a particular scene, or if an actor's diction or accent makes a speech difficult to follow, you have only to lift the phonograph arm to play the passage again. Conversation is easy and natural in your living room while you are still under the special aura of the play. In the theater there are the distractions of moving through a crowd and getting to a quiet comfortable place to talk.

It is important, after all this, to emphasize that listening alone can hardly be compared to seeing a first-rate production of the same play. But it is also true that listening to a great performance frequently turns out to be more rewarding than actually seeing an indifferent production, of which there are too many. Seeing Gielgud's Hamlet beats listening to it, but listening to it turns out to be better by far than seeing most other actors who have assayed the role in our time.

So much for the prologue. What are the great plays on records? I'd select fifteen.

To start with the oldest (of the plays, not the records) we have Judith Anderson's tour de force as Euripedes' hair-raising heroine, Medea. There are more profound Greek plays on records, notably Sophocles' Antigone and Oedipus Rex, both stunningly contemporary in their insights, both worth your attention (especially if you haven't previously seen or heard them), but there are no better bravura interpretations of classical roles than Dame Judith's.

Medea was a monstrous figure, a witch who cheated and killed to help Jason get the Golden Fleece, then rounded out her tragic career by murdering their own children when Jason deserted her. Somehow, Miss Anderson brings this tragic female to life. There's no guarantee you'll love her, but you will at least understand her. Since she is a prototype, she may give you a valuable insight into every other wronged woman in Western literature.

The record companies skip from the Greeks to the Elizabethans, a jump of nearly 2,000 years that, as it happens, leaves out little of importance to anyone but theater historians. After the Greeks established the theater as we know it, the Romans took it over for an undistinguished while, until it disappeared into Church ritual. It reemerged in the 15th Century and blossomed in the 16th, with Ben Jonson, Christopher Marlowe, and Shakespeare, three giants among a score of less well-remembered men. Of the three, Jonson is not now on records, while we have only one play, Doctor Faustus, by Marlowe. The play, of course, is based on one of the most enduring of medieval legends and one that still has power to move modern audiences. There's fascination to the story of the elderly philosopher who sells his soul to the Devil and lives to regret it. As read on the record by Frank Silvera, Marlowe's thinker may well remind you of some contemporary scientists who, in a climate of increasing potential danger, have had reason to despair recently of their own brilliance.

OF ALL the world's playwrights, it is Shakespeare who has attracted the greatest audience and created many of our most enduring images. It is not surprising that he is so well represented on records. There are some thirty Shakespeare sets on the market today, including at least four of Hamlet, three of Romeo and Juliet, and duplicate versions of at least four or five other plays. Though none of the sets that I have heard is out-and-out bad, and many are quite good, a few are head and shoulders above the rest.

Far and away the best single Shakespeare set I have heard is a two-record version of The Merchant of Venice, of all things, featuring Michael Redgrave in an absolutely electric performance as Shylock. While it is not at all certain that Shakespeare took the role of Shylock half so seriously as we do today, the part is vital if modern audiences are to regard the play as anything more than a diverting boy-girl story. For today's audiences Redgrave creates a Shylock who is not simply the brutalized, sniveling old moneybags Shakespeare seems to have had in mind, but a fully realized figure of torment. If you have ever had a moment's doubt about what an actor can do for a play, skim through Merchant again, then listen to Redgrave's Shylock.

Redgrave's may be the best single performance on the Shakespeare sets, but there are others of high excellence. Gielgud's Hamlet, for example, is a brooder of stunning power. The voice of Gielgud (in my opinion our greatest living actor, in terms of range and versatility) may be a shade too mature, a nuance too civilized to suggest the athletic young barbarian in Hamlet's character. But spared the need to match his words to action and visual images, Gielgud ignores the points he cannot make and concentrates on dredging new values out of a play that suffers most, perhaps, from being too well known. His interpretation here is a fine example of an actor putting the very limitations of his medium brilliantly to work for himself and, of course, his audience.

OF ALL Shakespeare's plays, Othello is the most playable, and we have at least one fine record version of the classic study in jealousy. Curiously, Paul Robeson and Jose Ferrer, who play the leads, add a psychological freight to the characterizations simply because of what we know of them as people.

Robeson, like the Moor, finds his enormous talents bottled up in personal frustrations and resentments, while Ferrer, not unlike the character of Iago he creates here, has used his own lesser (though still considerable) gifts to make himself one of the most important theater professionals of our time. Both give extraordinarily good performances, with the edge, perhaps, in Robeson's favor because of the way his enormous voice summons up the perfect image of the confused hero. What's more, Uta Hagen even manages to make an interesting person out of hapless Desdemona. This is the only American company performing Shakespeare on records. It is hard to imagine any other actors doing it better.

Another Shakespeare record that may be worth your attention is put out by an English company. On it, Alec Guiness heads up the Old Vic playing Macbeth and, by relying too heavily on the slow, thoughtful speech pattern that brought him fame in the movies, makes the central character more a querulous old man than a warrior baron and weakens the play considerably. But it is still a vehicle for some of the most moving poetry Shakespeare ever wrote for the stage.

FOLLOWING the trail marked by noteworthy recordings, we move from Elizabethan heroes to people more like our everyday selves, created by as staunch and testy a group of Irishmen as history has noted. Next to fine linens, charming women, and American mayors, Ireland's greatest gift to the world seems, for some strange reason, to be playwrights. In less than eighty years, she has produced at least four great ones: John Millington Synge, Oscar Wilde, George Bernard Shaw, and Sean O'Casey. All are represented by excellent recordings of their major works.

Siobhan McKenna and Cyril Cusack do justice to both Synge's The Playboy of the Western World and Sean O'Casey's Juno and the Paycock. Though both plays were written for ensemble playing on the stage, and thus lose something by not being seen, enough of the wit and the sympathy for human failing that has made these plays classics comes through to make these intelligent recordings worth hearing. Well worth hearing, in fact, even though the native brogue the actors employ may make you follow the earlier suggestion of playing some passages over again. Once your ear tunes in on the diction, though, you're sure to be charmed by it.

Wilde, who once remarked that his personal tragedy consisted in putting his genius into his life, not his work, was a somewhat more pretentious playwright than either Synge or O'Casey. Fittingly, his The Importance of Being Earnest has what may be the most scintillating cast on any of these records, starring, as it does, John Gielgud, Edith Evans, and Pamela Brown. Despite the fact that the author thought of it only as an exercise in wit, Earnest is as serious as many plays that take themselves more seriously, and funnier than most plays that are meant to be only funny. It is made to glisten here by the superlative cast.

The last of the eminent Hibernians, Shaw, is represented on records by Don Juan in Hell, played by Charles Laughton, Charles Boyer, Agnes Moorehead, and Sir Cedric Hardwicke. This is less of a play than most of those mentioned here. Shaw took it out of the acting version of his Man and Superman. This quartet performed it as a concert reading, not as a dramatic production, and it is, to me, one of the most rewarding of the records. As read by this talented group, Don Juan sparkles with the odd combination of savage wit, pedantry, and insouciance that was Shaw at his best.

It is strange that greatness, though so few are touched with it, is yet such an enormous area. Shakespeare was great; so was Shaw; and so, I am quite sure, is Christopher Fry. Yet the men are miles apart, even in the very quality we call greatness. In my judgment, Shaw is far less great than Shakespeare, and Fry is far less great than Shaw. Yet he has written at least one great play.

IF THERE is such a thing as a philosophical romp, then his The Lady's Not For Burning is surely it. It is a story of sorts about a man who is "as much 15th Century as anything," and has seen so much of life that he wants to die. And if you mistake this for a viewpoint rather more modern than medieval, its author would not be terribly disturbed. As played by the ubiquitous Gielgud and the almost equally ubiquitous Pamela Brown, the play is a delight from beginning to end.

A more somber effort, and the first American work to enter the Valhalla of plays on records, is Arthur Miller's Death of a Salesman, starring Thomas Mitchell. The story of poor, bumbling Willy Lohman, whose tragic fault was simply that he was a genial nobody, has been called everything from the American tragedy to an unintentional comic satire, but if you think Mr. Miller has said something here of real value, this excellently played version will surely move you.

The last play on our list of fifteen is T. S. Eliot's Murder in the Cathedral. Because it contains little in the way of conventional theater action, Eliot's play about the 12th-century political murder of Archbishop Thomas à Becket has been called a closet drama, not meant for staging—a fact that really doesn't matter if you're listening to it on records. This set is played by the late Robert Donat and a corps of first-rate supporting players from the Old Vic. Closet drama or no, their version of the Archbishop's rejection of worldly temptations in favor of the spiritual grandeur that comes from rejecting compromise will make your scalp tingle.

You may agree with the author's reasoning or not, but his verse makes Becket's murder an event in which no one can fail to see his own guilt and, perhaps, absolution.

Panelok wall system by Masonite, at local lumber yards, from about 28¢ to 43¢ a square foot. "Adjust-a-bilt" accessories are extra.

Double-mirrored doors for bathroom cabinets

Modernize medicine cabinets without major reconstruction. Simply remove old door, apply new frame around old cabinet box (still in wall), and hang new mirrored doors on frame. Inside mirrors provide two-way view. At larger department stores. J. R. Goslee Co., 1500 Brookpark Road, Cleveland, Ohio. About $67 for 36" x 30"; $43 for 32" x 24".

Floor-to-ceiling doors add a feeling of spaciousness to small rooms, because ceiling plane continues from room to room. Above, right, is an 8-foot door faced with Masonite Dorlux. Particle-board closet door (U.S. Plywood's Paniflex) comes any height to 10 feet, makes top closet shelves fully accessible. Discuss with architect or builder for new construction. For doors to install yourself in remodeling, order from local lumber yard.

Plastic laminate in easy-to-install wall tiles

New 10" squares of plastic laminate are thin enough to cut with tin snips, easily put up with special adhesive, and do not require professional installation (recommended for large sheets of this material). Careful home-owner can do very satisfactory job. Full instructions with tiles. Formica Tiles, at lumber yards or from tile contractors, cost about 50¢ each.

Sunken tub without expensive custom building

Ready-made tub gives luxurious, low-cost, sunken tub bathing. Of normal depth, it stands only 6" above floor, needs 20" below for supports and pipes. Its low lines make bathroom look bigger. Five-foot corner model: 4½', 5', and 5½' recess models from about $96 to $146, depending on choice of 6 colors or white. At plumbing contractors or from Ingersoll-Humphreys Div., Borg Warner Corporation, Mansfield, Ohio.

Quick look at Brasilia

Impressions of Brazil's new capital—a thought-provoking, jet-age city, carved out of wilderness and built in five years

By MARION GOUGH

When we returned from a one-day quick look at Brasilia, we were asked what we thought about it.

"Fabulous," we replied.

But our questioner was a lady who brooks no semantic looseness. "What do you mean fabulous—fabulous good, fabulous bad, fabulous what?"

We meant "fabulous incredible." For our impression when we first caught sight of Brazil's brand new capital city was that we had wandered into a Dali landscape and shouldn't have been surprised to see a limp watch or two draped over the imposing "front porch" of the (Please turn to page 255)

True sherry is matured by Spain's slow "solera" method...each year's vintage being added to preceding years' sherries. The newest wine is added to sherries maturing in the top row of casks. Then, a few liters at a time, their aging contents move down to refill still older casks below. Years will go by while sherry is maturing in the first cask alone. Then more years in the second cask...and the third. The final casks yield dry finos, medium amontillados, or sweet oloroso sherries.

True Sherry is mature Sherry

In the sun-drenched vineyards huddled 'round the village of Jerez de la Frontera, they have joyously harvested the autumn vintage.

Only on these few favored Spanish acres ripen the grapes from which comes true "sherry" (the English word for Jerez or Sheris wine).

And only after the passing of many, many years and mingling through many casks will this sherry have matured to perfection.

Then the sweeter, more golden, aged "oloroso" wines will be selected for bringing to Britain, to be blended into Harvey's Bristol Cream.

Only in Bristol, England, and only by Harvey's are these richly matured sherries balanced and bottled.

It may be decades before this year's vintage reaches you from Jerez. But when you do buy a bottle of it, imported Harvey's Bristol Cream will taste exactly as it does today...exactly as it did in Queen Victoria's day.

"It always feels as if we're going to stay"

Through years of temporary houses this family has learned how to satisfy their deep need to create a home

By JOYCE DOUGLAS

• What is a beautiful house? Surely it is a different thing to each of us, but to each it gives the tap roots of life, the gift of belonging, and a sanctuary. It is created from love and laughter and giving. It is molded by the beauties of the world outside its doors and the cherished possessions within. It is enriched with the enchantment of shared contentments and deeply rooted by memories and traditions—so, ultimately, it needs no permanent address. It can exist anywhere. In my own case, it has been created out of the varied experiences of living in twenty houses in as many years.

I remember our first house in a war-time boomtown in Texas. It was stamped on a dusty hillside. It was small and hot and drab, and over-endowed with faded wicker furniture, but in that crowded town we were lucky to have it.

It was such a joy simply to be together and there were so many things to do, that at first we ignored the ugliness of the house and made a career of being in it as little as possible. But before long we were achingly homesick for the remembered beauty of the homes in which we were raised. It was then that we persuaded the landlord to give us carte blanche to attack the living room. We painted the walls and furniture white and used a gay blue and green print for curtains and cushion covers.

We bought a small Picasso print and one of those lovely white wool rugs that are hand-loomed in Mexico. We sent home for some of our wedding gifts which had been stored—a cloisonné bowl in shades of orange, a pair of deep-green lamps, and a Venetian glass decanter.

Suddenly, the Douglases were "at home." We felt we belonged. We never again made the mistake of thinking that because a house was temporary, we could merely exist in it and be happy. We had discovered our deep mutual need to create a home.

All through those war years, years of separations, reunions, and a half-dozen houses, we, like so many couples caught up in the uncertainties and fears of that time, searched out laughter. But we might never have truly understood what it brings to a home had we not lived in "Ugly Duckling," a sixteen-foot house trailer with an addiction to flat tires. Here, laughter was not a luxury; it was an absolute necessity.

We awakened every morning, stretched, sat up, and bumped our heads on the ceiling. The stove had all the temperament, but none of the talent of a prima donna. We never located a scientific formula for firmly securing things in transit, and the breakage rate was magnificent. The door opened only to the wiliest of strategies, and we had endemic claustrophobia. The only positive thing about the trailer was that it made every subsequent dwelling look like the Taj Mahal. It taught us to laugh.

Our first home after the war was an old farmhouse in Virginia, more than large enough for our children and their assorted pets. We loved the worn spots on its pine-planked floors and the century-old smoked rose of its fireplace bricks. It had a patina of happiness, and it was impossible to live there and not feel the tug of the past.

For a time we felt like rootless intruders, until we began to repeat small rituals and start traditions of our own. Then the house seemed to approve of us. Burning the Christmas tree and singing carols on Twelfth Night, playing hooky on the first warm spring day to search for wildflowers and to picnic in the woods, exploring at night and standing in a circle with clasped hands to wish on the first star—these and so many other little things that we have done again and again in all the years since have given us a feeling of continuity and permanence.

In retrospect, the strangest thing about our houses was that so often their gifts to us were simply a new appreciation of things we had always taken for granted. And so it was with that stove in Maine.

We were living in a sea captain's gaunt old house on the coast where the surf shattered on huge gray rocks. I remember the exquisite oak paneling in those high-ceilinged rooms, but most of all I remember coming to terms with that blackened monster in the kitchen—an old wood stove in whose oversize ovens a hind quarter of beef could have been roasted.

My husband's squadron was composed mostly of bachelors who lived in quarters at the small airfield nearby. Their appetite for home cooking matched the potential of the stove, and that ancient kitchen drew them like a magnet. They came laden with hams, chickens, and the wonderful sea food of Maine. They chopped wood, stirred, sniffed, tasted, ate incredible amounts. We loved them.

WOOD stoves have a genius all their own. A low-banked fire and hours and hours of slow baking produced beans and ham I haven't ever duplicated since. The aromas of cooking seemed to be the very heart of that huge old house. We have never had another wood stove, but all of our subsequent stoves have shared its inherent hospitality and welcome.

We carried the memory of those Maine feasts to an adobe hacienda in California. Its kitchen, too, had magnetic qualities, with its bright hooked rug, its grandfather clock, and comfortable old rocker. But that is not what we most remember about our hacienda. "La Ranchito de los Geranios" rambled around two sun-splattered patios where a peacock screamed, and love birds cooed in their cages. The bedroom wings were accessible to the main house by a covered walk.

The house was charming, but its magic came from the sky and the flowers that lured us out into sunlight and moonlight. We filled the house with flowers, and I can still close my eyes and see the late sun glinting on the pewter bowl of red geraniums on the deep window sill. After living in that house, we always contrived some small spot for outdoor living, wherever we were.

When we left our hacienda, we put our furniture in storage, and traveled to Florida for a short tour of duty. Aside from our clothes, we took along only the two cruise boxes, "Pandora I" and "Pandora II," that always accompany us on temporary moves. We rented a furnished house. It was totally unlike any other house we had lived in, for there was nothing wrong with it—and everything. Its sum total was mediocrity.

The two Pandoras wrought miracles. The nondescript bookcase borrowed charm from the Gauguin print we hung above it; the coffee table was revived by a gleaming brass tray; the lamp tables glowed with the ginger lamps from China; and the dining room reflected the charm of an antique silver fruit bowl and Georgian candlesticks.

The transformation seemed complete to us, because our eyes were drawn to objects long loved, and we were happy there. This house made us realize that taking possession did not make it ours, but a few cherished treasures did. I remember my ten-year-old daughter solemnly explaining our gypsy life to her friend: "But, you see, it always feels as if we're going to stay."

Soon after we left Florida, Doug found himself in an extremely demanding job. We were living on the Monterey peninsula in a gray cottage, which looked for all the world like Hansel and Gretel's. Many evenings Doug worked, and he had little energy left for going out or entertaining. This was the year our family started collecting records and books in earnest. Leisure was shared with a variety of companions from Bach to Eddie Condon, from A. A. Milne to Toynbee.

WE HAD always enjoyed music and reading, but never before had we made them our primary leisure-time pursuit. Firelight to dream by, archie and mehitabel to laugh with, popcorn to munch, music to soothe, and rainy nights to shut out—these created our refuge.

Someday we will settle down in our house that lies at the end of the rainbow trail. It may be a mellow old New England farmhouse or a freshly minted rambler on a California hilltop. But it will have a garden with sunshine and shadow. Within our walls the new and the old will blend to give us the varied beauties and joys that have enriched each of our two-score homes—vibrant color, the tantalizing aromas of favorite foods, old silver, music, laughter, friendship, and love.

Finding and Keeping

"Finding and keeping: these two words summarize the whole social duty of the critic. If we do not preserve what we already have, we shall not only impoverish ourselves, but we shall also lose our grip on those principles by which we measure the perpetual innovations thrust upon us. The other half of our duty is to find, among these innovations, all their use and beauty."

Writing these words for the New York Times Magazine, Carlos Baker, Professor of English at Princeton, was thinking primarily of the literary critic—and the materials of literature he is called upon to judge. But in a larger sense his words apply beyond literature, beyond the many arts, to the commonest stuffs of life.

At House Beautiful, we see his "duty" in terms of the tangible and the intangible—home furnishings and family relations, kitchen appliances and creative cooking, building products and architectural theory, gardening and the power of awareness. To make the most of these, we as editors and you as readers must find and keep "all their use and beauty."

A true American harvest table is shown here as a library table beneath shelves of books. With leaves down, it is only 18″ wide and could fit many modern rooms. With one or both leaves up, the top is substantial enough for many jobs: a study table, a desk, a buffet. Its height is a comfortable 29″, length, 72″. Milling Road Div., Baker Furniture, about $278.

The Reappearance of the Generous Table

PHOTOGRAPHED AT W. AND J. SLOANE

Even a traditional English book table finds its place in the rooms of today. With a top more generous than the usual lamp table and with book shelves on four sides, this piece deserves a highlighted place away from the wall. It comes in a Chatham mahogany finish. Heritage Furniture, about $249.

Still another representative of the traditional is the typical drum table with a handsome Duncan Phyfe pedestal base. There are drawers on all sides of this table, giving a surprising amount of storage space for small living-room accessories. Table has a black leather top. The Kittinger Co., about $405.

As a library table, as a sofa-back, as a console, the boldly-scaled table of years ago challenges the newly-won prestige of the cabinet. Even in our small rooms the table holds its own

In the spacious living rooms of our childhood there was always The Table. It did not hug the wall in fear and trembling. It stood out proudly, finely finished on all sides, ready to be admired by all. On its substantial top might be many things: a major lamp, a display of current magazines, a few special books, a dictionary, even a set of desk accessories. It had a drawer—or two—to hold cards, game pads, coasters, extra ash trays, everything associated with the leisurely life of the living room.

The Table had height, 27″, 28″, or 29″, and often there was a chair nearby that could be drawn up to The Table for reading, writing, or playing a game. There was never any difficulty getting your knees under it when you wanted to get serious about what you were doing.

Now, after years of storage cabinets lined against the walls of our rooms and coffee tables so low we could trip over them, The Table has come back. It is seen in many forms, and it does some wonderful new tricks. But best of all, it brings back the satisfying beauty achieved by one major furniture piece in a room. (Please turn the page)

A modern adaptation of the larger living-room table, this one might even be used for dining. The two drop leaves raise to form a large oval, and the casters make it easy to move it to a more convenient location for serving. Dunbar, about $395.

A console, this has the right height to be brought out into the room as a sofa-back table. Though only 15½″ deep, it easily holds a lamp, a pile of magazines, books, and other small accessories. Raised lip helps keep objects in place. It is 54″ long, has a parquet top. Jacques Bodart, about $295.

Seen here in the capacity of a desk, this useful piece could as well serve as a library table. Full knee-space underneath is something that we miss in many tables now designed for the living room. Palazzo Collection by Drexel, about $175.

Because of their scale, these new tables command the center of attention, whether out in the room or against a wall

Most of the generous tables shown here can be used either against the wall or out in the room proper. Where once we might have allowed a table to stand free, we now tend to push it against a wall. But one thing should be understood. Just because our rooms are smaller these days does not mean that everything must be jammed against a wall, nor does it mean that we can use only small-scaled pieces.

It is a phenomenon of design—but a truism—that a room will look more crowded with many small objects than with a few large ones. It is also true that a clear central space in a room does not necessarily make it seem big. A table in the center may develop two conversation groupings, giving added depth to the room. To see beyond an object develops an illusion of distance. Thus, the cutting off of a corner, as seen in the upper photograph on the opposite page, might seem a lavish use of space, yet in actuality it adds a dimension that would not have been there if the table had been placed against the wall. (Please turn the page)

PHOTOGRAPHS BY WILLIAM HOWLAND

In a room lacking a fireplace or other architectural interest, a table of this bold scale would become the focal point of the room's decorating. It is 84″ long, 30″ wide, and 29″ high, with a drawer at each end. It could serve countless purposes today, and the beauty of its Venetian-inspired design can be admired from all sides. From Baker's Palladian group, about $662. Accessories from Accessories and Design.

This simple console is only 18″ deep, but its 72″ length makes it suitable for many purposes today. Seen here as a side table in the living room, it easily stores two rollaway seats underneath its top. But it could double as a buffet server in a dining room. Its simple lines blend with any furniture style. Erwin Lambeth table from John Stuart, about $124.

Fitted out to the needs of a desk without the look of one, this table has a travertine insert in the top to provide a good work surface. The two side shelves hold magazines or stationery while the center drawer hides nuisance items that create clutter. Table proper is of walnut. The Lane Co., about $120.

This one is five feet long, but only 16″ deep, yet it is large enough to hold a handsome miniature chest that can be filled with all kinds of living-room necessities. With a flip-top that doubles its size, it becomes a dining table that will easily seat six. It also can be used as a hall console. Founders, about $100.

Deeper than many of the tables shown here (28″), this one has a top made of natural sap-grained walnut, which produces the variegated tones seen in the photograph. The base comes in walnut with either light or dark finish. It has a single drawer along its 54″ side, stands a comfortable 29″ high. Top is neatly turned up at the edge. Dunbar, about $370.

THE REAPPEARANCE OF THE GENEROUS TABLE

The sofa-back is one returning use of these tables. Many have flip-tops to convert them into full-scale dining tables

Once you realize that it is possible to bring a large furniture piece out into a room without crowding it, all kinds of groupings suggest themselves. The bulk of a sofa can often act as a buffer for passing traffic, isolating a quiet conversation area. This traditional arrangement is coming back to solve many problems of the living-room-dining-room combination. In turn it has brought the sofa-back table into prominence again.

On these two pages you see four examples of such furniture arrangements. In no case is the room of unusual size, yet in no case does the sofa-table combination appear to crowd the room. All of the tables can double as dining tables, three of them being specifically designed to open into larger units. Yet, as shown, they all perform beautifully in a closed position, providing a much-needed place for the amenities of the living room. Like the single-purpose library tables, they contribute to a reposeful atmosphere in the one room dedicated to quiet pursuits.

The beautiful proportions and clean lines of this flip-top console make it suitable for use with furnishings of any style. It is 66″ long and 20″ deep, opening to double its size for dining (right). It houses two matching benches beneath its top, providing extra seating space for the living room. The top is made of scrubbed rosewood; the base is mahogany in teak finish. Harvey Probber, about $396, without benches.

Designed primarily for dining, this versatile table can serve as a sofa-back when it is fully open (as shown at left) and still not seem over-scale. The two leaves do not drop but slide into concealments beneath the central top. In its closed position (shown above), the top measures 47″ x 35½″, but increases to 75″ x 35½″ when the leaves are extended. The table is made of elm, with walnut or teak finish. Designed by Lawrence Peabody for Richardson/Nemschoff. About $131.

Furnishings that translate tradition into modern use

Perhaps the greatest achievement of 20th-century design is that it has made us conscious of the need for genuine livability and usefulness in all our home furnishings. The more functions a piece of furniture performs, the better it suits our needs. The more space it saves or the more storage it offers, the more likely a candidate it is as a furniture investment. But there is a prevalent impression that these virtues are to be found only in purely contemporary design. So, many a modern householder whose tastes still hanker for the curves and tapers of traditional feels forced to make an uneasy peace with such modern devices as built-ins and dual-purpose units whose greatest appeal to their owner may be their practicality.

But here is a remarkably correlated group of home furnishings that lets the modern-minded traditionalist eat his cake and have it too. It is called Palazzo—a collection of something more than 500 home furnishings for every room in the house (kitchen excepted), all of them, from furniture and rugs to bath towels and soap dishes, deriving their form and pattern from the classic tradition of Greek and Italian design. Yet you will see on these six pages how, in scale and workability, their grace and mannerliness adapt themselves to the varied needs of space-conscious, casual-living moderns.

Macy's Design Studio designed the furniture, in co-operation with the Drexel Furniture Company, and assembled the generous choice of fabrics, lamps, accessories, tableware, linens, rugs, ready-made curtains and (Please turn the page)

Chairs and sofas are scaled to lend themselves to modern furniture use and placement. Any single table suggests a number of uses. Wood finish is primarily distressed fruitwood, but may also be painted or antiqued. The fabric choice is broad, from silk to cotton, from damask upholstery to tambour muslin curtaining, in a range of 22 harmonious colors. Classic motifs, like anthemion, the Greek key, medallions, and the crossed bay leaf run like a theme through the collection.

You may buy any of these furnishings separately, but all were conceived so that they can be used together to give rooms the kind of perfectionist carrying-out of detail you once could have had only by custom-order design. Even the patterns of table linen and Swiss embroidered curtains have been styled to relate to the other furnishings. All colored fabrics, solid or patterned, like the blankets, rugs, and draperies, are correlated from a palette of 22 colors.

Where do you go to find the best?

Besides fine department stores and furniture stores there are other places to shop for quality furnishings these days. These other places are called "showrooms," which operate differently from retail stores. Here we tell you what the showroom is, how it operates, and how you can use it

By MARION GOUGH

PHOTOGRAPH BY JESPER HOM

In many of our big cities there are whole neighborhoods of home furnishings showrooms where you may go to see the finest, accompanied by a decorator or dealer. San Francisco has 75 such showrooms in the area of Jackson Square alone.

● Where do you go to find the cream of the market's merchandise—the finest-grade furniture, the accessory that is fine enough to be a museum piece? Where do you turn when you want fabric custom-woven in your colors or a rug carved to fit your bay window?

You have probably already discovered for yourself that many of the loveliest things you see in the magazines (in both editorial pages and in ads) are not carried by your local stores. Indeed, many are not carried by any stores. And when you ask how you can get them, you are told that they are available to you only through a decorator or on special order through a retail dealer.

You are simply getting the news that some changes have been taking place in the way certain high-quality furnishings are being distributed.

Translated into your terms, it means that there are more kinds of places to shop than there used to be. Because, in addition to the quality department stores and furniture stores, there are showrooms.

Showrooms are of three types. One is the manufacturer's showroom where the whole spread of one maker's products is permanently displayed. Some quality furniture manufacturers maintain as many as ten such showrooms in as many big cities. Another is the individually owned showroom that buys and sells manufacturers' merchandise just like a store, except that it does not sell directly to the consumer. The third type is the manufacturer's representative, who may display the products of several manufacturers.

All three types have one thing in common: they sell only to dealers and decorators. Which means that you, the consumer, cannot walk in off the street and expect to buy without a prior introduction from a retail dealer or a decorator. Most also have in common the fact that they show only intrinsically fine quality, which means usually expensive. Said another way, showrooms are not for bargain hunters.

PHOTOGRAPH BY JOHN ENGSTEAD

Los Angeles has two big "showroom centers," Robertson Boulevard (right) with 70 showrooms, and La Cienega with 39, besides showrooms elsewhere in town.

but for people who are looking for the exceptional kind of quality merchandise not always readily found in a store. Showroom shopping is by no means a substitute for the familiar convenience and directness of shopping in a fine, established retail store. It is simply an adjunct to it, offering you another source when you're out after something your home furnishings shop or department store does not stock.

The great, distinguished-name department stores and furnishing stores—and this type of store is represented in most major cities of the country—still carry top-quality goods. Most of them maintain departments devoted to choice, far-above-average furnishings, modern and antique, creamed from the whole world by their buying staffs. These high-caliber stores offer the services of decorating departments (which more customers should learn how to take advantage of) who will help you seek out the special top-quality merchandise you're after.

But there is such a plethora of top-quality products that stores find it physically impossible to find space in which to show it all. So many stores use showrooms as an extension of their own selling floors. Some stores even maintain their own showrooms, usually in other buildings, where the more recherché lines are segregated and shown in quieter environment. You can ask your dealer or the store's decorating department to take you to these other displays, if you do not find what you want in stock in the store.

The limitations of store space have had a lot to do with the development of the showroom, which has speeded up notably since the depression and particularly since the end of the war. During the depression, the stores began to put increasing emphasis on doing business in volume and having a high turnover in sales. Since the highest quality does not sell as quickly and easily as lower priced goods, it was the general tendency of the average store to gear the bulk of its merchandise and its displays to middle-of-the-road tastes and pocketbooks—all quite in line with the last two decades of preoccupation with the cult of the common man. By and large, with some notable exceptions, this policy has continued. This is not to say that the stores are not offering excellent quality of its kind. Today's middle and upper-middle bracket home furnishings are remarkably good. They are indeed great bargains in styling and in quality received for the price paid. But they still do not satisfy the customer who is looking for the intrinsically very fine. And there have never before been so many potential customers for the finest, because over the same 30 years American tastes and pocketbooks have been developing to an all-time high. The high-style stores, of course, are abreast of this. But even stores never previously noted for high-style are now expanding their services to keep up with their increasingly quality-hungry customers. The current growth in store decorating departments, which you now can find even in suburban branches, and the stores' use of showroom facilities are indications of it.

The manufacturer's showroom came into being because the makers of the fine stuff were not getting enough exposure of their product in the stores. They needed some new method of displaying their wares so that consumers could see them in quantity. They set up showrooms in which they could exhibit every piece and pattern of their entire line—something no store could afford the space to do. So, visiting these showrooms, one has an opportunity to see a far broader choice of any one maker's line than is usually shown in retail stores. They adopted the policy of selling at wholesale to retailers, decorators, and other professionals who are qualified to resell the goods to the public. The showrooms particularly invited the patronage of the decorators, who were in turn glad to find sources of uncommon quality—the something special that everyone else didn't have—for their clients. Importers and dealers in antiques similarly have showroom operations that the decorators find valuable in their search for the rare and unusual, particularly in accessories.

Specifically how do you go about getting access to the showrooms?

In the first place, you have to have some idea of what the best is before you ask for it. With such a confusing welter of merchandise on the market, there has never been a time when people needed so much to educate themselves to be able to distinguish the good from the better and the best. Price alone is not necessarily a yardstick. You have to see and feel and tap and drape and fold (Please turn to page 265)

The days were never long enough

TEXT BY ELIZABETH ENRIGHT
PHOTOGRAPHS BY JOHN ENGSTEAD WITH MARVA SHEARER

It is a great thing to have an uncle who is a farmer. In the summer when you and your brother visited your uncle's farm, it was, you said, "like going to a tame zoo."

There were three dogs: a tan one, a black one, and a black-freckled one. There were two cats: one that stayed home and one that went hunting, and there were always some kittens.

There were a lot of chickens, all white and all foolish. They trotted aimlessly about the barnyard in their feathered pantaloons; or they paused dreamily, standing on one pronged, ugly foot, uttering quavering sounds; or they cackled about eggs. In the early morning when you woke up you heard the chickens gabbling, and they sounded exactly like the people downstairs when the grownups are having a party.

There were a lot of cows. In the early morning you heard them, too, as they sailed slowly out of the barn and across the pastures. You heard the tonk of the bells they wore, and the great, hollow sounds of their voices. Each year you had to get used to the cows all over again.

There was a hog in the pig-pen. He smelled terrible, but you liked him anyway. You liked to lean over the fence and scratch his back with a shingle. He liked it, too, snuffling and rumbling, and twitching the edges of his flat wet nose to show his pleasure.

There was a horse in the horse pasture who was very old. His name was Damon. He had a straw-colored mane, and eyes that looked patient. When you fed him grass, it sounded like people marching through weeds.

The horse, Damon, and the black-freckled dog, whose name was Domino, were two of your favorites. The goat was your third.

He was the only goat you knew. His name was Disraeli, and he was white. He had an Uncle Sam beard, and on his neck two little lappets of fur looked like an untied necktie. He ate almost anything, but what he loved to eat was cigarettes. He enjoyed your company, and when he greeted you his voice, old and queer though it sounded, seemed to be saying something you could almost understand.

The days were never long enough for you on the farm; there was so much that had to be done. You had to play with the cats, and run with the dogs, and chase the chickens, and get used to the cows, and scratch the pig, and feed the horse, and visit the goat. And then you had to do everything all over again. Each night you went to bed worn out.

After dark the farm grew still, and it was the country around it that began to speak. It spoke with the voices of frogs and owls and whippoorwills, and distant dogs on distant farms. Later in the summer it would sing with crickets and clatter with katydids, and you, waking for a minute in the deep dark, would listen to them before you slept again. You knew your bed was a little boat that sailed the huge night safely.

The gamba bow is held between the end of the thumb and first two fingers. The second finger rests against the bow hairs, balancing and keeping up the point of the bow. Underhand bowing is easier than the violin technique and makes for an evenness of tone. Plucking the strings with both hands, called "thumping," gives a harp-like tone. # The Viola da Gamba Comes Back

"The sprightly, generous, and heroic viols . . . are fit to make a man's ears glow and fill his brains full of frisks . . ." THOMAS MACE, 1676

By NATALIE N. MORGAN

With the return to popularity of the recorder, 16th-century music has been "discovered," to the delight of all those who like to make music at home. Now, the viola da gamba is being "found" again and will almost certainly join the recorders for family music making.

The viola da gamba (often referred to as a "gamba" or by its family name, "viol") is an excellent accompaniment for the voice, strings, and wind instruments. It is easy to play, only a bit more difficult than the recorder, and is a good stringed instrument for the beginner because it is fretted, insuring correct pitch. Playing in tune is the most difficult part of learning stringed instruments. Ordinarily it takes years of difficult practice to be able to play passably on the violin or cello. But anyone with any knowledge of music at all, even the rankest amateur, can soon play the viola da gamba acceptably.

School children might well be taught viol playing. Thanks to the frets and the less strenuous holding position, the viol would not try the patience of the child to the point of disinterest.

Recorder music, everywhere available today, is perfectly suitable for the viola da gamba. Viol music is not difficult, although it runs the gamut from easy to virtuoso. It is music written by the masters and calls for appreciation. It is thoroughly rewarding to play and delightful to hear.

These are facts which we have discovered for ourselves since our viola da gamba arrived. After a little organized practice we can already play the first few pieces in our beginner's book, 12 Lessons on the Viola da Gamba, by Natalie Dolmetsch, plus the bass line in four-part harmony pieces.

Until the arrival of the gamba, we had concentrated our interest in early music and instruments on recorders, the lute and the 16th-century keyboard instruments—the clavichord and virginal. In reading and studying about early music makers, we were always hearing about the viol. The more we read, the more curious we became, and finally we succumbed to the temptation. Now we have finally met the instrument face to face.

The viol family of stringed, bowed instruments is similar in some ways to our modern family of violins, violas, cellos, etc., but the differences are quite important and should be understood.

Viols nowadays come in three different sizes: treble, tenor, and bass, although in the 16th Century there were nine different sizes.

All viols are held on or between the knees, cello fashion, regardless of their size. They have six strings (the violin has four), tuned in intervals of a fourth, another fourth, a major third, a fourth, and another fourth. The bow, which is rather slackly strung, has a curve like a hunting bow and is held underhand. (The violin is bowed "overhand.") Underhand bowing helps make an even, sustained tone and prevents the strong accents characteristic of violins.

The most important distinction between the violin and viola da gamba is fretting, which gives the viol its highly characteristic tone color. Frets are ridges across the fingerboard, usually made of gut or nylon, which locate pitch positions, as on guitars.

Gamba frets, being tied on with a loop around the neck, are slightly movable, thus making possible minor adjustments in the scale. They may be held in place (Please turn to page 232)

Accessories —the real mood-setters

Without changing major furnishings, one room can play many roles, depending on the accessories you choose. Here is the same room in two moods

You can effect big character changes with the accessories you bring into a room. Even the littlest things will count a lot. You may prefer objects of one period, reflecting the taste and interests of one particular culture, or it may be an amalgam representing many eras and different cultures. In either case the sum total of these personal objects, with colors and fabrics appropriate to them, will finally determine the atmosphere of the room.

Two rooms designed for different types of possessions are shown on these pages and the next. They are identical in size and shape. The furniture and its arrangement remains the same, yet the over-all effect of each room has its own distinct quality. The difference between them—it's a big one—is due to the predominantly European antique possessions in one, and, in the other, the bolder character of Eastern, African and, mainly, contemporary things. These rooms are effective because the furniture and fabrics have a certain time- (Text continued on page 290. More pictures overleaf.)

The gentle world of George Innes, whose work hangs above the sofa on opposite page, is echoed in the other appointments in this setting (right and below). Room and furniture are the same as those above, but paintings, accessories, and rug set a very quiet mood. Paintings at right from Hirschl & Adler Galleries. Rooms and furniture designed by Edward Wormley.

Bold contemporary brightness in color scheming and large-scale motifs bring crisp freshness to this room. Dining area has carved teak panels on walls and ceiling. This same design is reflected in specially woven rug in foreground, the dominant decoration of the room. Plain colors and soft textures in upholstery fabrics and wall covering do not call special attention to themselves but count instead as color accents.

Either antique or modern possessions can establish the flavor of a room, especially when the furniture is free from period clichés

The same room as above, using the same furniture arrangement, presents an 18th-century character, not in detail but in mood. Leather walls, antique rug and accessories make a setting of mellow richness. Furniture wood has different finishes (to show more of those available), but what makes the main difference here is the choice of fabrics. Pattern is used extensively for special interest, yet scale is delicate and retired, in keeping with quiet ornamentation of Indian rug.

The test of good furniture is its adaptability. With furnishings that do not bear the stamp of any historical period or current fad, your own personal environment can assert itself. Above, with an articulate painting by William Harris, ancient sculpture from the Far East, and other contemporary art, a distinctive environment is established by the owner's taste.

Oriental rug and possessions, mainly European in character, create an atmosphere of quiet, introspective dignity. Wall covering is gold and black tooled leather in keeping with the small-scaled texture and pattern in accessories and fabrics throughout the room. Furniture and fabrics in both rooms are from the new "Today and Tomorrow" collection by Dunbar.

We feel "related" to the Netherlands through Els, our blonde teen-age visitor who brought cheerful Dutch dutifulness and a welcome lack of sophistication into our American life. Her company —sharing customs and costumes, kitchen tasks, bicycling (there are nearly as many bicycles as people in Holland), and study—enriched the lives of our three youngsters while her own understanding of American life was broadened.

With a visiting foreign student

"Cultural Exchange" can begin at home —your home

By MARVA SHEARER

Taking a student into your own home as a part of your family circle is a way of strengthening international relations, a way that almost any family can manage. The resultant benefits from this "foreign exchange" are so numerous, enlightening, rewarding, and reciprocal that those of us who have tried it are sold on the idea.

The first sensible step is to have a clear and realistic notion of what it is you hope to achieve. If your goal is purely to welcome intelligent persons of different nationalities into your home to learn something of their ways and for them to learn more of ours, you won't be disappointed. If you're looking for inexpensive domestic help, if you're likely to begrudge the extra food or resent the loss of family privacy, if you hope to "sell" them on America, then the experiment is doomed to failure. But if you subscribe to this translation from Sanskrit: "Walk together, talk together, O ye peoples of the earth: Then and only then, shall ye have peace," the next step is to find a student to fit your family.

Fortunately, there are many avenues leading to one of these students. And the students as well as the avenues grow more numerous every year.

In our case, we met eighteen-year-old Els Nieuwenhuizen, our Dutch student, through a mutual friend. Els had relatives in our city. She had come to the United States with her parents to visit her relatives and only incidentally with the thought of finding a family she could live with for a year while she continued school.

We saw Els several times. It seemed to us that she would be a sunny, bright addition to our family. She visited our local high school, saw the room and bath she would share with our daughter, and agreed to help with certain chores about the house in exchange for a year in America.

We came to an understanding with very little deliberation. Later Els said that what had weighed her decision was the fact that she'd always longed for younger brothers and sisters. At home she is the youngest by sixteen years. On that light-hearted basis we began nine months of exchanging ideas, customs, friendship, and fun with a youngster from Enschede, Holland.

The New now-you-see-it now-you-don't Range

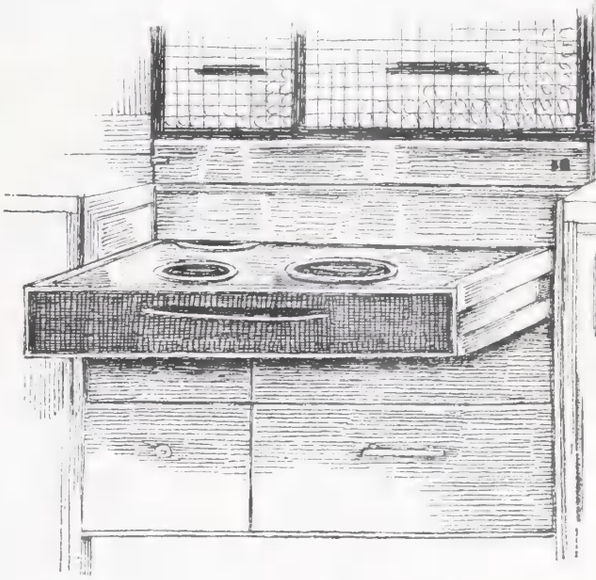
By NANCY CRAIG



A hideaway cook top has provided the first important change in kitchen range design since the currently popular counter-top range was introduced. Surface units of this new range pull out and lock into place for use, pushing back to disappear when cooking is completed, leaving a clean uncluttered work counter in their place. A working height several inches lower than the conventional range makes cooking much more comfortable.

Easy-to-see eye-level ovens and controls, accessible without stooping or bending (and chrome-lined to simplify cleaning), are also a part of the new combinations. Most exciting of all is the fact that these new ranges can fit into any kitchen, old or new, without the need for expensive carpentry or remodeling. Standing on their own base cabinets, ready-made to size, they are complete units to be placed anywhere within reach of fuel or power.

Oven doors that glide up and out of the way are an exclusive feature of this handsomely styled range which stands on 27″-high base cabinet (optional). Surface cook top, placed four inches lower than conventional range for more comfortable cooking, pulls out like a drawer, can be locked halfway out for two-burner use (see drawing). When not in use, units are concealed by hood that matches the clean lines of cabinetry, giving a true built-in look. Frigidaire 40″ Flair Custom Imperial electric range, $559.95; other models include 30″ range.

More news about ranges in a story on page 262.

This free-standing gas range has a built-in look, comes with optional base cabinet shown here. Its eye-level remote controls are the first to be used on any gas range. They are easily read and out of reach of small children. The large oven and adjoining broiler are at an ideal work height. Its surface work top has four stationary burners, one of which is thermostatically controlled. These hide beneath a cover that pulls out for extra work space during meal preparation. When not in use as a work top, it lifts up and back over burners. O'Keefe and Merritt "Contempo" gas range, about $589, without cabinet.

Is there a cold room

By JONATHAN ALEY

Are you paying for space that is just a little too uncomfortable for full-time use? Supplemental heating can make it livable, and a built-in electric unit is usually the best choice. They are economical to install, quick to respond, and easy to control. One of the many types will fit your situation

What are the cold rooms?

Bathrooms, which are often equipped with undersize heating units. Even if normally heated, they may need extra, fast-responding heat when you step out of a bath or shower.

Basements, when used as, or converted to, living space. They don't need so much heat, since the earth around them acts as insulation, but usually no provision is made for any in the original plan. It is often easier to add unit heat than tap the central system.

Lower levels in a split-level plan. Rooms on this level often suffer because the heat is introduced at the ceiling height. With slab floors right on the ground, they actually need extra heat to cut down the cool dampness.

Normally-heated rooms that serve as nurseries or as bedrooms for grandparents. These are classed as "cold" because they need more heat than the central system can provide.

Glass-walled rooms, particularly those facing south. Such rooms can be very hot on a sunny day, very chilly on cloudy ones. Central systems cannot be adjusted to these changes without making the room a separately controlled zone. A thermostatically-controlled heating unit provides the practical effect of zoning.

Underheated rooms, simply at the end of the heating line. No amount of balancing, or boosting of the central system seems to help.

Why is there always one room that never seems quite warm enough? Sometimes the pipes or ducts of the heating system are too small and can't deliver enough heat; in other cases, the room is at "the end of the line"—the temperature of the air in the ducts or the water in the pipes drops too low; in still others, you can't keep the room at an even temperature because its heating requirements are different from the rest of the house because of exposure or location. Whatever the cause, the room is just a little too cool for full-time use.

If you can't make these rooms comfortable by adding insulation and storm windows, if an expert heating contractor can't remedy the situation by adjusting the flow from your central heating system, your best cure is probably to add built-in supplemental electric heating. This heat, in the form of resistance ceiling cable or built-in floor, wall or ceiling units, is a far cry from the portable electric heater. It is a thermostat-controlled, quick-responding source of heat that becomes an inconspicuous and permanent part of the room. It can be installed for less money and with less mess than would be involved if you did a major remodeling of your present heating system. Even though electricity is usually a more expensive heat source than oil or gas, the cost can often be justified for its use as supplemental heating. First, you won't be using a great deal of electricity since you will be adding heat to rooms that are already heated; and second, you will save money by avoiding expensive major changes in your present heating system.

Most electric heating equipment produces both radiant and convected heat—some units more of one type than the other. Radiant heat is like the heat from an open fire or from the sun. It can warm your body even though the air around you is cold. Theoretically, it warms you only when you are directly in line with the source of radiation. Actually, the radiation bounces around the room and bounces back to you, even if a chair, drapery, or table comes between you and the radiant source. Heat from radiant sources is particularly useful where you want an immediate feeling of warmth, such as when you step out of a bath or shower.

Convection heating equipment warms the air and the air in turn keeps you warm. In electrical heating equipment, the air passes over or through heating coils (warm air rises) or air is forced over the heating elements by built-in circulating fans. The warmed air then mixes with the air in the room to keep the temperature at a comfortable level. With good air circulation, convected heat penetrates the whole room more fully than heat from a radiant source does.

Electric baseboard heating

Although baseboard units are the most expensive type of electrical heating equipment, they are excellent for use as supplemental heat sources. Since they mount on the surface of the wall, lower installation cost somewhat compensates # in your house?

for the higher equipment cost. Most baseboards deliver a mixture of radiant and convected heat. A few models produce most of their heat by convection and a few are primarily radiant in nature. One rather large baseboard unit includes a fan and produces forced circulation of the warm air; another heats a closed water system electrically.

Individual lengths of baseboard consume from 250 to 6,000 watts. Low wattage units are available for 120-volt operation, but, if much heat is required, 240-volt wiring is a must.

Sections of baseboard range in length from 2 to 10 feet and most are between 6 and 9 inches high. One baseboard is a bare 3⅜ inches high, and the forced air unit mentioned above is 13 inches high. Few project more than three inches into the room.

Units can be installed singly or strung together where more heat is required. Matching dummy sections can be used to create a continuous baseboard along the side of a room where only a few heating sections are needed. Since they are installed flat against the wall at floor level, they can be painted to match the wall above (or the trim in the room), making them virtually unnoticeable.

Although built-in thermostatic controls are available, more even room temperatures are insured by separate wall-mounted thermostats. All units have some safety devices to prevent over-heating, but extra protection is now given by a new feature called "continuous linear thermal safety control," offered by the best manufacturers.

Baseboards are usually installed along outside walls to supply heat where it does the most good in counteracting cold from outside. They can, of course, be installed anywhere except directly in front of sliding glass doors or glass walls that extend right down to the floor.

Wall-mounted units

A second common source of electric heat is the wall unit or wall panel. These range from small 12″ x 12″ built-in radiant bathroom heaters to 24″ x 48″ convectors resembling modern hot water convectors (radiators), and 78″-high wall furnaces.

There are radiant glass panels, glowing units with nichrome wire coils in front of polished reflectors, units with integral fans circulating warm air, and panel units decorated with plastic laminate or modern grille fronts. Capacities in this group range from 500 watts to 5,000 watts. Surface-mounted units rarely project more than 4″, and some can be fully recessed in the wall. Prices are somewhat lower than baseboard units of equal capacity but recessed heaters cost a little more to install because of the carpentry involved. Many units have built-in controls, although some can be connected to wall-mounted thermostats, which will control room temperature more accurately.

The primary advantage of wall heaters is that they occupy little space and can be placed in more varied locations than other types. Generally speaking, they may be compared to radiators in both how they are placed and how they function. Ideally they should be located below windows, as radiators, registers, or convectors are, but units with blowers can, where necessary, be placed anywhere in the room and still achieve good heat distribution. This type of heating unit is particularly well suited for a bathroom or kitchen where there is rarely enough unoccupied wall space to accommodate baseboard units. For the same reason blower types are good in rooms with large areas of floor-to-ceiling glass. However, these wall heaters are much more obvious than baseboard units or ceiling cable. And you cannot place them where furniture will block off the heat.

Ceiling-mounted units

Although ceiling-mounted unit heaters are most often used in bathrooms, they are equally good in kitchens or in other rooms with limited usable wall space. Many ceiling heaters are combined with a light or an exhaust fan. They can often be installed where a light was previously located, though the wiring load must be checked before doing this. Most units will heat and circulate room air, or, at another setting of the switch, operate as an exhaust fan without heating. Lights are usually separately controlled. A multiple-function unit of this type is usually lower in initial cost than separate units, takes up less space, and is cheaper to install than separate units, since only one set of wires is needed. Units come in all shapes and sizes. There are round and square flush-mounted heaters that recess into the ceiling; round, surface-mounted heaters that look like ceiling lighting fixtures; suspended units that resemble commercial fluorescent fixtures; and surface-mounted oblong panels.

Though most ceiling-mounted fan units supply convected heat, there are also radiant heaters without fans and at least one unit that uses infrared radiant bulbs as the heat source. Capacities of most units fall in a range from 750 watts to 1,500 watts.

Radiant ceiling panels

One manufacturer produces a thin flat radiant ceiling panel. At the moment only one size is available, but several other shapes and sizes are under development. The panel is about 2′ long, 4′ wide, and only $^{13}/_{16}$″ thick. It delivers 500 watts of fast responding radiant heat and is wired for either a 120-volt or 240-volt power supply. It can be mounted against any ceiling material or recessed into the ceiling. Its flat, steel outer surface can be painted to match the existing ceiling, making it almost invisible. It can be used anywhere in the house and makes a particularly good supplemental heating solution wherever wall or floor space prevents the use of other types of equipment—above floor-to-ceiling glass walls, for example. # Changing a "bought" house to fix its faults

Cut-away view of house shows basic relationship of main areas. Entry is on lower level with garage at its right, dining-family-kitchen area at left, and upper-level stairs next to door. Upper level has large living space (with cathedral ceiling) at top of stairs, with master bedroom projecting a corner into it. Laundry, other bedrooms, baths are also on this level.

Most of us cannot hope to find the "perfect" house. Cost considerations aside, there are just too many other factors influencing our choice—location, neighborhood, schools, amount of land, availability, etc. We often compromise on the house itself, often quite rightly, to satisfy our needs in other directions.

The compromise takes many forms. It may mean buying an older house, conceived to fit quite a different pattern of living. It may mean buying a brand new tract house, built to fit some developer's concept of the mythical "average family." Or it may mean buying a house with serious, recognizable faults. Such a house can be of any age, for newness in itself is not a particular virtue and does not insure excellence.

The four-year-old contemporary shown on these ten pages was such a house, and in accepting its faults the new owners faced up to the necessity of fixing them before the house would be "right." Though it may never be perfect, the house has become—through remodeling, redecoration, and skillful furnishing—a unified, graceful, and quite workable home.

The house had three basic faults: an impractical floor plan; service areas—kitchen, bathrooms, laundry—that were poorly planned, equipped, and finished; and a lack of overall unity and grace.

The floor-plan problem was serious. For a house its size (approximately 2,000 square feet, not counting the enclosed garage), it made surprisingly poor use of the space. "Open planning" on both floors gave little privacy. There was no place where the six members of the new family could get away from each other—no playroom. (Please turn to page 213)

To add privacy and softness to this high-ceiling, open living room, a projecting ledge was built between the lower windows and the glass gable and continued around two other walls of the room. Curtain tracks are installed on the underside, solving a difficult drapery problem and bringing horizontal emphasis to the room. Draperies now hang in an unbroken band around three sides of the room, even over solid corners.

All fabrics throughout this house contain Celanese fibers. For the names of companies manufacturing products seen throughout the house, see pages 234-245.

Skillful furnishing lets this oversize room perform four different functions smoothly

A large living room is the goal of many homeowners, but beyond a certain point, bigness in a room can be a handicap. In this house, with no study, no quiet retreat, the 28′ × 16′ living space posed a problem. But careful furnishing created four distinctly separate use areas for functions not provided elsewhere in the house. The main conversation grouping (above) is isolated from all through traffic. Low bench provides extra seating without turning focus away from the featured view into the treetops outside. Restrained drapery and furniture fabrics (right) in green and gold harmonize with wood and color of furniture and with outdoor scene. Fabrics are different blends of cotton, rayon, and nylon. Varying amounts of acetate yarns have been added to each fabric to give a restrained but elegant gleam.

Adult suppers are served at this round table, located next to main conversation area, when children have taken over downstairs family-dining-TV room (shown further on). Grouping also serves as game table or, by shifting table and chairs, as an additional conversation area or buffet for large-scale entertaining.

Third use area, a place for quiet reading, is created by chair and lamp at window. A good decorating solution to the corner problem common in L-shaped living-dining rooms is achieved by continuing low cabinets and kakemono (wall hangings) around the corner. This expands the room visually into the adjacent hallway. A home office, the fourth function, was created with desk, chair, and storage cabinets (behind camera in this picture).

Four bedrooms
—each now has a distinct character of its own

Master suite seemed smaller than it actually was because poor planning brought chimney through middle of room (see plan), reducing "bedroom" to 10′ x 12′. New drapery treatment, making the whole wall a single plane of fabric, ties dressing alcove to sleeping area, making both seem more spacious. Draperies are hung from corner to corner (see plan), beyond the window frame itself. Plastic fortified cork tile (at left above) was chosen to create a feeling of richness in what is basically an ordinary room.

At left, new plastic-laminate-covered vanity counter extends out beyond and beside chimney to form a really usable counter where only a lavatory had existed before (below). New oval stainless steel lavatory bowl and single lever faucet further conserve available space. Partition behind counter was transformed into deep storage space, accessible from both sides. To soften unfinished quality of brick chimney, half of it (facing wardrobe) was covered with mirror, which serves to widen room, too.

BEFORE

Touch of glamour was added to the nine-year-old daughter's room by the selection of a gold-flecked, white translucent vinyl tile flooring. Sheer patterned curtains, quilted bedspread, and pleated bedskirt are feminine in tone, yet are not "little girl" and will continue to be suitable as she grows into the teen-ages.

Cheerful playroom-bedroom was furnished with materials that would withstand the activities of two small boys. Vinyl-asbestos floor tile has a spill-masking pattern, requires no waxing or polishing. Play table, bench (which doubles as a toy chest), and bank of shelves are all ready-made units. Bright curtains keep the room "sunny" even on dreary days.

Den-like quality characterizes the twelve-year-old boy's room, stamps it as a private world of his own. With the same paint color on walls, ceiling, and trim throughout the house, the vinyl plank flooring in wood-tones was the key to this scheme. Boat-covered bulletin board, a stock item, is hung here in perfect alignment with window frame. It takes advantage of a corner that would be difficult to furnish, making it an important feature of the room. Twin-size bed with ready-made bolsters, spread, and throw-pillows also serves as a couch during the day.

BEFORE

Original kitchen was like an apartment kitchenette, completely inadequate for a house occupied by a family of six. To gain space without reducing the size of the dining-family room, the entire rear wall was pushed out three feet to align with wall of overhanging second floor. This added more than 40 square feet to kitchen but without the cost of building a new room. Increased depth of kitchen can be judged by locating heavy ceiling beam in each picture (above and left).

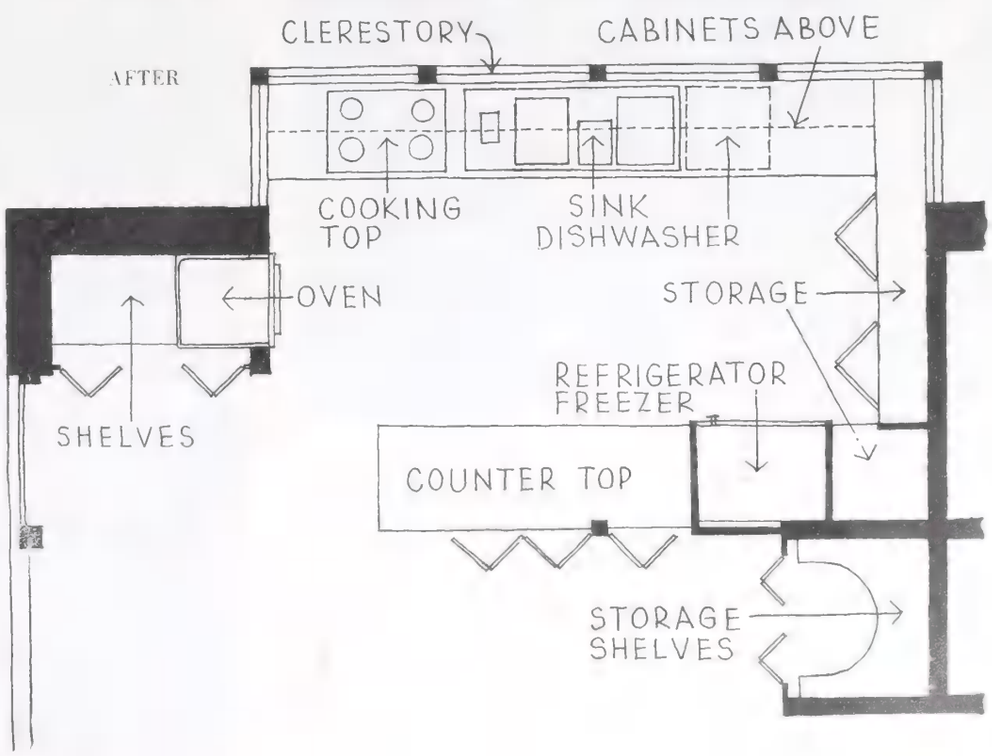
AFTER ←

and no den. Since it was impossible to divide the existing space with solid partitions in any sensible way, a different approach was needed.

Folding-sliding wood doors now divide the kitchen-dining-family-room complex into two areas. When the doors are open, the two rooms function as one; when they are closed, the kitchen is largely hidden. Upstairs, the barn-like living room was brought down to human scale by installing a ledge below the triangular glass gable and extending it along the side walls. Continuous curtains and draperies were hung around all three sides of the room. Furniture divides the room into four use-areas which can function more or less independently of each other or can be used together for large-scale entertaining. There is a major conversation grouping, a game table where adult suppers may also be served, a quiet reading corner, and a work area for transacting family business.

Furnishing and decorating, attuned to the occupants, established a distinct character in each of the bedrooms. Making each room a pleasant retreat rather than a small sleeping cell brought them into use in the daytime as well as in the evening.



The problem of the service areas called for a more drastic solution. The apartment-type kitchen was far too small for a family of six; the bathrooms were badly arranged, having tiny counters and no storage space; and the laundry equipment, though conveniently located in the bedroom wing, projected unattractively into the hall and could even be seen from the living room. (Please turn the page)

BEFORE

In original version, all kitchen work was visible from dining-family room with no way to hide the process of meal preparation. One-wall counter lacked both work and storage facilities. Added space provided far more storage, larger work counters, more equipment, and a way to achieve separation from dining-family room (with folding doors on a track). Refrigerator was moved into kitchen and its old niche made into storage space. Sink, cooking top, and refrigerator-freezer form step-saving work triangle, shorter than in smaller original kitchen.

AFTER

Because this kitchen is often left exposed to the dining-family room, it was decorated and equipped in a non-kitcheny way, with design standards usually applied to a living room. Yellow marbleized vinyl-asbestos tile integrates the two areas and adds a pleasant warmth, but can withstand hard treatment. High-style off-the-floor cabinets have a rich walnut finish and look more like furniture than work units. They would be completely at home in any part of the house. All the accessories and equipment seen here were chosen with as much thought to their beauty as to their usefulness.

Open doors show how counter and cart can be used for organizing and delivering meals to dining table. Brick-walled closet at far end of kitchen was used as recess for new wall oven. Decorative molds were hung to relieve starkness. Closet beyond stores children's coats, boots, seasonal athletic equipment. Bamboo-blind-covered door leads out to play area. Compare location of post against near counter with post in "before" on previous page to see how much space was added.

For more formal entertaining, kitchen can be closed off by folding doors made of same beautifully finished wood as cabinets. Dining area is defined by round fiber rug. Table opens to 96" with center leaf, will serve 8 people comfortably.

Old refrigerator recess, at one side of the kitchen, was converted to storage for "good china" and seldom-used serving dishes. By cutting curves in shelf fronts, with each shelf cut out a little deeper than the shelf below it, all items are easily seen (with light from above) and fully accessible.

By pushing out one wall of the house, the kitchen was enlarged 40 square feet without stealing any space from the dining-family room (see the plans on the previous page to see what was actually done). An entirely new U-shaped kitchen replaced the inadequate old one-wall work space. There is more equipment, more storage space, and more counter space. Furniture-like cabinets, colorful accessories, and decorative utensils give the kitchen a living-room quality that almost belies its efficiency.

New storage counters, cabinets, space-saving bowls, and mirrors made attractive combination vanity-lavatories where only wash bowls had been—an essential change since both of these washing areas were exposed, one in the master suite and the other in the bedroom hall.

The laundry equipment was hidden by designing a barely perceptible projecting framework on which folding doors could be hung. New stack-on washer and dryer saved enough space so that really adequate linen storage could be built into the existing laundry-closet.

How to unify the house was the third problem. The remodeling already described did much to improve the situation: complete repainting and new flooring did the rest.

The inside of the house had been painted many different colors—a patchwork quilt that broke the whole into many small parts. This compounded the difficulties of an open-plan house. Walls, trim, beams, and (Please turn to page 234)

The site, about 80 feet wide at the street, narrows to 50 feet at the shore line. The only asset was the view across the harbor. Otherwise it was desirable to screen out the immediate surroundings (at one side is a navy storage yard) and to create within the walls an environment directed, as a kind of build-up, toward making the most of this one asset.

How they turned a poor site into a perfect one

They Built the Right House

By CURTIS BESINGER

This house breathes life into an old platitude: Make the most of what is good and minimize what is bad. It also has an answer for persons who cannot seem to find the "perfect" site on which to build a house.

The site which Mr. and Mrs. Lucian Small owned had one major asset: It was on the bay and had a marvelous view of the harbor. Mr. Small, who loves the sea and the activity around and about it, is a commissioner of San Diego harbor and wanted to live near the bay where he could enjoy its stimulating sights and sounds.

But, except for this one asset, their site was not ideal. It was small. It tapered from a width of about eighty feet near the street to only fifty feet at the water front. None of the sides were parallel. It had a set-back restriction requiring that if a wall were six feet high, it must be five feet from the property line. It was surrounded on three sides by the unsightliness that our civilization knows how to create, including a naval dump (a storage yard). These were not things to look out on. The conditions presented a problem not easily solved.

Their problem was solved for them by Robert Mosher, an architect who accepted the limitations of the site not as a hindrance but as a starting point for the design. He planned a house that screens out the immediate surroundings so that the harbor view is seen from within and in an architectural frame that augments it instead of diminishing it. It is seen, after a carefully prepared build-up, as a treasure finally revealed. What might have been liabilities, the walls on both sides of the lot (Please turn the page)

The covered entrance walk (a 96-foot-long vista) begins as a portico at the left of the motor court (top photo) and leads into a cloistered entrance garden (above). This is a complete change from the jumbled environment around the house and one of the pleasant events by which a person is introduced to the house. The rhythm of the piers of the walkway and the skylights overhead contribute to the processional quality of the entrance. From this garden one turns right and passes through the front doors into an entrance loggia that has the same rhythmic and eventful quality (photo opposite).

The house is planned as a kind of progression, pleasantly interrupted at intervals, leading up to the final revelation of the site's best feature, the delightful view of the harbor. There is a processional quality, similar to that of a colonade, in the covered entrance walk. The entrance loggia (below) has this same quality. Movement into the house is marked by pleasant events at several points: the entrance terrace; the turn into the entrance loggia with the possibility of a view into the bedroom court; and after the loggia the final turn into either the living room or the sitting room where the full pageant of the harbor's activity is finally revealed.

ALL PHOTOGRAPHS BY MAYNARD PARKER

The wall elements of entrance loggia are used in varied combinations. Here wood grilles are in place and panels closed.

To permit breezes to blow through but to keep garden court somewhat private, the translucent plastic panels are opened.

To permit direct entrance to the court from the entrance loggia or to give a view into the court, wood grilles are removed.

The kitchen-sitting room, related in spirit but not in form to an old-style family kitchen, was placed to capitalize on the harbor view. The low dining table and comfortable chairs contribute to the atmosphere of relaxation found in the room. The table and chairs in the living room are similar. Both are used together in either room to serve large groups.

A limited palette of materials and colors gives unity and a feeling of quality to the house. Earthy colors were used and are echoed in the black, brown, and orange of the custom-woven living-room carpet. Low dining chairs are upholstered in an orange fabric. Cork floors are shades of brown. Ornamental molding, machine-made, highlights shelves, counters.

help to form two charming events—the entrance garden and the private terrace adjoining the bedrooms—in the sequence of happenings building up to the view.

The arriving guest moves from the motor court, down the processional of the covered walk into the cloistered entrance garden. From this he enters into the calm and dignified loggia. The translucent and grille-covered walls of the loggia intimate that something interesting, although perhaps unseen, is on the other side. After passing down the loggia he turns finally into either the living room or the sitting room where the panorama of the harbor in all its splendor is displayed.

Here, near the harbor, are the rooms in which the Smalls spend the greater part of their waking hours. The sitting room is combined with the kitchen and recaptures the spirit, but not the appearance, of the family kitchen of former times. The cooking activities are concentrated in a U-shaped working area that is separated from the sitting area by a counter-height cabinet with open shelves above. Mrs. Small, an excellent cook, can prepare a meal here while Mr. Small, his business day finished, relaxes nearby.

From the sitting area, which serves (Please turn the page)

View of the built-in bar, opened for use. It is seen closed at the right of the bookshelves in opposite photo. A small sink is at right side of counter. Storage for liquor is in lower cabinets. Notice how the built-in lights of bookshelf recess, similar to light deck, are continued into the top of cabinet.

The open cabinet plus the lower angle of view, which result from using the low dining table and chairs, permit meal preparation to proceed out of sight and yet allow Mrs. Small to take part in pre-dinner sociability with husband or their guests. Service cart rolls into living room or out to deck.

The plan of the compact kitchen and adjoining sitting room shows how they were designed to be used together and to take full advantage of the view of the ever-changing harbor scene. Mr. Small can enjoy his drink while watching passing ships as Mrs. Small prepares a meal for both of them or a group of friends.

View of cabinet, separating kitchen and sitting room, as it is seen from kitchen. Compare this with the views of living room on following pages to see consistent use of the module, materials, and details throughout house. Note how vent hood over range is incorporated into light deck above cabinets.

View of living room as seen when walking into the room from the entrance loggia. The light deck overhead works as a part of the transition from the loggia to the living room. A contraction of space at this point means that as you walk into the living room you feel a kind of release, a sense of expansion because of increased width and height of the room.

as a den or study for him, Mr. Small can watch the passing parade of sea-going craft. Every boat that enters or leaves San Diego harbor passes this point: aircraft carriers, cruisers, submarines, yachts, rowboats, etc.

When they are entertaining, their friends gather here and on the outside deck, if weather permits, before the meal is served. Mrs. Small can be a part of the occasion and complete the meal at the same time. The sitting room is joined to the more formal living room by the deck and the entrance loggia, as well as through the kitchen. These areas can all be used easily as one. Meals may be served in the sitting room, in the living room, or on the terrace.

The sitting room and the living room are furnished, in part, with a similar set of low dining tables and chairs that are designed for use in both living and dining spaces. These can be placed together for serving sit-down dinners for eight or ten guests.

Although this would not be called a formal house—it is not symmetrical in design—it does have formal qualities about it. There is a strong sense of order and organization in it. It did not, like Topsy, just grow. This quality itself comes from limitations. But they are of another kind, disciplines imposed by the architect upon himself as he approached the design process. (Please turn to page 246)

This view toward San Diego is seen through the living-room doors opening to terrace. The low octagonal table and the chairs around it are the same as those in the sitting room, so, although there is no formal dining room, a sit-down dinner can be served to eight or more guests. Note the light deck over doors, a design element used consistently in house.

The fireplace area in the living room as seen from the seating area opposite and near the sliding doors to the terrace (lower photo on opposite page). The fireplace is surrounded by black marble with a honed finish. The wood battens on the ceiling emphasize its form and structure and are placed on the lines of the module, the rhythmic unit of measure upon which the house was designed. Note that the roofs and ceilings conform to each other in shape and that the peak, where light comes in, is a feature characteristic of both the interior and the exterior. (See this also in the photographs of the exterior.)

The impact of this collection of opaline does far more than create a colorful wall in a hall. Its pieces will find their way into countless memorable table settings.

Collecting—with a purpose

Collect things that can perform and enrich daily life

BY LAURA TANNER

Most of us have at least some of the magpie's instinct for collecting. Some have it more than others, and some put it to better use than others.

Collecting things that contribute something to the quality of daily life seems to us a proper goal, and makes a collection more than a dust-catcher and space-consumer.

One category of collecting that has tremendous rewards in enriching daily living is the collecting of appointments useful in the creating of table settings. We eat three meals a day, and at least one of those meals should be exciting and interesting —gastronomically and visually. You can make it visually interesting only if you have a wardrobe of table appointments that has character and diversity. But when you have built such a table-setting wardrobe, you can indulge in the most amusing creative playfulness.

Anybody can do it. It takes no special talents, no acquired knacks. It can be done by anyone with eyes in her head and enough interest to carry a kind of mental inventory of what she owns.

One of the most avid collectors of our times is Helena Rubinstein. In the area of table appointments she could be said to be a "big-time" collector, for she owns enough types and colors of things so that she could create several thousand different table settings before she would have to repeat. Of course, she has many residences and must entertain as many as 30 or 35 people at sit-down dinners, which increases her requirements.

She has built her collecting around colors. She can set a table in all-blue, all-pink, all-orange, all-yellow, all-white, all-amethyst, all-gold—to name just a few of her color families.

She wouldn't. It would be too dull and obvious. But it gives you some idea of the color range among her possessions. Since her color sense is quite sophisticated (Please turn to page 227)

Floral-patterned china permits many presentations, depending on the color one wants to stress. Here, palest pink opaline adds delicacy to the china, plays back the pink notes in chair cover. To change the mood, blue opaline could have been used, or green Bristol goblets would place the accent on the foliage tones. Basic china, "Devon Sprays," is by Wedgwood. Silverware, called "Silver Sculpture," is made by Reed and Barton.

PHOTOGRAPHS BY VINCENT LISANTI

When one is blessed with a glassware collection in lovely shapes and hues, infinite effects can be achieved. Here the fire of ruby glass enlivens the blush tones of opaline, echoes the warmth of the velvet chair covers. Note how many of the table appointments are repeated on the table opposite—the gold-washed silver, the centerpiece, the candlesticks, and the cloth—yet how greatly the mood of the tables differs. This is a virtue that derives from owning a bountiful and flexible collection.

Here the setting has formal elegance. The cloth and napkins are of sheerest organdy, lace-trimmed. Gold plate and antique vermeil silver suggest grandeur and compliment the most distinguished guests. Fragile pink opaline is the merest color in candlelight, yet exquisite. One senses the excellence of the repast to come, served, as it will be, on different china for each succeeding course. Perhaps one will be French porcelain, banded with gold and pink; amythest glass may present the dessert.

This table glows with the fresh charm of spring. The vivid slipcover with its sprays of bright flowers is set off by the uncovered white table, French china, and antique milk-glass. The touch of gold in the antique vermeil together with the simplicity of field flowers is delightful and quite unexpected. "Copper Rose" Limoges china is from A. Raynaud & Cie. Fine linen and organdy appliqué napkin is from D. Porthault.

In still another mood, with plates of a patterned Hong Kong porcelain, a table in greens has been assembled from the treasures of the Rubinstein collection. There is always a glass that consorts amiably with the choice of china, whatever it is. Here, antique Bristol with gold decoration plays the important role. Candlesticks have the same rich tones. All candles, Will and Baumer. Silverware, "Cynthia," is made by Samuel Kirk & Son.

This is the vast pantry where much of the Rubinstein china, glass, and silver is stored. Each cupboard holds its own kind, all arranged with safe space for handling. This is very important where glassware is concerned. Some of the lower cupboards are used for linens, as well as the storing of large silver hollow-ware pieces. Note the ladder that travels on track to reach the upper shelves. All cases can be locked. Photo below shows additional cupboard space available in the kitchen.

and daring, she whips up some really electric combinations out of her basic color wardrobes.

One of her most borrowable ideas is the changeable slipcover for dining chairs. Her chairs are upholstered in muslin, the better to receive slipcovers that fit like a glove. All relate to some color family of serving necessities, which reside in her cupboards and shelves. Most of the slipcovers can be mated to several table-setting color schemes, so she gets multiple mileage out of each set. And they play the valuable role of knitting together the components used on the table into an agreeable whole.

Mind you, this slipcover legerdemain is not the usual winter-to-summer shift. The slipcovers change just as one would change the tablecloth or the mats. The most-used slipcovers on the high-back chairs are cherry-colored velvet, which play a supporting role for many schemes, especially in winter. In addition to these there is a set of plain green polished cotton and two sets of florals—one with field flowers in many colors and another with white and orange tulips on a brilliant orange ground.

Madame Rubinstein states her own philosophy about all this very well. "One may have beautiful things, but if they are used in a stuffy, unimaginative way, their beauty is dimmed and even spoiled. I use my things. I shift them about. I combine them in completely unexpected, unorthodox ways. I put things to uses they were not intended for. I strive for both elegance and wit. I try to be imaginative about what can go with what. Using my possessions this way gives me much pleasure."

This policy must give her guests much pleasure too, as the picture on these pages would indicate. For each is a little masterpiece of a composition. It is a pleasure accessible to all of us, regardless of budget, if we would give more thought to our purchases and the daily table setting.

Why is Hong Kong today's

most exciting travel adventure?

Hong Kong's vivid harbor of Aberdeen is home to thousands of Chinese who live on the junks and sampans that pack every inch of the water. Here are the famous, if not too gourmet, floating restaurants. Out of this harbor you can sail past misty mountains and templed islands into the China Sea.

It's the last bit of China you can visit —a teeming kaleidoscope of the delights, the poignancies, and the paradoxes of the world we live in—and on every level of a traveler's interests, the most fascinating place you can visit today

By PEGGY DURDIN

The little British Crown Colony of Hong Kong, perched on the southernmost tip of China, is the greatest non-Communist Chinese city left in the world. It is the last outpost of traditional "Chinese-ness," with its virtues and faults, its teeming, colorful strangeness. And if this were all that Hong Kong offered, it would be magnet enough.

But to a sensitive traveler from the West, the surface novelty of tasting something of the mysterious East is only one small part of the deep and varied experience that Hong Kong opens up to its visitors. It is a place that evokes every emotion from pure joy to heartbreak. Nowhere can you see more clearly the problems of our troubled world. And in few places can you find more of its beauty and richness. It is crammed with pleasures and sybaritic delights. Of these shopping is the most famous.

Tourists—both men and women—describe Hong Kong as the biggest bargain counter in the world. The city's deft-fingered Chinese, often packed in tiny rooms under only a glimmer of light or simply crouched on sidewalks, patiently embroider, stitch, carve, join, and polish, making everything from rattan monkeys and plastic tulips to intricately beaded ball gowns, great teakwood sea-going junks, and exact copies of the Ming Dynasty's clean-lined furniture.

And since this is a free port, some goods cost even less than in their country of origin. Shops overflow with the finest textiles of Europe and Japan, ancient Buddha heads, lustrous Mikimoto pearls, German and Japanese tape recorders and cameras, Mongolian and Tibetan silver, Indian saris transparent as spider webs and weighted with bands of gold, silks alive and vibrant with color, hand-loomed in Thailand.

But even to the traveler who comes solely to rush between shops and tailors' fittings, Hong Kong makes a gift of natural beauty so great that it permanently ensnares the heart and almost paralyzes those addicted to photography.

Like a pair of Chinese Shan Shui (land and water or landscape) scrolls, there are two parts to the British Colony. Hong Kong or, properly, Victoria, is 29 miles of rocky island pushing almost straight up from blue, gray, and violet seas. The island's cliffs are lush and green, embroidered in spring with flowering bush and tree, with tall white "luxury" apartment buildings jutting improbably from steep slopes.

The other half of Hong Kong is (Please turn to page 275)

The key to my use of the refrigerator is how I put things away. Left, you can see how many heavy, tightly-covered containers I use for my prepared foods and leftovers. Below are my salad-makings as they come from the refrigerator. Greens are in plastic bags, inside which are towels to absorb the moisture from the washed greens. This prevents the rotting that occurs when the greens stand in the draining of the washing water.

How I run my refrigerator

By VIRGINIA STANTON

House Beautiful's Party Editor uses her refrigerator to help her in cooking rather than to prevent food spoilage. There is a world of difference

Do you take your refrigerator for granted? Is it there for your convenience—a "keeping box" for your health's sake, so that your food won't spoil? This approach to cold storage is not for me. I consider my refrigerator as a "treasure chest"—with all sorts of goodies stored therein to keep my menus going. In other words, it is a "cold pantry" and holds everything from soup to nuts (yes, literally, nuts!).

Most gals who come to see me are interested in my clothing storage. I am sure most of you give a lot of time and study to keeping up your wardrobe, your shoes and sweater shelves. But do you give the same consideration to your ice box?

I have peered into hundreds of ice boxes around the country, and what do I find? The same helter-skelter storage, with remnants of food stuck hurriedly away and then forgotten. From gourmet with a reputation to young bride with none, the refrigerator is in the same open-faced mess.

This leads me to believe that most people have not caught onto the fact that you can conjure up a delicious dish from "leftovers." Even the amateur chef is interested in creating a gourmet dish out of only new products. Probably this has all been handed down to us from our grandparents who considered leftovers as "scraps"—something you give to itinerant tramps. Or maybe it's because we were taught to clean up our plates so completely that there was never anything left but scraps.

Please toss this thinking out of the window and come with me into a creative world of previously cooked food items.

Careful storage in the refrigerator is of paramount importance. You cannot keep foods, fresh or cooked, at their peak in uncovered containers. (Please turn to page 259)

THE VIOLA DA GAMBA COMES BACK

with a daub of cement after positioning.

The viol is lighter in weight than the violin. Its fingerboard is different, being wider to accommodate the six strings but having a flatter neck to facilitate fingering.

Our own gamba is about as big as a three-quarter-size cello and is made of amber-colored maple and spruce with rosewood fingerboard, tailpiece, pegs, and other fittings. On this particular instrument, as on many of them, in addition to the sound holes there is a beautifully cut "rose" in the belly just under the end of the fingerboard.

THE viola da gamba has a sweet, pure tone. Nicholas Bessaraboff, authority on ancient musical instruments, describes its characteristic tone color as "resonant, pleasant, distinct from the tone color of the violin family . . . (with) less of the crystalline brillancy of the violins . . . reedy, not devoid of melancholy yet noble and dignified. Viols sound more poised, less nervous than violins." (See next page for recordings of viola da gamba.)

Thomas Mace, writing in the 17th Century, said that the viols are "so suitable and agreeing to the inward, secret, and intellectual faculties of the soul and mind, that to set them forth, according to their true praise, there are no words sufficient in language; yet what I can best speak of them, shall be only to say that they have been to myself, (and many others) as divine raptures, powerfully captivating all our unruly faculties and affections (for the time) and disposing us to solidity, gravity, and a good tempre; making us capable of heavenly and divine influences."

Viols are particularly appropriate for music with many voices, because their tone is not so brilliant that the over-all effect would be too overpowering, yet they are edgy enough so that each part is heard clearly.

Viol players can be heard in concert today, playing as part of other groups such as the New York Pro Musica Antiqua.

The most often used viola da gamba today is the string bass of the symphony orchestra. Coarsened and altered, it is, however, a direct descendant of the viol family and is still called the "bass viol." Today, it has heavier strings for more power; the frets are gone; and there are only four, or sometimes five, strings. But much of the construction is of the viol type and in some cases the bass viol player still uses the traditional viol method of bowing underhand.

The technique of playing viols is similar in some ways to violin technique. The instruments are usually bowed but sometimes pizzicato (plucking strings) is used.

The bow is held (see pictures on pages 194-195) with the hand under the bow and the attack is made with the tip of the bow.

To facilitate good technique, the frets must be placed correctly. If they are tied around the neck tightly and correctly, they do not move during performance. Size and tension of strings, of course, will affect the tone and must be properly chosen. Musicians should be careful not to pick up a viol and attempt to play it with the technique used by the modern string player. Just as a pianist cannot automatically go to the pipe organ console and bring forth finished sounds, the violinist cannot superimpose his technique on a viola da gamba. In fact, a modern guitarist would be a more logical choice for a modern viol player, from the standpoint of technique.

Probably the most famous composer for the viol, as well as for the keyboard was Orlando Gibbons, who lived in the 16th Century. He was a giant among composers from the standpoint of quality as well as quantity and is known to have written at least 40 fantasies for strings, of which nine were published before his death in 1625. Other important viol composers were Giovanni Coperario, John Jenkins, Monteverdi, and William Lawes.

THE SUBTLE relaxation of music-making on the viols would be a welcome interlude in our hurried and harried high-tensioned lives. Today's amateur who wishes to play a stringed instrument, but whose time does not allow the supreme effort of perfecting violin technique, can order and get a viola da gamba in less time than it takes to obtain a good violin, and with less money. Viol makers in Europe and America are ready to supply viols of quality for $150 and up. One can buy a beginner's book and with a minimum of practice and a maximum of interest, can teach himself to play.

To imagine that one might pick up a telephone and invite five fellow violists over for an evening of Gibbons fantasies for six viols is to stretch the imagination a little, but perhaps (who can say?) the future will bring exactly this.

other surfaces were often painted different colors. Moldings were sometimes stained, sometimes painted. In the lower level, three adjacent doors were each painted a bright, strongly contrasting color. Instead of unifying the space, these strong divisions merely emphasized the differences.

Dramatic new unity resulted when everything on both levels—walls, ceilings, beams, doors, trim—was painted the same warm, putty-like color. Color-matched exterior paints allowed painting the exposed underside of the roof the same color as the interior surfaces. This continuity visually extended the ceiling to the outer edges of the eaves. The exposed beams were handled in the same way. This single-color approach to the basic background areas played a big part in creating the now-serene interiors.

The second major change was to re-tile all the floors. This was partly decorative, partly practical necessity. In most of the house the previous tile had been so poorly installed and so badly cared for that it was peeling and discolored. Since it all had to be replaced, the owners decided that the floor would establish the major color character of each room or area (remember that the walls and ceilings were all the same color). The type of tile chosen for each area was decided by the kind of wear it had to withstand and its "feel" under foot.

All the furnishings for the house were chosen in much the same way—with one eye on how it would fit the mood of the room and the other on how it would withstand the wear of a four-child family. All are medium-priced and available in department or furnitures stores.

Children's lavatory, squeezed into niche in bedroom hall, was another major mistake in plan of house. Exposed pipes gave it an unfinished look, and there was no door to hide it from the hall. In remodeling, wall at left was cut back one foot and a new curved counter built diagonally across the corner to give the best combination of counter space and standing room. New woven wood door slides on curved track for privacy when wanted—though in remodeling, the lavatory became a pleasure to see.

When over-draperies are drawn, the room's focus is turned in. This establishes an intimacy not possible when the view is revealed, and the natural scene draws interest outward.

FOUR PHOTOGRAPHS BY VINCENT LISANTI

Continuous drapery hardware hung below new ledge, allows use of either draperies or curtains in small rhythmic units. Because tree shields glass from possible sky-glare, entire gable top can be left uncurtained and is never blindingly bright.

For privacy during the day translucent under-curtains can be closed without making room dismally dark. In winter, draperies prevent feeling of "radiant cold" common to glass walls.

Upstairs laundry squeezed into a too-shallow space, was so poorly planned that equipment stuck out into hall (left). Since location was convenient—in bedroom-bath area where soiled laundry accumulates—owners worked out an amenable solution in same location. New stacked washer and dryer permitted development of useful linen storage space. They are set flush against rear wall of the niche and can be hidden from view by accordion doors.

In the motor court the beginning of the covered walk forms an entrance portico where a guest may alight from his car under shelter. The skylight pattern, seen in the lower photo, is terminated near the street by an accent, a cluster of openings, left of photo. Note precast concrete bases of wood posts.

For example, a limited palette of materials and architectural elements is used. In architecture, as in dress, this element of restraint achieves a certain simplicity and dignity.

The design is also based upon a module or a repeated unit of measure. In this instance it is 2′ 8″. The dimensions of all parts of the building are determined by it: the sizes of rooms, the spacing of the battens on the ceilings, the panels in the lighting decks, the rhythm of the piers in the covered walkway, etc. This basic unit does much to give unity to the design and to establish the rhythmic, processional quality of it. This is the quality of movement which one enjoys in a colonnade or in any kind of order.

But the particular quality of this house that will supply an answer to those persons looking for building sites and finding only those having no outlook is that it is not dependent upon an outlook.

Court-like private terrace, as seen when looking toward the bedroom wing from the sliding door opening to the living room. This kind of sunny pocket would make a useful living area the year-around in less mild climates. Planting, except for strip near wall, is in movable containers and can be rearranged as desired. Note the nice detailing of air venting at edge of the overhanging roof.

The harbor-side deck of this house could be another charming walled garden and the house would be as effective. The build-up does not necessarily have to lead to a dramatic view, but it should not be a build-up to a let-down.

This house is not visually dependent upon the external environment either to look at or to be seen from. The effects of this house are not external: they are internal. A series of delightful spaces, both indoors and out, are self-contained within the boundaries of the house.

In plan the house is divided into three pavilions marked by the higher and peaked roofs that are connected by the lower roofs. The first of these is the garage and guest pavilion. The second is the master bedroom complex of sleeping rooms, dressing rooms, and baths. The third, joined to the second by the entrance loggia, is the pavilion containing the living room and the sitting-room kitchen.

These three functional elements are so placed upon the site that private courtyards, outdoor rooms, in effect, are created. These courtyards provide an outlook for interior spaces and are always under the owner's control. They may be used for many purposes.

Mrs. Small's bedroom, as seen from the door to hall, opens with sliding glass doors to an adjoining private terrace. Although different wall and ceiling finishes are used in this room, it is harmonious in character and in detail with the rest of the house. Note the built-in lights over the desk and shelves.

PERMANENTLY MOTHPROOFED
FOREVER

Drewclad is the modern miracle process that permanently mothproofs wool as it is made at the mill. Wherever you look this year, you'll find this big extra dividend in luxurious wanted wool. You'll see the Drewclad tag or "permanently mothproofed" label (if you don't see it, ask!) on the latest fashions for men and women, boys and girls; on wool carpets made by all the names you know in rugs; on classics and contemporaries in knitwear, blankets . . . so many best buys in wool. Drewclad is the only permanent mothproofer guaranteed* for the life of the wool on which it is used. Drewclad wool need never be stored! Look for Drewclad wool . . . happiest choice this or any season.

TWO PHOTOGRAPHS BY MAYNARD PARKER

Dressing table in the dressing room of the master suite. The back of niche, above counter with built-in lavatory, is a mirror reflecting view of court outside bedroom and adding visual space to room. Incandescent lights above translucent plastic panels provide diffuse illumination for dressing. Mirrored doors at each corner open to separate compartments for tub and water closet. Other walls are the doors of wardrobes.

The courts may be paved, gravelled, or planted in grass. They might have a small pool—or be all pool. The planting may be movable or permanent. It may be sparse or profuse. The results that may be achieved within these courts are seemingly unlimited in number.

As more desirable sites become fewer in number, houses like this one will show us one way to make the most of our limitations.

CONSTRUCTION DETAILS

All interior living spaces of this wood-framed house are built over crawl space. Footings and foundations are poured reinforced concrete. Poured reinforced concrete exterior slabs are integrally colored and have lines scored to form a grid of 32″ x 64″ rectangles, the basic module used in the house.

Exterior walls and trim are clear heartwood redwood with resawn faces, nailed with aluminum nails. Red cedar shingle roof has decorative redwood ridges. Interior and exterior flush doors are Philippine mahogany. Except as noted below, all glazing of doors and windows is with ¼″ polished plate glass. Interior trim is clear vertical-grain heartwood redwood.

Music alcove (shown open in photo below) is concealed behind flush-panel folding doors at left side of living-room fireplace. This is a solution to the problem of having musical instruments readily available for use, but out of sight when not in use. Note that the module line, marked by the battens on the ceiling, also determines the panel width of doors. Each is a half unit.

Cabinetwork throughout the house, including kitchen cabinets, is custom-built of Philippine mahogany. Kitchen counter tops are imported Italian quarry tile with stainless steel edge moldings.

Entrance loggia, living room, kitchen, and sitting room all use the same basic materials throughout. Ceilings are vertical-grain Douglas fir; walls are clear vertical-grain heartwood redwood. Bedrooms and dressing rooms have acoustical plaster ceilings and painted or papered plaster walls.

All floors are of cork tile except Mrs. Small's bedroom and dressing room, which are carpeted, and the bathrooms, which have ceramic or resilient tile floors.

The chimney is made of concrete block with a terra cotta flue liner. The fireplace is faced with radio-black marble with a honed finish. Gutters and downspouts are copper. All water pipe and above-ground drain and vent lines are copper. Soil pipe is cast iron.

warm-air furnaces are used for heating; one for the master suite, one for the guest suite, and one for the living-room-kitchen-sitting-room complex. Distribution is by insulated metal ducts. Each system creates an independent zone. The hot-water heater for both bedroom areas is located under the storeroom; a second heater (for the kitchen) is under the living room.

IS THERE A COLD ROOM IN YOUR HOUSE?

Resistance heating cable

Electric heating cable, a long single strand of insulated resistance wire, is the most inexpensive electric heating equipment for new construction. It may also be an economical way to heat an addition to a house, or a room where an entire new ceiling must be installed for other reasons. In most other cases, cost of installation will more than eliminate any savings in equipment.

The cable is installed by stapling it back and forth across the ceiling to form a continuous grid. This is then covered with a layer of plaster or a layer of gypsum board. The cable warms up the plaster (or gypsum board) and, in effect, turns it into a large radiant panel. Because it must heat up the surrounding plaster, it responds slowly. As a result, it is better for rooms that need a constant supply of heat rather than a rapid change in temperature. Part of the cable's heat is low-temperature radiation; the rest is used to warm up the surrounding air. If there is limited natural air circulation in the room, the warm air will stratify and much of the heat will be trapped near the ceiling while the lower levels remain chilly.

If the room heated with ceiling cable has only an attic or roof overhead, good insulation is a must. Heat has a natural tendency to rise and, if there is no insulation, much heat will be lost to the space overhead. Ceiling cable cannot be used in ceilings finished with insulation board, wood, plywood, or acoustical tile, since these materials will retard the flow of heat down into the room.

Cable is also sometimes installed in the floor. As supplemental heat, this would be practical only if you were remodeling a garage or basement and planned to pour a new concrete slab over the old floor to make it higher or to level it.

Cable for 120-volt installations starts at 200 watts but is rarely used if more than 2,200 watts are needed. Cables for 240-volt wiring are made up to 5,000 watts capacity.

Equipment for special situations

Duct or boot heaters are electric heating coils made for installation inside forced warm-air ducts. By placing the heater in an existing duct you can superheat the air to give the necessary boost to an under-heated room. Although most of these units are rather high in capacity at least one company makes low-wattage units that are suitable as boosters for home situations.

Another special type is the built-in floor unit or drop-in unit. These are gravity warm-air heaters that are recessed flush with the flooring. They are particularly good in front of sliding glass doors or window walls where they will counteract the cold air that flows down the glass and creates draft problems during the winter.

A third special type, the ceiling-mounted quartz-lamp radiant heater, is primarily used for industrial applications, but it is particularly good in supplying heat out-of-doors—under a patio roof, for instance, or next to a swimming pool. Small units of this type are also used as bathroom heaters. These heaters produce over 90 per cent radiant heat. They heat anybody who is underneath them and waste very little heat warming up the surrounding air. Capacities range from 1,000 watts to 4,000 watts for home-size units.

What about thermostats?

Whatever type of electric heating is used, the slight extra cost of a separate wall-mounted thermostat is usually well worth the difference. Many units offer this choice. If the thermostat is built into the heating unit itself, it is likely to be affected by the unit's own heat and by the placement of the unit—often against a cold outside wall. Ideally, as with any thermostat, the controls for electric heating units should be placed on an inside wall where the temperatures are fairly constant and not affected by changes in outside temperatures.

Thermostats for electric heating are of two basic types—line-voltage thermostats that actually control the full voltage to the heating units and low-voltage thermostats that use relays in the equipment or in the power supply line to do the on-and-off switching. Most experts consider that the low-voltage thermostats, though more expensive, are somewhat more accurate. They are more sensitive to changes in the room temperature and consequently keep you more comfortable.

The one place where you don't really need a good thermostat is the bathroom: Here a built-in thermostat or even an on-off switch is sufficient since you usually need heat only at specific times. The unit may be turned on for a period, then turned off.

For maximum comfort the thermostat for supplemental heating should be located where it will respond to the temperature in the room, not just to the heat produced by the electric heater. If the weather is mild, you can use either the existing heating system or just the electric heat to keep the room warm. In cold weather the supplemental thermostat will call for the extra electric heating required to keep the room comfortable.

What will it cost?

Though the relative cost of the units themselves has been indicated, heating requirements and installation costs are so variable that it is impossible to project installed costs here. The only sure way is to get an estimate from a reliable contractor. Ceiling cable is usually the most economical for additions, ceiling units or wall units with built-in thermostats the lowest for existing situations, and baseboard units with separate thermostats the most expensive. Since none of these are do-it-yourself projects, be sure to get installed costs.

Because most electric heating equipment must be installed on its own circuit, you will probably have to pay for wiring from the heating equipment to the service distribution panel. Only a small, low-capacity unit can be installed on an existing (and underloaded) circuit. In addition, if your house doesn't have enough electrical capacity, you may have to increase the size of your service entrance equipment. This may add $100 to the total cost, perhaps even more, but you are likely to need this extra power for other future equipment too. It would be well to provide power for air-conditioning and other appliances at the same time even though you may not plan to install them for several years.

How to buy electric heating equipment

How do you find out about electric heat in your own locality? The first place to go is your local electric power company. Because there is no real choice about where you will get your electricity, and because they want to promote electric heat, power companies are usually the best informed local source. They may even send out a representative to talk to you about your particular situation.

With so many different ways to solve the problem or to produce the heat you need, the power company man can give you basic advice about the types that will work best in your situation. They may also be able to recommend local contractors who are reliable and who know how to select, size, and install equipment properly. Before making a final choice it is best to get several bids. Even then, do not take the lowest bid without evaluating each bid carefully. A low price may reflect lower-grade equipment or inadequate installation procedures.

Presidential Palace. There is an atmosphere of other-worldness in this vast, high plateau of almost treeless red earth, punctuated by the concrete shafts and boxes and extraordinary shapes that are Brasilia's planned dwellings and government buildings. In all reasonableness, one should not expect this brand new, spectacularly conceived city to look fully established, since it is so new that no landscaping has yet had a chance to soften its bulldozed, level surface. It is incredible enough that so gigantic a basic start on a city for 600,000 should have been completed in five years, so it's not surprising that it should have the air of a freshly built house where the family hasn't quite finished all their moving in.

But driving from the bustling airport into the city itself, we were struck by a strange sense of desertion, as though there were nobody home, although 60,000 are already living here.

It took some time before the reason for this began to sink in. We were simply missing the atmosphere we are used to feeling in all the old cities of the world—the buildings crowding out to the property line, the busy intersections with their stoplights and policemen and halting traffic. These hallmarks of the big city don't exist in Brasilia. This is a city specifically planned from scratch to forestall the kind of crowd and traffic problems that modern living has imposed on cities which were never built to cope with the population explosion and the demands of automobiles and airplanes. The system of roadways and clover-leaf turnings and the placement of buildings are so planned that there are no crossings. The city, laid out in the general form of an airplane, is zoned into areas for government, for the apartment housing of government officials and employees, for private residences, for embassies, for business, for recreation (there is a nine-mile, man-made lake and plans for a yacht club, a golf course, a horse club), for business, for transportation depots, and for hotels. Convenient schools, shopping, and services are included in each of the great blocks of apartment buildings.

All in all it represents a big-scale demonstration of "International School" design, an effort to organize and categorize human activity within an over-all framework. Most of the world's great cities have developed slowly, acquiring a special atmosphere of their own which reflects the people and their local way of life. In Brasilia the form has been molded first, the way of life is expected to adapt to it. Man is supposed to accommodate himself to the master plan.

It has what we would consider several of the drawbacks of any cut-and-dried plan. It would seem to force the population into categories—for apartment blocks are designed so that government clerks live there, single people live here, lower-income groups live there. And it will be interesting to see, as time goes on, whether people are going to stay put in their boxes or ramble over the line into the wrong subdivisions.

Indeed, one of the great fascinations of this place is that it starts you speculating on its future, and most visitors who go there today promise themselves a repeat visit in a few year's time, just to see how it turns out.

Brasilia was inaugurated as Brazil's new capital in April, 1960, just five years after the forceful President Juscelino Kubitschek won his campaign to get what many Brazilians had been talking about for a couple of hundred years—a capital city in the center of the country which would serve as an incentive toward opening up Brazil's vast, almost unbelievably rich, but untapped and unsettled interior. For centuries Brazil's only development area was its coastal strip along the Atlantic Ocean. Now the coast and the interior are finally linked by planes, which the Brazilians seem to use like buses, and by a series of new highways from Rio de Janeiro, the former capital, 600 miles to the northwest; Belo Horizonte, 450 miles to the southeast, and Belem, 1,400 miles to the north.

The city plan was designed by Lucio Costa. The major buildings were designed by Oscar Niemeyer, a strongly Corbusier-influenced architect whose buildings are everywhere in Brazil.

If you are prejudiced, as we are, against virtuosity in design for its own sake, you will feel that the architecture leaves much to be desired. One has the impression that the architect was so anxious to show what it is possible to form in concrete, that he let himself be carried away. There are so many cantilevers, so many flying buttresses, so many ramps, so many wings, so much "soaring into space," that much of the time we had the nervous feeling that what we were walking on wasn't going to hold us up.

Great blocks of apartment houses are raised off the ground on columns, as though they were standing on stilts, the space beneath presumably reserved for playgrounds and parking areas. Glass is used profligately as window walls, but we noted a conspicuous absence of overhangs or the brise-soliel construction which creates window-shade and which many Brazilian architects have used effectively in the past. One of our vivid recollections was the sight of a 10-story glass-walled building in the full glare of late afternoon sun. Since curtains had to be drawn at every window, the effect was of an entire building wall draped in fabric.

Perhaps the most provocative design of all is the complex of buildings housing the Senate, two skyscrapers for administrative offices, and the House of Deputies (see page 170). To our impressionable eye it resembled a giant dinner table set with an inverted cup, a pair of towering pepper and salts, and a salad bowl. In interior function, however, these are not as way-out as their exterior form would make them seem, for the cup is the dome of the Senate chamber, and the salad bowl is a rather ingenious indoor ampitheater of the House of Deputies. And all the buildings seem to be efficiently accessible to each other, which is more than can be said for some of the governmental buildings in old-time cities.

The Alvorada, or Presidential Palace, which is now the official home of Brazil's presidents, is a lavish glass case with a curiously formed portico, a great inner entry hall walled in gold tile, and a ramp instead of a stairway from the entry to a vast upstairs reception room. Downstairs the furniture is modern, but upstairs, with considerable charm, the great room is divided into intimate areas by such unexpected devices as Coromandel screens and oriental rugs, the furniture a mix of modern and Portuguese Colonial, and accessories are Brazilian baroque. The effect seemed to us thoroughly lovely.

We were entranced, too, by the President's chapel, a small building reminiscent of a snail shell, which takes you unexpectedly into an austere but beautiful place for private prayers.

But all Brasilia is not sleek white walls and city planning. Six miles away you take an exciting look at an unplanned city—a city that just "growed"—in the "Free Town," where the workers who actually built Brasilia live. To encourage them to come to work on Brasilia the government offered them land rent-free, where they could throw up any kind of dwelling that suited their fancy. A fairly wild and woolly place developed, surging with vitality and industry, with much the same atmosphere that must have existed in the pioneer towns of our own West. It's a vivid example of spontaneous growth as contrasted with blueprinted Brasilia. Branches of banks, airline offices, rooming houses, movie houses, restaurants, and shops have sprung up all along its red-mud streets, and you have the feeling that the people are just naturally finding their own level in a mishmash of all kinds of slapped-together buildings. Again one wonders how it's all going to turn out. For it was originally intended to flood the whole area when the job of Brasilia was finished, but the Free Town residents are protesting the destruction of the town, threatening to leave their jobs and Brasilia unfinished unless they are assured that the town will stay.

Direct flight by jet

Not the least fabulous part of our adventure in Brasilia was the fact that we flew there direct from New York via Varig Airlines' new 707 Boeing jet in eight hours and eight minutes, a flight this most efficient airline makes every Saturday, stopping at Brasilia en route to Rio and São Paulo. Varig has a 45-day excursion fare, in effect all year round, which lets you take in all three cities. Cost for First Class round trip is $672 plus jet surcharge of $50; for Tourist Class, $542.70 plus surcharge.

Upon reflection it seems to us that Brasilia would perhaps be even more exciting, especially if you have never before been in Brazil, if you fly first to Rio to get a little taste of older Brazil, and make Brasilia a side trip from there. Varig jets fly direct to Rio from New York every Tuesday and Thursday, and there are prop flights twice a week. The round-trip fare from Rio to Brasilia, on Varig Caravelles, is $50.20.

If you plan to spend the night in Brasilia, make your reservations well in advance at the Brasilia Palace Hotel. While two more hotels are being built, currently this is the only hotel in the place and a good one, so much patronized by business and government people.

First off, they lose luster, fragrance and flavor, and your refrigerator becomes a melange of odors. I have seen the butter on the plate, the cream in the pitcher, the roast in its cooking pan all getting duller as time passed. Foods standing in open-faced dishes will eventually go down the drain or into the garbage can. Perhaps you can afford to waste it, but can you afford the time and labor you throw away?

I DO not look upon these cooked foods as "saving," but rather as a backer-upper to flavor and enhance the next day's cookery. They are not dull, mundane leftovers that many regard as a dreary mess, but they are my bank of goodies to bolster new dishes and to save work and energy.

There are several items that you must have on hand to simplify your storage and to keep foods sparkly fresh: Saran wrap, aluminum foil, plastic bags, and plastic boxes in all sizes. Freezer jars and covered enamel dishes also are used as containers. If you don't have Descoware, then use any enameled covered container you have. (Personally, I do not like foods in metal.)

The darnedest things live in my refrigerators, and you will probably swoon when you hear about some of them. But I will take you on a tour of my refrigerators. Put up your feet and get a cup of tea for here we go! We have three refrigerators: one at the bar, an undercounter one in our main cooking area, and a large four-door-commercial box brought up from the old house which is 30 years old. Altogether we have 37 cubic feet of refrigerator space, and this does not include freezer space. One cannot have enough cold storage.

In the "frig" at the bar we keep Aalborg's Akvavit, Snap-e-tom, and Libby's tomato juice, beer, Cokes, and Seven-Up—everything needed to mix drinks. I also keep iced tea, gingerale, and tonic water here. Lemons and limes in a plastic bag (natch) live there too.

In the undercounter cold box, which is a few degrees colder than the large box, I keep cooked meats, the breakfast items, and any specialty that is perishable. This "breakfast box" has sausages, a slab of bacon, eggs, butter, milk, jams and jellies, instant coffee, tinned coffee, and coffee beans in a plastic bag. The bacon and sausage are wrapped in wax paper and then either in foil or a plastic bag. The eggs are in plastic boxes, for, believe it or not, an egg loses freshness in the open. Our breakfast English muffins are here in a plastic bag, as well as hand-ground cornmeal in freezer jars. This box we had custom-made because we needed a special size and we wanted it lined with stainless steel.

Now to get to the big refrigerator. My gosh, it is really a "working" ice box! I cook three meals a day, for from two to eight daily, and because there was so much traffic in and out of that poor box I had to evolve a system. The kids mill home for an afternoon snack. My dear husband (who can never find anything) would hunt around for something and the ice box became a shambles. Now it is pretty well organized and at least only one or two shelves get disrupted.

The very top shelf has six cans each of jellied consommé of two brands: Campbell's beef and Heinz chicken. These are always on hand to help me with last minute soups. I call it the luxury shelf, for I have a paté sitting there and a jar of caviar. Fancy packs of fruits, slivered almonds in a small plastic box, marinating olives, home-made mustard. The luxury shelf is really for the "drop-in trade" and it's always ready to go.

NEXT below is the "farm" shelf, with the basic supply of cheese, butter, extra cream and milk, and eggs. I keep quite a selection of cheese on hand, from Brie, Camembert, Swiss, Colombo, Port du Salut, and Cheddar, to a wheel of Roquefort. Now some of these cheeses are "fragrant," which is the understatement of the year. So they must be carefully and well wrapped. Never wrap cheese in foil without first wrapping it in wax paper. This I learned the hard way. We were away on a trip and, when I returned, guests dropped in. Of course I brought out the cheese. That lovely wheel of Roquefort had disintegrated the foil wrap into tiny bits and pieces and I had to chuck the whole thing out. But with masses of wax paper and then foil, the cheese keeps beautifully for long periods of time. I get it out in the morning, if I have enough warning that guests are coming, so the cheese can warm up to room temperature. Grated Parmesan cheese in a freezer jar is also on the farm shelf.

Keep your cartons of cream and milk closed! They will sour very quickly unless carefully capped. If you have leftover butter, wrap it in wax paper and put back in the carton; it takes time, but it will be sweeter.

I have a meat shelf, and on marketing day it is jam-packed with roasts, poultry, and fish. I usually leave them in their original packages, even to the sacks they come in, for ease of storage. The meat producers might say I am not correct, but it works for me. I buy ground meat for Thursday night dinner, fish for Friday, a steak for Saturday, chicken for Sunday, lamb for Monday, and beef for Tuesday or Wednesday. These items vary, and each week is not just the same. A flank steak may take the place of the ground beef. Squab or turkey may take the place of the chicken. A pork roast or ham may take the place of the rib roast or lamb. But this is a very convenient pattern to gear your life to when planning for the week. The longer you keep the lamb and the rib roast, the tenderer they will be. Use the items that do not keep well first.

ON THE pastry shelf I keep sourdough French bread in a plastic bag, cookies, and cakes, and a pie in their boxes, and stored in plastic bags or boxes. These are ready to be whisked out still with that oven-freshness. I also have there brown-and-serve rolls and canned bread items, such as buttermilk biscuits and sesame bread sticks. Sourdough bread for sandwiches is here, ready for the gang to come in and make their "Dagwoods."

The vegetable shelf contains the washed lettuces, uncooked vegetables, all carefully packaged, plus the plastic boxes with the soft vegetables, melons, etc.

Now to the orange dishes. There is many a joke around our house about "Mom's orange dishes." One day I came in and there was Sue, peering into the ice box and mumbling to herself. I asked, "What in the world are you doing, dear?" She turned and said, "Mom, do you realize you have 19 orange dishes on the shelf?" I was a little horrified myself at this, but I will take you through them and let you see how my mind works with those little dibs and dabs of food.

I never throw anything away that I have cooked, even to a teaspoon or two of vegetable juice from the cooking skillet. There are two covered dishes of fruit juice, boiled down to a syrupy consistency to be used over Slenderella cottage cheese and fruit. There is a casserole of crispy cooked broccoli, to be used as a salad. (Or it can be run in the electric blender and whizzed with a little buttermilk for a cold, pale-green soup.)

In another dish are four mushrooms. These will be sliced paper thin to go into consommé or a salad. Cooked carrots are in another container; these also will go into either soup or salad. Incidentally, the carrots were cooked in left-over mushroom broth to make them extra special.

THERE is a larger container holding three varieties of cooked squash: zuccini, yellow crook neck, and round scalloped summer squash. I get the smallest that I can find, cook them whole, and serve them with brown butter and chives and parsley. When I serve them next, they will probably go into a flat casserole with a light Mornay sauce. Spring beans are in another casserole, and these have been cooked whole. I will make a delicious salad with the beans, plus Julienne ham, slivered tiny green onions, and chopped parsley. I'll surround them with sliced tomatoes and have a main course luncheon.

Now you will wonder why I kept that bit of left-over cheese soufflé. That will go into the electric blender, with cream added, and there I have a creamy, dreamy sauce for the cauliflower!

Don't toss out anything! Ponder it and wonder what you can do with it! It can be a soup or a sauce or an ingredient in a salad. Even that bit of chili con carne or enchilada can be whizzed and added to a soup or a sauce!

You are probably wondering about those orange dishes I keep talking about. They are heavy enamel-covered iron, all with their own heavy lids. They are cook-and-serve ware, which means I cook in them, serve, store, and then cook again in them. In short, they save dishwashing. Most women, I notice, have one set of utensils for cooking, another for serving, another for refrigerator storing, etc. around an endless circle. Not me, I'm lazy and I admit it. So I have lots of orange dishes to save work.

When we are planning a trip, then my stock of orange dishes goes down to practically nothing, and I have a heck of a time dreaming up what to have to eat. These dishes of food are an inspiration to me for another day's cooking. Preparation time for many a luncheon and dinner is brought down to a minimum because of these previously cooked vegetables, essences, etc.

The tiniest bit of fruit left, strawberries, cherries, or peaches, will start the base of a fruit cup for breakfast by adding sliced bananas, oranges, or whatever is around.

Care of meat and poultry that I have cooked is most important also. Don't put the roasting pan with the meat in the refrigerator. I know it is the line of least resistance, but it is bad management. I allow all meats to cool to room temperature in an uncovered container before refrigerating. The cooking pan is sloshed out with boiling water, and the broth poured into a Pyrex pitcher, so that fat can rise and be easily removed and I can use the good part. In the morning I cut the beef away from the bone, for it will disintegrate at the bone first. The bones I toss into a broth together with carrots, onions, and celery to make a broth-gravy to be used that night with the meat. I remove the bones, whizz the vegetables and sauce in the blender and I have a delicious sauce. I do this with both lamb and beef.

If it happens to be lamb, then I am apt to do a curry for dinner. The meat is wrapped in wax paper, then in foil, tightly packaged. I have kept meat this way in the cold box for ever so long.

When cutting cabbage, melon, and, yes, even eggplant, cover the cut side immediately with wax paper, then wrap firmly in foil. It will keep several days. Do not take the seeds out of melons. Actually, that goes for any fruit or vegetable. If you use only half an avocado, use the half without the seed. Store the one with seed in wax paper then in a plastic bag or box. It will discolor only slightly and only around the edges.

If you can get really fresh-picked corn, get a few extra ears. Cook them all in 50 per cent of the husks. The extra ones store in a plastic bag, husks and all. In a day or two, slice off the corn, add it to string beans, or lima beans for that good old succotash. Leaving some of the husks on adds flavor, but is a great flavor insulator when it comes to ice-box storage.

The next time you are hurriedly sticking something in the ice box, stop and at least put plate and all in a plastic bag. Twist the end, expelling as much air as possible, and tuck the end under the plate to hold it. I use rubber bands or garden "twistems" to close the bag tightly and keep out the air. Our scientists have told us that air creates spoilage, and we certainly know how long vacuum-packaged meat lasts. So in our own kitchens we can do the same in our own cold box. Goodness knows, we have all the equipment to do it with the least amount of time and trouble.

All this talk has had to do with refrigerating cooked foods. But this is only half of it. Keeping the uncooked foods properly is an art in itself. And it matters, because then you don't have to shop so often.

I go shopping only one day a week, usually on Thursdays, because of the "specials." When I get home, it takes me quite a time to wash, package, and store my supplies. I have a tendency to overbuy on the crispy, fresh vegetables, for I know I can store and keep them in better shape than the market.

Almost everything goes into the refrigerator. In fact the only things that I do not refrigerate are citrus fruits, bananas, and onions. (I don't mean scallions.) Fruit that isn't ripe on arrival home I leave out till it ripens and then I refrigerate it. Even bulky items such as new potatoes, eggplant, broccoli, celery, cauliflower, asparagus, string beans, and the like go into plastic bags. "Solid" vegetables will not bruise easily, but softer ones will, so I store them in these large plastic boxes. Mushrooms, tomatoes, avocados go into these boxes. Strawberries, peaches, cherries, plums, etc., are in the plastic fruit box. Do not wash any of these softies until ready to use. Water will make them mould and spoil more quickly. Melons, cabbage, or any strongly flavored fruit or vegetable should be wrapped in wax paper, then in foil wrap.

Spinach and the lettuces can be washed and stored upon arrival home. I keep the tender lettuces together, such as Boston or limestone lettuce or butter lettuce. These bruise and spoil more quickly, so should be eaten first. The huskier lettuces, such as Romaine and iceberg, keep much longer. I keep these in a separate plastic bag. Wash lettuces carefully, put in a tea towel, go outside and swing around your head, to get out the excess water. Put in the plastic bags, still in the damp tea towels, twist the ends of the bags to keep out the air and pile into the refrigerator. Spinach should be washed carefully and stored in a tea towel that is wet, and also put in a plastic bag. I have kept spinach this way for a week—crispy fresh. I'm not advising you to keep it that long, but just showing you what's possible. When those plans change, it's not nice to be caught with limp or rotting greenery.

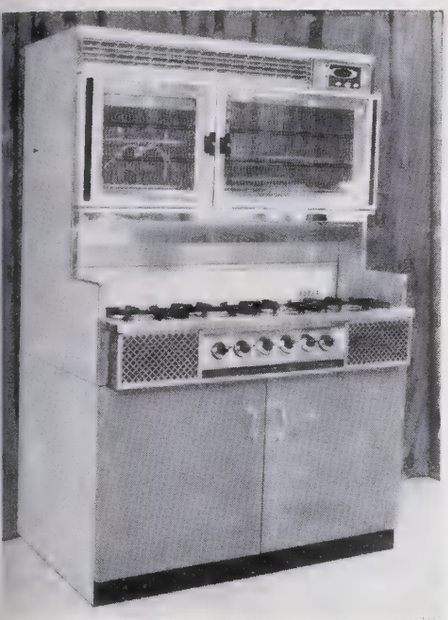
These new ranges look like true built-ins but save the cost of carpentry



The new approach to range design results in a lower level for the burner surface, which puts your pots and pans at a more convenient working height

This 36" range plugs in like a free-standing appliance, can be moved or repositioned anywhere in the kitchen. Both chrome-lined ovens may be used for baking and broiling, and both are temperature controlled. Three high-speed heating units line the front of the cooking counter, which pulls out to make a fourth unit available (below). Sears, Roebuck & Co.'s "Kenmore" electric range, about $500, including the base cabinet.

TWO PHOTOGRAPHS BY WILLIAM HOWLAND

More new ranges on the next page

PHOTOGRAPH BY GEORGE DE GENNARO

The originator of the built-in oven and cook-top has applied the same fine craftsmanship to this 40" free-standing unit. Extra four-inch stainless steel drop leaf adds work shelf in front of burners. Base cabinet and exhaust hood are optional. Thermador's "Lectro-Host" electric range, about $600.

New 40" gas range (below) has clock-controlled oven, separate rotisserie-broiler, stationary 4-burner cook-top. Base cabinet, vent hood are optional. Sears, Roebuck & Co.'s "Kenmore" gas range, about $450.

...And every once in a while you come across something you simply must have. And I did! (See swatch.) They're Breneman-Hartshorn's "Candy Stripe" window shades.

And they come in blue, green yellow and pink (which I chose) And they certainly brighten up our kitchen. I've used them with plain white curtains on all of the windows.

RANGES THAT LOOK LIKE BUILT-INS

Still another approach to the built-in look is the small squared-off range that fits snugly between and in perfect line with surrounding base cabinets

This space-saver is also a work-saver and a most efficient 24" range. Contoured edges of the counter cooking top prevent spill-overs. The oven door removes for cleaning. Waste King/Universal Drop-in electric range. The price is about $250.

Clean lines and simplicity of design give a fresh look to this range that fits into 27" wall space. The recessed top is 32" high, with oven below. All controls, including automatic oven timer, are in panel that mounts on wall. General Electric's "Mark 27." The price is about $300.

Slide it in between base cabinets and this 36" gas range appears to be built-in. Metal trim extends to cover any gap between it and surrounding counters. Brushed chrome top is recessed. Sunray's "decoRange." The price is about $260.

WHERE DO YOU GO TO FIND THE BEST?

to understand what makes it what it is. And since it is no longer as generally on public display as it used to be, you have to find ways of getting acquainted with it. You can do this by exposing yourself to quality home furnishings through the pages of magazines like HOUSE BEAUTIFUL. Write for manufacturer's catalogs which are offered in their ads. Some may cost you as much as $5, but are worth it if you are seriously studying quality. Go to see what the finest stores have on display. Study their model rooms. Go to the decorators' shows where fine things are usually exhibited. Learn the names of manufacturers who are reputed to produce the best.

Then get into the showrooms themselves, where you can actually see at close range the things you've been studying. Most showrooms are "closed" to the public, meaning that you as a retail customer cannot enter and browse around on your own. You must be accompanied by, or introduced by, a qualified purchaser—a decorator, store dealer, or architect. In the past few years some of the showrooms have been relaxing their "closed door" policy, inviting the public to come in and look around. But in no case will a reputable showroom sell anything directly to a retail customer. In other words, showroom shopping procedure means that you must have the help of a decorator (independent or store-employed) or a willing dealer.

Some decorators operate their own shops with samplings of showroom merchandise in stock. From them you could buy such things as fabrics and wallpapers without even having to go to a showroom, making your selections from catalogs, sample books, and swatches.

Something like 2,500 retail stores now have decorating departments, and while they naturally prefer to sell merchandise from their own stock, they will, if you cannot find what you want, send their decorators with you, or introduce you, to showrooms and make your purchases for you. Some stores are agreeable to making individual showroom purchases for you.

The usual practice in fine showrooms is to have all merchandise tagged either with a list price, or a coded number so you can find out what you should be paying. The decorator or the store does your buying for you. He will be billed for the merchandise at a wholesale rate and in turn bills it to you, taking a profit in customary retail way.

Generally you pay no more for shopping in a showroom than you would elsewhere, and if you buy through a decorator, you get the bonus of a decorator's professional advice included in your purchasing price, because it is in the profit on sales that most decorators make the larger part of their income.

The case for putting yourself into the hands of a decorator is worth your consideration, because with a decorator in your life, just as you have a doctor or a dentist, you always have a passport to the finest merchandise. But you would do well to investigate your decorator as carefully as you would a doctor or dentist, choosing one whose academic, aesthetic, and financial record is well established. There are well over 3,000 qualified decorators in the country, most of them products of the 136 specialized schools and colleges who offer certified courses in interior design and decoration. But there are probably thousands more so-called decorators—ladies with "flair" and little basic knowledge who have managed to do enough work for friends to have established credit and gotten entree into some showrooms.

Even if you fancy that you are perfectly capable of doing your own decorating, a decorator can save you endless shopping time, opening up sources to you that you may not have known existed, bringing to the selection of your furnishings a background of specialized skills and experience.

People who have shied away from decorators in the past have usually done so out of fear of the unknown, for as a class decorators have managed to convey to the public the impression that they work in mysterious ways, high-flown, and above all, expensive.

There are several methods by which independent decorators may get paid for their work. Most of the time when they do residential work, they take their payment from the profit they make on the merchandise they sell their clients. This is the most common procedure. However, if a decorator does special designing for a room involving blueprints, drafting or rendering, or for custom-order furnishings, he can be expected to charge a fee for this.

If he functions as a contractor, ordering and supervising such things as painting, wallpapering, or carpentry, he usually charges a percentage of the labor costs. If you hire such workmen yourself, it is fair for the decorator to charge a fee for supervising the work. The

NEW PRODUCT

New type filter stops five times the fine dust—can be vacuum-cleaned

A new type of air filter is now available throughout the country. It will especially interest those who've found many popular kinds of filters unequal to the demands of modern forced-air heating and air-conditioning systems.

Replaceables Not Replaced. Filters designed for periodic replacement are probably the worst offenders. Since the need to change them frequently is rarely emphasized, users merely take them out and shake them off every once in a while. Under such conditions, they cannot filter properly.

Expensive Filters No Answer. Even when more expensive, so-called "permanent" filters are used, there are problems. Many of them require regular reoiling — a messy proposition at best. And they're only permanent in comparison with the short-lived throwaway types.

Traps Fine Dirt. It's easy to see, then, why the new PLIOTRON CR Filters have created so much enthusiasm among the technicians who put them through their paces. Trapping dirt with the help of electrostatic action, they stop as much as five times as many of the tiny, hard-to-catch dust particles. And their full filtering efficiency can be restored by an easy vacuum-cleaning or simple water rinse.

Lifetime of Filter Service. Best of all, PLIOTRON CR Filters are really permanent — serving at full filter-power for the life of the heating or air-conditioning system. You can get complete information by filling out the coupon below—or see your heating or hardware dealer.

WHERE DO YOU GO TO FIND THE BEST?

client pays incidental expenses, like travel, telegrams, toll calls.

It is customary, too, for a client to make an advance payment, usually about a third of the total cost, before decorating work starts.

For consultation and design services where nothing is to be bought, decorators charge a fee, either for the over-all job, or by the hour.

We've been talking about the decorator's operation when you engage him to decorate a room or a whole house. But suppose you are simply seeking his services as a buyer to get you a few yards of showroom fabric, a batch of wallpaper, or incidental furniture?

You must remember that a decorator is not in business solely as a purchasing agent. His primary stock in trade is his design skill which he naturally prefers to exercise on a complete decorating job. So, unless you are one of his regular clients, he may not be delighted to spend his time searching out patterns and colors and putting through a small order for you. Some decorators may do this as a courtesy or because they feel that you may later be a potential client for a bigger decorating job. If, however, the decorator operates a shop, he may then be quite willing to sell you what you want from the showroom samples he has on hand.

Decorators in the decorating department of a store are naturally employed by the store. Procedures vary, but in most stores there is no charge for the service. You are expected, of course, to purchase from the store. As a measure of protecting themselves from people who simply want to sit down and talk over their decorating problems without making any purchases, some stores charge a consultation fee, which will be absorbed by any merchandise which is later purchased. Stores prefer to sell their own stock, but if you can't find what you want, most are willing to introduce you to a showroom or send a decorator with you, if you are having them do a decorating job for you. Again, if you are a regular client, they may accommodate you by making single showroom purchases for you.

Showroom operations vary depending upon the category of home furnishings they carry, and even within categories the mechanics of operation may differ. Some of the fabric and wallpaper showrooms restrict their sales to decorators and architects. Some may sell to upholsterers and wallpaper stores only if these dealers invest in their sample books. On the other hand, most of the furniture showrooms invite dealers to buy from them. But in all showrooms, the bona fide decorator is welcome.

On the face of it, it may seem curious indeed that a customer who is willing to pay for what a manufacturer has to sell cannot get it through the familiar retail channels. But that is how it is. If you want the exceptional, the rare, the unusual, learn how to use the showroom. To date, the quality-conscious shopper's best bet is to get a decorator.

Unquestionably, showroom shopping has taken hold. It is estimated that by far the larger proportion of top quality goods has been sold through showrooms during the past fourteen years. Customers apparently enjoy the atmosphere—usually rather rarified and quiet. They have a broad selection to choose from, and can often derive decorating ideas from the merchandise displays, for most showrooms take great pains to present their goods to greatest advantage in room settings or accessorized vignettes, frequently designed by topflight decorators. Some enterprising showrooms collect unique accessories which decorators may also buy.

There are few large cities in the country where "quality" showrooms do not exist, so that showroom shopping is becoming more and more feasible to more and more consumers. Some of the cities where there are showrooms are New York, Philadelphia, Boston, Providence, Baltimore, Pittsburgh, Buffalo, Cleveland, Detroit, Chicago, Indianapolis, Terre Haute, Louisville, Atlanta, Memphis, Birmingham, Tampa, Miami, Minneapolis, St. Louis, Kansas City, Wichita, Houston, Dallas, Fort Smith, Denver, San Francisco, and Los Angeles.

In fact whole showroom neighborhoods have sprung up in major cities from coast to coast. In some cases, the showroom operators have got together and planned home furnishings shopping centers, such as you will find in San Francisco's Jackson Square, and in the Robertson Center and La Cienega Center in Los Angeles. Sometimes these centers of decorator-quality showrooms are in a single building, like the Decorative Arts Center, the Design Center for Interiors and the Decorators Mart in New York, Chicago's Merchandise Mart and Exhibitors Building, and the Dallas Decorative Mart.

Raise a low fence. Vines on a wire framework may sometimes be used to add wanted privacy on top of a fence otherwise limited in height by community regulations. Some vines, because of the way they cling, can rot out a wood fence. Local garden authorities can recommend suitable types.

Quick screening:

Vines on Wire Cage

Vines are the fastest-growing plant material for living privacy screens. Low in cost, they need only a good start, heavy feeding, and occasional pruning ▪ Much faster-growing than trees or shrubs, vines can be used to clothe privacy screens in a short time and at moderate cost. Evergreen varieties will give year-round protection. While blocking view, they allow cooling breezes to penetrate.

Because vines are rapid growers, they must be planted in deep holes filled with rich top soil or humus. Continuous and thickening growth will be insured by regular fertilizing or leaf feeding.

Since vines on light supports are particularly susceptible to burning action of winter winds, consult local garden authorities about varieties that will not winter kill—to make sure your screen does not lose its shield of leaves.

A GIFT OF

Chartreuse

Chartreuse liqueur is one of the most elegant gifts you can select for a friend on your list who has a taste for good living. This rare liqueur has a colorful history dating back to 1605. Today, its secret recipe is known only by a handful of Carthusian Monks who produce it in Voiron near a secluded French monastery. Chartreuse is delicious served straight, on the rocks or over ice cream or fruit.

"CULTURAL EXCHANGE" CAN BEGIN AT HOME

At family meals Els set an example for our own children in the manners department. In many cases children will take direction from an outsider in a way they never will from parents. Els quickly gained their confidence.

A reciprocal cultural exchange

Cultural benefits are perhaps the most conspicuous result of having a foreign student in your midst. As one parent put it, "For the first time a culture other than our own seemed real to us, and we became interested and sympathetic with it."

In our family, things Dutch seemed to pop up where we'd never noticed them before—Dutch canned bacon, Dröste chocolate, Rusk toast, and tulip bulbs. At the Winter Olympics the name Nederland clearly read "Holland" to our children. And although we could hardly expect them to pick up conversational Dutch, they have incorporated such words as: proost (God bless you), verschrikkelyk (terrible), danku (thanks), and verdorie (darn) into their everyday vocabulary. The unusual sounds delight them and sometimes fit their need more expressively than English words.

In return, our youngsters took pride in helping Els improve her English and in explaining words she didn't understand. Sometimes the silliest synonyms would confuse her, like "ham" meaning actor or amateur radio operator. They would notice her confusion, realize she was thinking "meat," and come to her rescue.

We also learned about curious Dutch customs and dishes. At Christmastime and on birthdays, Hollanders give each other their first initials in chocolate. Much to our delight, Els's mother sent a three-inch chocolate "B", "C", and "D" to each of our children for Christmas. The rest of us received packages of special holiday cookies and candies.

Els was extremely knowledgeable about food. She appreciated what we ate and taught me how to fix a few Dutch dishes like Hutspot and Huzarensalade. Hutspot is a one-dish meal of braised beef, carrots, potatoes, onions, and apples cooked slowly in a "Dutch" oven. Huzarensalade is a traditional potato salad served at buffet parties or receptions where the food is prepared ahead of time and in great quantities. But it was in the snack department that Els showed real versatility. She introduced us to sliced strawberry sandwiches, Rusk toast sprinkled with chocolate shot, fried onions and tomatoes on a slice of cheese, and coffee topped with whipped cream.

Compared to the Dutch, our special offerings seemed rather meager, but we did serve popcorn, figs, artichokes, squash, waffles, and corn-on-the-cob for the first time in Els's life. Our children also took delight in introducing her to horseback riding, baseball, barbecues, and to Chinese and Mexican cookery that they like so well and she had never tried.

Similarly, holidays like Halloween, Thanksgiving, Valentine's Day, and April Fool's Day took on an added interest for us last year. It was as though we were re-examining our own traditions and height-ening our enjoyment because we were playing to a fresh, keen audience, so to speak.

Other friends of mine report quite different cultural exchanges. Japanese students taught boy scouts judo. Girls from the Far East loved to tell fairy tales and sing to the little children. And almost all the students offered to prepare a typical dinner party for their host-family and their guests—complete with decorations and entertainment.

A scholarly stimulant

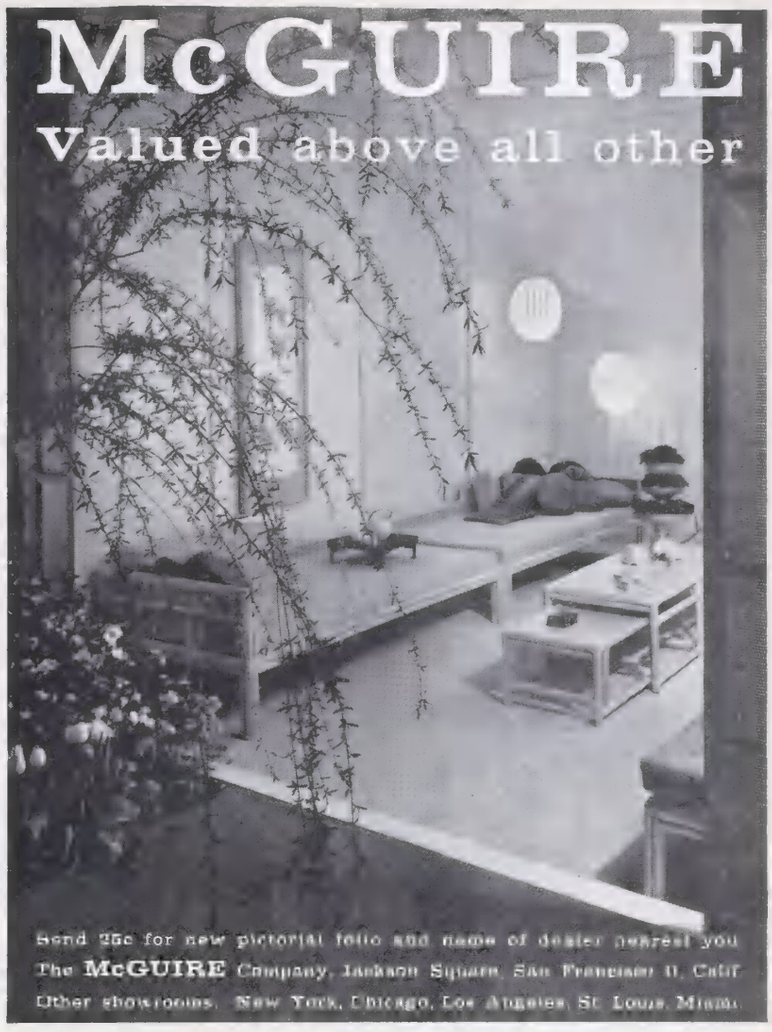
In comparing notes with many families who regularly have a student live with them, they all agree that by and large the foreign visitors are an accomplished and dedicated group. They are scholastically ambitious. They are working toward a personal goal and probably destined to become leading citizens in their native lands. Their very presence in a home stimulates the American family members to higher intellectual and cultural efforts.



One West Coast mother confided to me that her own sons began to study with determination after a German student shared their home. Her boys suddenly felt the first-hand impact of global competition. They seemed to realize the need for trained minds and clear thinking in the world today. Such arguments had previously been purely academic.

Our Hollander was looking forward to a career in nursing. She was, by our standards, an accomplished individual. She played the piano and flute. She had studied ballet and liked to sketch and paint. She spoke German and some French, as well as Dutch and English. She had also made many of the clothes she brought with her, and she thought nothing of cutting and restyling her own hair. She loved to watch TV plays and to discuss her courses in American literature. Her catholicity of interests served to shake us out of an easy-going pattern of light entertainment and best-seller reading.

For the first time in 20 years, I found myself considering the literary merits of Edith Wharton and Sinclair Lewis. I began to clip concert schedules from the Sunday papers, because Els missed the series she was accustomed to attending at home. She volunteered to help the younger children with their piano study, and our daughter saw her first professional ballet while Els was here. In every respect, having a student-visitor from another country and culture made us aware of hers and more appreciative of our own.

Friend, part-time sister, and temporary daughter

Just as Els brought stimulation and cultural enrichment to our family circle, she also developed a special relationship with each member of our family. She was friend, part-time older sister, and teen-age daughter, all in one.

She developed the closest tie with our daughter, Brooke. These two shared bedtime confidences, tried on each other's jewelry, made cookies and doll clothes together. Theirs was a sister relationship our little girl had never known before.

The boys delighted in teasing Els about her dates and telephone calls. But they also liked playing chopsticks on the piano and riding bicycles with her. She was an easy mark for their jokes and an unsophisticated playmate who liked to romp and roughhouse as much as they. She was something new and exhilarating for them.

For me she offered a hint, a clue as to what I might expect from our growing girl. At times, Els was giggly, scatterbrained, and self-centered. Other times she was sweet, perceptive, and serious. But at all times she loved to talk. In her goofier moments she would spend hours in front of a mirror, forgetting to bring back the freezer containers of ice cream she had removed. On Mother's Day, however, as well as on our wedding anniversary, she surprised me with flowers and a touching note.

We both relished her talking. As we worked together in the kitchen, we'd discuss cooking, careers, travel, education, children, and clothes. Much of what we covered was hypothetical; still, I enjoyed airing my views on marriage and housekeeping. In return, Els expounded on her beliefs of what a European girl faces as she approaches womanhood. It was interesting and enlightening.

Apparently all host-families develop a marked degree of fondness for their "foreign children." One mother told me of the bedtime coffee klatsch she and her husband held regularly with their Swedish student. They still look back on these nocturnal sessions with pleasure. Last Christmas, Tina touched their hearts by sending a set of wooden snack trays in remembrance of their family confabs.

In any number of cases, acquaintances of mine have become so attached to their Peruvian, Korean, and Iranian college students that when some of the young people decided to marry and continue their graduate studies here, my friends staged the weddings in their homes and, in one case, even gave the bride away.

Another pair of hands and a built-in baby sitter

Not the least of the benefits of having an additional, responsible, young adult in the home is the household help provided in exchange for room and board. I found that Els was the extra pair of hands I seem to need during the busiest hours of the day. At breakfast-time she would watch the toast, pour the milk, help put up school lunches. In the late afternoon she would fold laundry from the dryer, set the table for dinner, prepare a salad, stir a pot, and answer the telephone. She was also the extra pair of legs every mother needs to run to the freezer, bring in the groceries, and run back into the house for the car keys you forgot. She was always a willing, enthusiastic near-adult my children could turn to when I was busy.

Above all, she was a built-in baby-sitter. Like all housewives, I have my daytime appointments and meetings. Although I try to get home before three, I sometimes miss. Fortunately, the school schedules were so arranged that Els left the house an hour earlier and returned a half hour before my younger children. She had her own key, so that my brood never had to come home to an empty house. Nor did I have to defy the speed laws

Who needs a "Lift" in Your family?

Is there a dear old grandmother in YOUR home who can't climb stairs? Or perhaps a busy wife and mother who needs to be saved from tiresome trips, up and down, several times an hour? Or someone convalescing in the home?

To any or all of these people, so dear to you, a home lift can bring greater happiness and guard their safety and health. INCLIN-ATOR (shown above) carries two people upstairs, safely and comfortably.

"Elevette," a vertical lift, can be installed in stair well, corner or closet. It may be inclosed in a shaft to serve more than two floors. Both operate on house current and are safe for all ages.

to race home for a deadline.

On evenings when my husband and I wanted to go out, Els would give the children the supper I had already started. We happen to prefer week-night social life and weekends at home, so there was rarely any conflict between her dating and our going out. For nine carefree months we were spared the nuisance of engaging baby-sitters in advance and then driving them home. Our children knew none of the turn-over of transient sitters, and my husband and I enjoyed the luxury of spontaneous partying.

With a student in my home I had the sort of "help" I needed when I needed it. The remainder of the day I had the house to myself—another luxury I prize highly.

A useful yardstick

An extra benefit of having a teenager from another background and with another education in close association with our own family was that she served as an interesting yardstick. We anticipated that she would do things differently, that she would see things in a different light. This in itself was worth learning. What we had not foreseen was that inescapably one makes comparisons. And what I observed was both satisfying and challenging. In many areas we are doing a fine job of raising children. In others we could do well to adopt some foreign improvements.

For instance, compared to foreign-reared children, ours seem more independent in thought and action. Our country's ideal of the self-made person in which each individual selects his own path and makes his own decisions is reflected in the behavior of our children. They are prepared to choose their own school courses, to study alone, to plan social activities, and generally to stand on their own feet.

In contrast, the foreign students, who have lead more circumscribed lives, look towards someone in authority to guide them. Els, for example, was unprepared for the baffling task of selecting her own high school subjects. She had always been told what classes she must take. She was also accustomed to studying with a partner and to seeking confirmation of the smallest matter. Instead of resenting supervision she sought it.

American youngsters are also becomingly open-hearted. I had never particularly noticed this until Els lived with us. In the first place, it was gratifying to note how quickly and willingly our school accepted a foreign student. Once enrolled, she became a sort of celebrity. Neighborhood girls called for her and accompanied her to classes. She was made an honorary member of a girl's club, invited to parties, and taken on trips.

It was also interesting to compare how unconsciously democratic American youngsters are. They regard their teachers, the Good Humor man, the gardener, and garage attendants as friends whom they know by name and hail at any opportunity. Els, on the other hand, was amazed to find, for example, that teachers would speak to her off the school grounds. And she herself carefully distinguished between the Dutch-born Americans who spoke with "farm accents" and those who didn't. These characteristics are apparently ingrained on our part and hers.

On the other hand, we found that foreign secondary schools teach more than ours. Their students must carry more academic subjects, go for longer hours, and meet tougher standards or drop out. According to Els, a failure in one subject in her local school would cause a student to repeat the whole year. Nor did she have any trouble meeting American requirements even with a language handicap. Clearly, we can learn from foreign educational systems.

Similarly, the devotion to cultural pursuits in other countries is worth emulating. In Els's home town of Enschede, for example, they have their own symphony orchestra, three ballet companies, many amateur dramatic clubs, and a town hall that is an architectural masterpiece. In that small factory town there is no lack of popular support for the arts, whereas in this country it's hard to maintain an opera company, art museum, or repertory theatre anywhere by public subscription. Why the contrast? The answer seems to be that the majority of children abroad are brought up knowing music, dancing, etc., and they continue to enjoy and support it as they grow older. Plainly not enough of our people are well-educated in these fields.

"CULTURAL EXCHANGE" CAN BEGIN AT HOME

And lastly, the most admirable quality among visiting students in this country is their sense of personal responsibility towards their homelands. They seem to sense that times are changing, and the changes will probably take place during their lifetimes. They have a sense of history and want to assume a role in it—either by teaching their countrymen, by bettering the status of women, by improving health conditions, by raising living standards, or by helping to form new governments. As yet, I see few signs of our students awaking to their own leadership potential but perhaps times are changing here, too, and we will find more young people arousing themselves from complacency into action.

But above all, the thought that lingers longest after a foreign student leaves is the "One World" feeling that despite our differences we did live together and become friends. And I, for one, would like to make it a yearly practice.

How do you find a foreign student?

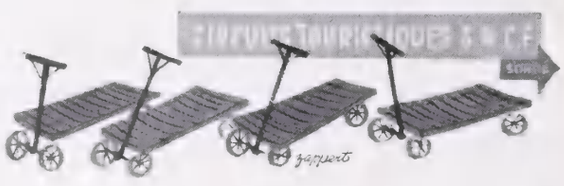
The American Field Service program for international scholarships is one "avenue." This independent and dedicated organization is responsible for placing some 1,500 high-school students a year in homes throughout the United States and Alaska. Its exchange program is well conceived, carefully supervised, and community-sponsored. The program is aimed solely at bringing teenagers from abroad to study in American secondary schools and to live with American families for one school year. This is perhaps the most completely charted of any of the abundant exchange programs. Most of the adjustment problems are anticipated and responsibilities shared.

Not every family would want another teenager about the house, so for them a college-age or graduate student may offer more stimulation and less parental responsibility. The Foreign Students' office or Dean of any nearby college or university is the best avenue for contacting an older student.

In talking to secretaries in three of these college offices, I was told that at the beginning of every semester they receive such specific requests as: a widow would like a student to share her home and to talk French with her; a doctor will provide a room in exchange for lawn maintenance; a family with horses offers room and board to a student in exchange for watering and feeding the animals; a TV actress wants to exchange board and room in return for a reliable baby-sitter.



Such requests are simply passed on to students looking for cost-free housing. The students and the host families then work out their own agreements.

Other families look through the classified section of the college newspaper. Or, they wait until after the first confusing week of registration is over and then place their own ad, stating sex, nationality, or language preference, nearness to classes, living conditions and any special attractions like a swimming pool or box at the opera.

Year after year these families manage to work out "exchanges" with a varied and fascinating succession of young visitors. Frequently, in the case of happy arrangement, one student will introduce his successor to the American family.

Service clubs may also serve as "agent." VISA (Visiting International Students Association) of the Rotarians normally confines its efforts to arranging parties and home-cooked meals for foreigners, but in cases where there is a need they will try to locate homes and jobs for the students they sponsor.

And finally, there is the simple and direct avenue of inviting the children of foreign friends to spend a year with you. Europeans, in particular, are accustomed to sending their children abroad for six months to a year to "live with a family" as they call it. They do this first in one country and then in another to improve their youngsters' speaking ability in several languages and to afford them travel opportunities with supervision.

WHY IS HONG KONG TODAY'S MOST EXCITING TRAVEL ADVENTURE?

From the heights of Wo Lu in the New Territories you can look across the Shum Chu River boundary to the mountains of Red China and speculate on the frighteningly narrow line that exists between liberty and enslavement. Farmers on the free side go their way industriously, apparently unperturbed. Farm woman's sunshading hat is straw, ruffled with black cotton.

a myriad big and little islands, and more than 300 square miles of the China mainland (called the New Territories), mountains, valleys, farms, and factories stretching right back to the armed and guarded border of that xenophobic, unpredictable nation, Communist China. Its tip, Kowloon, almost four and a half square miles of shops, new buildings, and busy bustle, is about a five-minute, three-to-four-cent ferry ride to Hong Kong Island, across one of the world's most magnificent harbors. By day, it's the busy home of huge liners, smartly painted freighters, sleek British and American warships, noisy motor boats, butterfly-winged junks and scurrying ferries, on which, if he doesn't care for the ever-changing view, the passenger can marvel at the pretty Chinese, their chic cheong sams (dresses) slit thigh-high up their legs.

At dawn, the harbor is misty gray, a little unreal and enchanted. At night it wears a matchless necklace of brilliants. After sunset, whether you are on a slight elevation in Kowloon—say at the Carleton Hotel—or even half way up The Peak on the Hong Kong side, all the colony is a magic landscape vertically and horizontally pinpricked with white and colored light.

But the perceptive traveler will quickly realize that Hong Kong is more than an endless panorama of bargains and beauty.

This British colony is meaningfully unique to the traveler and to the world because it is the greatest Chinese refugee city anywhere in existence. Separated only by barbed wire, armed patrols, and the unspoken assent of Peking from the radically changed, regimented nation to the north, it is home to a decade's influx of two million refugees who fled the Communists, sometimes with wealth, sometimes with capital, usually with nothing.

In benevolent, old-fashioned colonial manner, the British rule Hong Kong, most of which they hold under a 99-year lease from old China. This has curiously enough been honored to date by the Communists, but is due to expire in 1997. But more than 99 per cent of the four million residents are Chinese. Most of them are little shopkeepers, petty farmers, workmen—a great mass of shack-and-tenement-dwellers who barely make ends meet. But here is also the largest existing concentration anywhere of Chinese wealth and millionaires.

Two-thirds of Hong Kong's whole population have deserted Communist China in the past ten years—and many from the other side are still risking their lives to slip here secretly and illegally. It is the two million newcomers who have transformed the quiet, parochial Hong Kong of the past into the bustling manufacturing town of today. Simply walk the streets here and you can feel the Chinese vitality, industry, and the indomitable will to live—and live better.

HONG KONG

Put on a pair of flat shoes and walk some of the Chinese sections of the city: Wanchai and its side streets, and the steep alleys up from Queen's Road, North. Under signs of bold Chinese characters, shops display row on row of flattened, ivory-colored ducks; huge mounds of rice; queer twisted herbs, dried medicinal frogs; steaming pots of Chinese delicacies; every size and shape of dried fish; golden mangoes; and that superior cousin of the grapefruit, the pale-gold pumelo. The indispensable incense shops may be gay with lanterns for the Autumn Festival, or sets of paper clothing to burn in appeasement of the Wandering Spirits, red candles of every size, red sheets of powerful charms to ward off evil, silver and gold money to offer the dead.

You will see workmen with shoulder poles, clerks in Western-style suits; neat, wrinkle-faced grandmothers with little gold earrings dangling from pierced ears and cloppety wooden slippers; Cantonese maids with long braids, shiny black trousers, and spotless white jackets.

But the streets belong first to the hundreds of thousands of children, often left unattended all day by busy parents. Here a dozen small-fry play happily with a toy made of torn newspaper; there two midget boys enact a classical sword dance with wooden sticks. Children look after younger brothers and sisters, matter-of-factly, with no visible resentment. A ragged seven-year-old keeps a weather eye on two babies lying beside him while he intently traces his day's stint of new characters on fragments of paper. A small girl, squatting, sells soup from a sidewalk brazier, competently getting the better of a short-changing customer, meantime minding a baby brother. At this near-poverty level, the family still co-operates as a unit, and everyone old enough to work at all keeps at his job for hours from dawn till after twilight.

You can watch a woman bargain endlessly over six chicken heads she wants for a stew. At the next stall, a customer meticulously fingers and repeatedly examines dozens of tiny fish before she searches out thirty Hong Kong cents (just over a nickel) to buy five of them. In the shop behind, an elderly woman carefully lights incense sticks and bows before the god of the household.

This is what China used to be, particularly south China. Perhaps you will savor it the more because it is a relic, a pattern of life and thinking the Communists are meticulously obliterating among 650 million Chinese to the north.

You can see how the Chinese, with unsurpassed adaptability, "make do"—often living quite literally on the streets or in flimsy patchwork huts of discarded wood and cardboard that they have built on rooftops and on the city's steep hillsides. Most of them live in mile upon mile of decrepit, dingy multi-celled buildings where "home" for a family of five may be a single bed in a room shared with many and the toilet is a bucket in an almost waterless, shared kitchen. But like the Chinese themselves, these tawdry, ancient structures manage to avoid a look of hopelessness. Not a dingy verandah that isn't cheerfully dotted with green plants and, in spite of Hong Kong's grave water shortage, the never-ending lines of clean laundry stretched on bamboo poles over the teeming streets below are a real affirmation of human tenacity.

This is life-seeing, as opposed to sightseeing, and it is usually an American's first real comprehension of the flesh and blood meaning of the refugee—a world-wide problem that often seems remote, something you read about but cannot really feel at a distance. Yet it is something we dare not turn our backs on. When you have seen this side of Hong Kong, you can truly say you've seen much of the world.

What you won't see—for they are below Hong Kong's surface—are the ancient Chinese secret societies, now turned ugly gangster, that prey even on near-penniless refugees. You may see Hong Kong's Chinese millionaires enjoying a dinner whose cost will outmatch any in New York, but you probably won't sense their callousness toward their fellow countrymen. (Hong Kong has lagged perceptibly in its contributions to World Refugee Year.) Nor will you meet the many smokers and vendors of heroin, a drug far more vicious than the old-fashioned opium, now probably the Colony's single biggest problem.

But you can see easily another kind of infection: the Chinese Communist department store, the many Communist shops, the Chinese Communist banks, travel and news agencies; the Chinese Communist theaters and movie companies, the Chinese Communist book-stores, the Chinese Communist newspapers, the Chinese Communist schools. You won't meet the Chinese Communist union leaders or the Chinese Communist underground. But it's no problem to encounter a wealthy Chinese capitalist, even a "refugee" who sits in one of the Colony's most expensive restaurants and explains gently that Utopia really lies to the north of the Colony.

Hong Kong, as you can gather, is a place where an American can wake up to what's going on in the world.

As for conventional sightseeing, you will want to drive around the island and the New Territories, preferably in the car of a knowledgeable friend, but, failing that, Everett Tours and Hong Kong Tours, both with booking desks in the Peninsula Hotel, furnish tours in private cars. The tour of Victoria, with its unending, ever-changing panorama of sea, islands, mountains, junks, and sky, might commence with a trip to "the top of The Peak." (In the not-so-olden days, how high up The Peak you lived was a better index of your social status than your position in government.) You ride in a little funicular which climbs so vertically that the landscape below and behind you pulls all awry, like some extreme distortion of a modern painter. The view is truly magnificent, and you will want to stop on Stubbs Road to see the wide stretch of the harbor. You will pass both Hong Kong's luxury mansions (Chinese as well as European) and refugee squatters' huts; the lovely, flower-laden fashionable areas, and the little Chinese alleyways.

YOU WILL wander a while at Aberdeen, home of thousands of junks on which people are born, married, bear their children, live, and die. You may lunch on one of the floating restaurants—great junks—out in the harbor, more for fun and for the experience of the sampan ride out to the ship than for the quality of the cuisine. Or, particularly if it's Sunday when the Repulse Bay Hotel serves its lavish buffet, you may prefer to dine here on the veranda, overlooking masses of flowers, clean beach, and sea.

And to understand Hong Kong's "many-splendored" reputation, go back one evening to Stubbs Road and enjoy the great glitter that is Victoria, the harbor, and Kowloon at night.

You can tour the New Territories either by car or the little commuters' train which carries food and passengers right up to the edge of Communist China. The railway station between Communist Chinese and British territory is fascinating to see, as are parts of the long border. But you are not allowed to go that far unless you have a special dispensation from the Hong Kong police and an escort, who usually finds it difficult to understand why strangers think any of this area interesting. However, you get close enough to China to see its mountains and a valley where, if a cock crows, you are not sure whether it belongs to the Capitalist side or the Marxist!

You pass through the typical south China countryside; the mountains and plains, unaware of politics, repeat one another across Kwangtung province and the British Crown Colony. You will see the men and women of south China working in the fields, in much the ancient manner; in fact, they are the only free farmers, with the right even to curse the government, on that great stretch of geography once ruled by Dragon Emperors.

YOU WILL find yourself back in history when you pass little villages established eight long centuries ago, still retaining their protective walls and moats. Here in the New Territories, too, are colleges for refugee students from the mainland and many of the factories that are making this overcrowded city booming and prosperous.

On a morning tour of the New Territories, you may lunch at The Shatin Heights Hotel, overlooking the great valley of rice fields that used to supply the Emperor's table.

As for the sea, if the motor launch trips around Hong Kong seem a little prosaic, take the regular commercial ferry to some of the outlying islands. A typical trip to three of them costs under one dollar; on dumbbell-shaped Cheung Chau, you can wander around an unself-conscious, typical fishing village and visit a temple with the resounding title of The Palace of Jade Vacuity, where reposes a very magic sword dredged from the ocean.

More expensive, but delightful, is a tour of sea and islands on a new, specially built but traditional three-masted junk called The Sea Dragon, which holds ten or eleven passengers. Chartering the junk for half a day costs sixty dollars; for a full day, ninety-five. The fee for two or three individuals is somewhat higher. The Sea Dragon trip is fascinating; it includes food, soft drinks, deep-sea fishing if you wish, swimming off sandy island beaches, sightseeing, and the thrilling experience of sailing under its great bellying red sails.

WHY IS HONG KONG TODAY'S MOST EXCITING TRAVEL ADVENTURE?

Try to reserve one day for Macao, the nearby Portuguese colony full of Mediterranean-like atmosphere and Chinese refugees. There, at one moment you see relics of the earliest European visits to this part of Asia; the next minute you are watching Chinese pass under the gate that separates the tiny and somewhat tired European colony from a gigantic and fulminating Red China.

NIGHT life in Hong Kong is dull compared to many other cities. But there is a different kind of offbeat experience that can be rewarding if you want to get a little below Hong Kong's shopping and scenic surface. Telephone Miss Madge Newcombe, the very obliging secretary of the Hong Kong Council of Social Service, and ask her to arrange for you to see some or just one of the worst and the most encouraging places, and people, in this prospering but slum refugee city.

Be sure to watch out for the Chinese traditional celebrations, particularly New Year (in February) and the Spring and Autumn festivals. Spring Festival is especially fascinating in the New Territories, where tens of thousands of Chinese flock to honor the graves of those ancestors who died outside the "Middle Kingdom" and whose remains have not been transported back to the ancestral home in China.

And now we come to shopping, for Hong Kong is unquestionably paradise for quality bargain hunters—meaning not that everything is dirt cheap by any means, but that luxury goods, the meticulously handmade, the hand-stitched, fine materials and workmanship are available here at far less than you'd pay anywhere else.

American shoppers must heed a few words of warning. United States Treasury Regulations totally prohibit Americans from bringing or shipping into the U.S.A. any of the many articles in Hong Kong that are made in and exported from Communist China. This includes much that you may hanker for, both old and new.

You may not have antique Chinese furniture, Coromandel screens, old cabinets and lacquer ware, red-and-gold wedding chests. You must avoid time-mellowed ivories, old Mongolian silver, the finest brocades, lovely fragments of embroidery from ancient robes, and the top-quality, recently embroidered blouses, lingerie, and table linens. Forbidden are the really fine porcelains, the Communist-discarded gods and carvings from dismantled temples, much jade, most costume jewelry, and ornaments of semi-precious stones.

Also prohibited, if purchased in Hong Kong, are certain things that "look" Chinese, regardless of their country of origin. This includes most scrolls and paintings, Burma's delightful duck-and-owl-shaped lacquer boxes, Buddha heads from India or Southeast Asia, Thai silk stoles, luncheon sets, or silk by the yard are also forbidden because this fabric is now imitated in Communist China, as are Italian and French silks.

Since Hong Kong itself produces lots of "China-type" goods, the Colonial Government, in co-operation with the United States Treasury, has listed a number of "pure" shops (including tailors) where you can legitimately buy such articles and be given for them by the store a document called a "Comprehensive Certificate of Origin." This piece of paper costs you less than a U. S. dollar but it's magic insurance that U. S. Customs will not return your purchases to Hong Kong or hold them for months while you write the Treasury long, exasperated letters.

ALL THIS may seem complicated because the list of "legitimate" purchases and shops is subject to change. But it will be considerably simplified if you read the fine print on the document about U. S. Treasury restrictions, which every American receives as he arrives in Hong Kong. Don't disregard them because some plausible-sounding salesman says your purchase is too small to be noticed. I have known U. S. Customs to turn back two fifty-cent wooden dragons made, as labeled, by refugees from Communist China, and hold, literally for months, dresses of unmistakably French and Filipino textiles, because they were unaccompanied by Certificates of Origin.

These restrictions, which do not apply to Asians and Europeans, still leave you many pleasant, profitable ways to flatten the pocketbook. For instance, many people come to Hong Kong solely to acquire a new wardrobe because of the remarkably reasonable costs of skillful tailoring and the wide variety and low prices of the whole world's quality materials—British tweeds, Indian saris, French brocades, chiffons, laces, Swiss, Japanese, and Indian cottons, Italian and Thai silks.

Probably Loa Hai Shing has the city's best collection of top quality textiles for men and Kayamally for women. But the colony is covered with adequate cloth shops and your tailors will produce tomes of sample material. It does not pay to "discover" some little place down an alley where vicuna is much, much cheaper and cashmere sells for almost nothing.

Hong Kong's Chinese tailors live up remarkably well to their reputation for being inexpensive, speedy, and good. (A few are even generous, offering male customers everything from Scotch whisky to addresses of lovely ladies!) Often the sketch or photograph you select is brilliantly copied. But don't be misled by stories of ballgowns made overnight. You can bully your tailor into producing something for you in twenty-four or forty-eight hours, so that, panting, he thrusts it into your hands as your plane's engine is warming up. But real success in a suit or dress generally depends on many patient fittings—in Hong Kong as anywhere else.

You get the real bargain in clothes if you use the best tailors and the best materials and order chiefly luxury garments, such as satin, lace, or chiffon dresses with beadwork, suits and coats of Thai silk, and the very best woolens. Another pretty unfailing bet is to bring with you a timeless, well fitting suit, dress, or coat you love and have it copied. And remember, please, that only Europeans with really superb figures can wear the cheong sam.

You must have Certificates of Origin for women's clothes unless they are woolen. Many tailors do not have the authority to get this document for you.

IT IS a foolhardy person who gives advice on the choice of Hong Kong tailors. For women's clothes, tourists often patronize the tailors in the Peninsula Hotel; they also use, among others, George Chen, Hong Zang, Ying Tai, Frank Fong, and Van Ziang. Dynasty's dresses, suits, blouses, and bathrobes are extremely attractive and dependable. The Star of Siam on the same floor of the Peninsula as Dynasty, carries Thai silk suits and dresses. My favorites there are their reversible Thai silk coats in two excellent styles. Across the harbor, at 1 Duddell Street, Hong Kong, there is Charlotte Horstmann, a lady of superb style sense and a perfectionist approach to tailoring, who can fit you out handsomely in topnotch materials.

Hong Kong is a town where men enjoy running amuck on clothes: hand-tailored suits, ties, shirts, pajamas, dressing gowns, smoking jackets, overcoats. Try Y. William Yu, Jimmy Chen, or Loa Hai Shing for suits, and S. L. Wang for beautifully finished, monogrammed shirts of silk, Swiss batiste or English cotton, costing about eight dollars.

Other clothing bargains and favorites are children's dresses, raw silk or linen blouses, hand-knitted sweaters (those with the cable stitch cost under $15); beaded sweaters, shoes, and bags. And you can have anything copied that involves the use of fabric, leather, or hand-stitching.

Custom-made leather shoes (for which your own last is built) and pocketbooks are extremely reasonable, say at T. T. Wong's on Mody St., Kowloon, Bob's, Benny's or Cinderella. Choose a bag with as little metal work as possible, since it is often inferior, and keep in mind that the shoes, however handsome, are simply not as sturdy as American. Undoubted bargains are shoes and pocketbook made to match a special outfit you are having made.

YOU CAN buy duty-free radios, cameras, tape-recorders, typewriters, and watches, sometimes at almost absurdly low prices because of little trade-wars. Here in Hong Kong is your chance to justify getting one of those watches that ring an alarm or tell you at any moment what time of the day it is in about fifteen different cities! Here, also, is the place to get that extra pair of glasses, since duty-free frames come in from all over the world.

Jade, these days, is very expensive. Ask a Chinese friend to advise you if you feel cravings in that direction. Cultured pearls cost much the same at Lane Crawford's in Hong Kong as in Japan.

Finally, if you happen to want the components of a high fidelity record player fitted into a specially designed, custom-built cabinet, Hong Kong is the place. Ask Radio People about it.

In the home furnishings category you should see Hong Kong's handmade rosewood, blackwood, and teak furniture, perhaps the Colony's finest product and one of its biggest bargains. Deft Chinese cabinetmakers can produce furniture from sketches or photographs and specifications in any size, shape, or style imaginable.

A dining-room chair, cushioned in the magnificent Thai silk which itself costs $20 a yard in New York, is priced by Mrs. Horstmann at $30 (U. S.).

It is impossible to list all the stores that can make furniture and give Certificates, but among them are George Zee, The Majestic, J. L. George, Bob, and Henderson and Co.

When freight charges are considered, much of Hong Kong's increasingly imaginative and well-designed rattan and cane costs about the same in the United States and the Colony. But really high-quality pieces are still a bargain here. I'd be tempted by a clean-lined porch set or lacy-patterned, amusingly rococo table, chairs, bedhead, and screen in natural-colored cane for a sunny, informal bedroom.

Hong Kong artists are now producing hand-painted wallpaper in classic brush work. A strip about 10' x 30" costs less than 20 American dollars. If you want to go to the makers, Fortune Handiwork Family Company (who can resist that name?) in Kowloon, take along an interpreter. I have seen one style used effectively as a four-panel landscape mural. S. Y. Ma will cover paneled screens for you with this paper.

Take a look at Hong Kong's China-style tribute silks, brocades, and satins for household use as well as for clothes, and try the Tai Ping Carpet Salon, St. George's Building, in Hong Kong, for Tientsin-type rugs, very low priced.

Next to handmade furniture, some of Hong Kong's best products are the various big and little things for the house: reproductions in brass, copper, and pewter of ancient Chinese shapes.

The Temple Bell, recently opened in Kowloon, has Chinese temple gongs of every size up to the overwhelming and magnificent. Its wares include large, Chinese-patterned door knockers and handsome, heavy, plain candles in brass stands.

Roam Kowloon's Nathan Road and the little maze of streets east of it, and the stores in the Miramar Arcade and the Peninsula Hotel to find countless other small household articles—enchanting midget wooden chests or brass hinged jewelry boxes, candles in rainbow hues molded in classic Chinese shapes. New ivory, as opposed to the old, can be found in graceful ornaments—if you look.

It's a great temptation to buy the best mainland China-made embroidery exquisitely worked on linens and lingerie, almost always astonishingly inexpensive, but specifically blacklisted by the U.S. Government. However, you can get, with Certificates, Hong Kong-made substitutes, less exquisite but still pleasant, at such places as James G. Lee on the Hong Kong side, Aileen Kershaw's and Oidar's in Kowloon and, for the least expensive, refugee-made, at Welfare Handicrafts between the ferry and the Peninsula. I myself would not care to leave Hong Kong without paying for something made by the refugees.

Americans cannot buy most of the amusing or beautiful Chinese dishes and vases in Hong Kong, but Certificates are given, for instance, at Zing's in Hong Kong and the East Art Company in Kowloon for Japanese-made porcelain decorated by colony artisans in many of the classic Chinese patterns.

Chinese cuisine is one of the world's greatest, and Hong Kong is the place to get acquainted with it. Chop Suey-minded Americans do not realize that China not only has an infinite variety of dishes, but that they change sharply with geography from town to town, province to province. And in Hong Kong the gourmet can sample practically all kinds, because wealthy refugees have created a demand for their own local dishes and there are plenty of refugee chefs to supply them.

In the better-known restaurants, menus are in English as well as Chinese. But since the ordering of a good meal is more of an art in China even than in France, try to get a Chinese friend to do it for you. Otherwise, throw yourself on the mercy of the head waiter, and ask for dishes most typical of his restaurant—not those that are the most "foreign."

Try duck in a Peking restaurant (Princess Garden or the Hoover); tiny, tiny shrimps and fish tails in soya sauce, a pork dish called Lion's Head and eels in a Shanghai restaurant (The Winter Garden, Ivy's or Three-Six-Nine); steamed fish, shark's fin soup, and king-size prawns in a Cantonese restaurant (The Café de Chine or The Golden City). In Tien Hong Lau, the Hangchow restaurant, ask for their special fish and Beggar's Chicken—a whole fowl wrapped in large leaves, with a few very delicate herbs, covered with mud, baked slowly, brought out to your table in an enormous shovel, cracked open and un-peeled before your eyes.

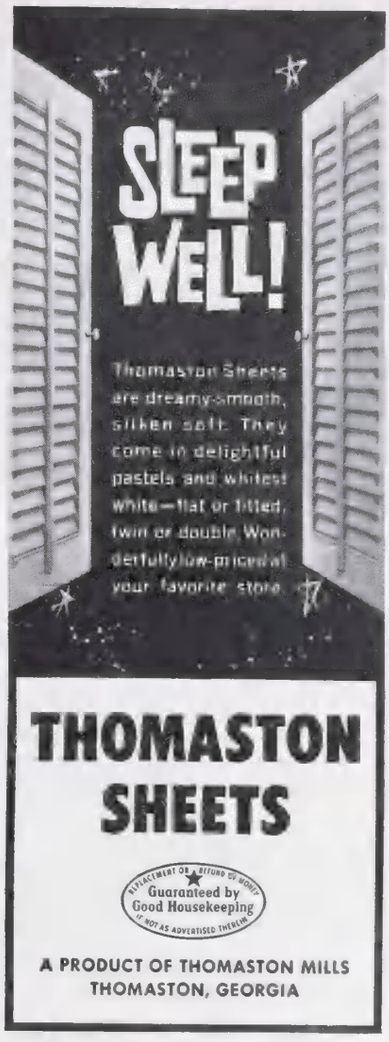
Try the peppery dishes of Szechuan province, say in The Kowloon Restaurant, and include a Mongolian meal where you do your own cooking in a brass urn on the table, mix yourself a sauce from more than a dozen ingredients, and substitute a delicious sesame seed biscuit for rice. Eat one Cantonese lunch, where a seemingly endless procession of neat little Chinese girls bring the food on trays and you choose by pointing.

If, finally, you want a culinary adventure with which to overwhelm your friends back home with the telling, go to a Cantonese snake restaurant. From some of the wicker baskets of live snakes, the waiter will choose at least three (it must be an uneven number) right before you, cut out their gall bladders, and give them to you.

If you insist on eating the familiar, there are perfectly adequate European-style restaurants, for instance, the Parisian Grill and the Café de Paris on the Hong Kong side, and Gaddi's and the Marco Polo in Kowloon.

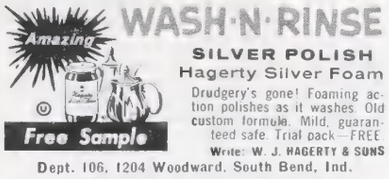
Hong Kong is easy to reach. Any British Embassy or consulate will give Americans visas good for two weeks' stay, readily extended. Half a dozen of the world's major airlines stop at the long new airfield.



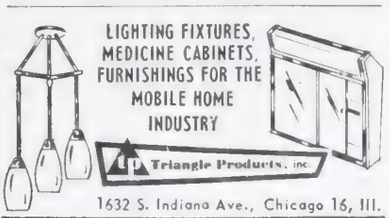
But recommending an airline is almost as foolhardy as recommending a Hong Kong tailor. One of HOUSE BEAUTIFUL's editors who had crossed the Pacific from Vancouver to Tokyo (14½ hours) and continued on to Hong Kong (6 hours) via Canadian Pacific Air Lines, arrived on our doorstep with enthusiastic kudos for CPAL's Britannias, food, and service, much to the amusement of some of our Canadian guests who had known all about this for some years. Time will be considerably reduced in early 1961 when CPAL jets go into service.

As this is written, BOAC runs the only one-carrier, through-service from New York City: the route by London, Rome, Teheran takes just over 26 flying hours; that by Britannia through San Francisco and Honolulu, 38. Total elapsed time by Pan American from the West Coast is 20 hours. Excellent service is offered on the same run by Japan Airlines and Northwest Airlines. Fares are about $560 from the West Coast and $765 from New York, exclusive of taxes. If I were able to afford the leisure of sea travel, I would choose one of the myriad ships that touch Hong Kong, including today's modern and comfortable freighters.

Language is no problem in this century-old British colony. Nor is currency. If you look like a tourist, Chinese and Indian stores may quote prices in U. S. dollars, but it is better to pay in local money. There is no black market in currency. The going rate stays at about 17 U. S. cents to the Hong Kong dollar.



The best time weatherwise, is from October through March. Take clothes suitable for an American autumn, though you need airy cottons if you are continuing on to Southeast Asia. Emphasize the casual, since the old dress-for-dinner-every-night spirit has left even this Colony. You will want a short dinner or cocktail dress. April is generally foggy and damp. From May to mid-September it is hot, wet, and humid. More and more tourists visit Hong Kong each year, so book your accommodations well in advance. Though the less expensive places such as the International, Grand, Astor, Carleton, and Sunning House are clean and comfortable, the Peninsula Hotel and the Miramar in Kowloon and the Gloucester and Repulse Bay on the Hong Kong side are considered best. Their advertised rates run from about $7 U.S. to $14.50 for a single and $10 U.S. to $16.50 for a double, but rooms are seldom available at the lower prices.



I like the Peninsula for its unconscious caricature of heavy Victorian décor, its excellent service, its many shops and tailors, and its lounge, where Hong Kong residents and tourists watch one another with secret, superior amusement. Just behind the hotel, in Peninsula Court, is one of Hong Kong's best beauty parlors and in the hotel itself, besides travel agencies, is the city's official Hong Kong Travel Service. The Miramar Hotel is more modern, has a dining room with semi-Chinese décor and a Chinese floor show, and is located near the network of little streets where it is almost the most fun of all to shop. The Gloucester is conveniently set right in downtown Hong Kong, and the Repulse Bay, on the far side of the island, is ideal for visitors who have time enough to enjoy the vista of islands, flowers, sky, and sea, to lounge, swim, sun, and take twenty-minute taxi rides into fabulous Hong Kong.

Here are counter-top surface units that store out of sight until pulled down for cooking.
Convenient as well as space-saving,
they fold back to rest in their own cabinet, thus freeing the counter for other work needs

A new concept in counter-top cooking is introduced with this stack-on range. Small in size, only 22½" high and 32" wide when closed (below), it provides the same service as many larger floor models. The hinged stainless surface section has four regular cooking units that fold up against side of full-size baking and broiling oven. Mirrorized window permits view inside only when oven light is on. Hotpoint "Custom Crest" counter range, $359.95.

Any counter can become a cook center with this convenient fold-back unit, equipped with 6″ speed-heat element and 8″ unit, thermostatically controlled. Open and closed units above. Frigidaire Imperial "Fold-Back," $131.95.

TWO PHOTOGRAPHS BY WILLIAM HOWLAND

Folding surface units like these take up less than two square feet of counter. Here are units designed for gas cooking. Convenience features include thermostatically-controlled burner, locking safety valves, and automatic work light. Both units shown here cost about $120. "Foldaway" unit shown open (above) is made by Dixie Products, Inc. Closed unit (below) is Magic Chef's "Foldaway."

This entry has the practicality of masonry but avoids monotony by interesting contrasts of color and texture. Evergreen plants provide permanent foliage; choice perennials produce seasonal accent. Color of pebbles deepens when wet, brightens a rainy day. Landscape architect: Charles Middleer.

Don't let your entry garden

Give the entrance a sense of shelter

Keep planting beds well defined

An expanse of paving, with well-proportioned planting beds of interesting shape, is a sure-fire basis for year-round interest. All that remains is to choose dependable year-round plants, as shown here in the M. A. Strunk garden. Landscape architects: Marie and Arthur Berger.

Thoughtful detailing on the overhead decking and hand rail and the beautiful stonework create permanent, unchanging beauty. Garden pool and willow tree are permanent too, but change with seasons. Flowers in beds and plots are not vital here. Designer: John Yeon.

Provide visual interest for arriving guests

Lily pool, stone lantern, hanging basket, interesting paving, gravel, and plants beguile the eye as you enter here. In the foreground you can see the jog in the walk that forces you to change direction, slow down, and enjoy it all. Owner-designer: Walter Costa.

let you down

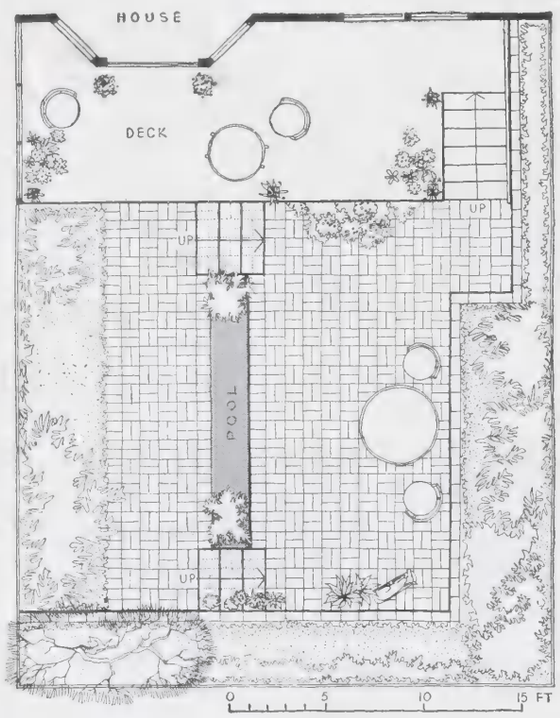
By CARROLL C. CALKINS

The approach to your front door is on display all year long. The more permanent you can make its beauty, the better

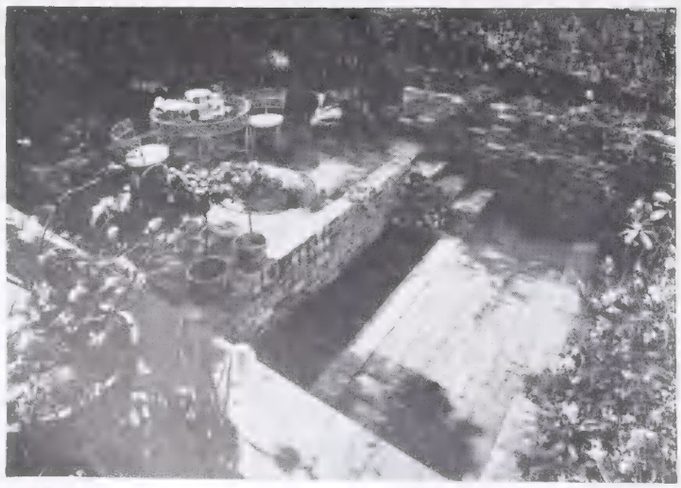
● If your entrance garden looks bedraggled and uninviting during the off-season, it may need a backbone of more dependable material to keep it attractive regardless of the time of year. In the examples shown here, stone, wood, brick, and concrete are used for permanence. These can be depended upon not to fade away, turn brown, or die back. And notice how much the well-defined shapes of paving, plants, and pools—and the strong contrasts of texture—contribute to attractiveness in every season.

Plantings of evergreens are used for year-round contrast with the structure. Flowering plants add colorful seasonal accents. The combination of building material and plant material is well suited to an entry garden, for this is an area of transition, where the man-made world of the house most obviously joins the outside world of nature.

If ever prospects looked dim for a pleasant, useful garden, they certainly did here in the back yard of Mr. and Mrs. Barton Davis. Narrow stair down from small back porch was only link between house and garden. The land was on a two-way slope and essentially unusable. But it was in year-round view through bay windows.



The solution proposed by Landscape Architect Laura Mercado Smith was a bold stroke that works beautifully. Bay window was made into a double door connecting living area with a new deck at floor level across back of house. Original back door to porch was not changed. Plan shows how space is now used (below).



BEFORE

No garden is

Looking down from the deck, you can see how the yard was terraced and floored with brick. Planting beds edging the terraces provide easy-to-care-for greenery the year around. Potted plants, on the terrace and in the beds, give color where and when it is needed. Upper level, nearest the house, is used for dining.

FOUR PHOTOGRAPHS BY MORLEY BAER

The two brick terraces divide the big drop from the floor level of the house to the ground level into easy stages. This takes advantage of the slope of the land and gives the garden more visual interest than it would have had with just one level. Steps at each end of pool invite walking around to see the plantings.

"hopeless"

● No matter how unpromising a piece of land may seem, it can be made useful and good-looking. What may seem to be an unsolvable problem often has, to the trained eye of the landscape designer, an easy answer. The more "hopeless" a situation may be, the more dramatic may be its transformation. The example here proves the point.

In developing this usable outdoor living space out of a deserted back yard, Landscape Architect Laura Mercado Smith faced an almost impossible grade problem. By attacking the problem at its heart—adding deck space at the living level—the rest of the garden followed logically. Anything less than this generous deck would have been an unhappy compromise that would have revealed itself quickly.

The lessons are clear. Don't let the difficulty of a situation inhibit your expectations. Know what you want to achieve and don't settle for less. Use the experience of the professional and have confidence in his judgment. Be prepared to adjust your thinking—and your budget—to new ideas: Unusual situations often call for unusual solutions. It is better to put off a project, or work out a step-at-a-time plan, than to accept a less-than-satisfactory compromise.

Now's the time to stock your plant-food pantry

If you think you'll need some soil for house plants this winter, or for seedlings early next spring, put away some good earth before freezing weather starts

By GORDON MORRISON

• Winter-time and early spring gardening can often be made easier if you have a bushel or two of good dry soil on hand for potting or starting seed. Northern gardeners who neglect the autumn gathering of soil may encounter soaked or frozen ground outside when they need some for potting or seeding. You can buy soil, of course, but it seems pretty silly when you have a yard full of it.

The best kind of soil to store should be dry enough so a firmly compressed handful will crumble readily into fine particles when rubbed between the hands. Because soil must anchor plants as well as nourish them, it must have sufficient body to serve this purpose efficiently.

There are about as many recipes for seeding and potting soil as there are gardeners, but the basic characteristics of good soil are pretty well agreed upon. The magic word is loamy. Loamy soil is neither too heavy with clay, nor too light with sand. It has enough clay and humus to hold plant food and water. Yet enough sand to provide for water and air movement through the soil. Any clean sand can be added to make soil lighter in texture and more porous. Leaf mould or peat moss are the best materials to add for improving the water-holding capacity of the soil.

All rubble, rocks, and such should be screened out of the soil as you collect it. This is easily done with an 18-inch square of so-called hardware cloth or coarse metal screening over the collecting pail. Rub the soil gently through the screen and it will be in excellent condition for sifting and resifting with the other ingredients of your favorite potting soil recipe.

Impurities and foreign matter should be screened out of the sand and humus you plan to use in potting mixtures. Sand calls for a finer screen. We use an old flour sifter with good results. Humus can usually be worked through the soil screen.

When you mix all the constituents of a potting soil, sift them together from one container into another until they are thoroughly mixed.

As for the pH of the soil (acidity or alkalinity), this, too, can be controlled when the soil is gathered —simple inexpensive testing kits are available from garden stores. Most plants thrive in soils of neutral to slightly acid reaction—say 6.0 to 7.0. Neutral, of course, is 7.0, higher numbers indicate alkalinity; lower numbers, acidity.

Slip-cover fiber board containers, or other airtight containers, are handy and easy to use. They also help hold the moisture content of the soil.

less quality that copies no particular style of the past or present, but embodies an affinity with good things of then and now. Individually these pieces could be dropped into many different settings and be appropriate.

In these rooms the rugs play a big part in creating the mood. The antique Agra carpet has a quiet richness in color and over-all pattern that goes fittingly with mellowed antique accessories. Tooled leather on the walls forms a softly textured background.

Strong architectural pattern in the other rug sets a striking stage for a stimulating atmosphere. In contrast to interest in gentle details and small patterns, here the accent is on form and color. With paintings and accessories of bolder form and gayer color, fabrics with less design detail and higher color key were chosen. Your attention goes to the whole form or outline of the furnishings rather than to the small-scale texturing that patterned materials provide in the other room.

These rooms demonstrate the wisdom of investing in major furnishings with an eye to their adaptability for your own personal environment, so your biggest investment can last a long time and serve in many ways.

The furniture and fabric group, called "Today and Tomorrow Collection," was designed by Edward Wormley for the Dunbar Furniture Corp. Mr. Wormley also designed the rooms seen on pages 196-199.

Following is a detailed list of furnishings and accessories:

Glasses by Libbey

Now—Libbey makes history with beautiful new "Americana"! Blazons every glass with symbols of our proud past in shining 22K gold on a field of ebony black or snowy white—4 of each background to a set. The beverage glasses do honor to Perry's Flagship, Andrew Jackson, Independence Hall. The old-fashioneds commemorate Paul Revere, Old Ironsides, Monticello. Each of these lovely sparklers, of course, has Libbey's famous chip-defiant rim.* And each set costs so little you'll want several for gifts. Only about $5.00 for 8-of-a-size!

Designed by Freda Diamond

In each contemporary group by American of Martinsville, design and craftsmanship combine to capture a mood from the storied past. A casual suggestion of a classic motif beautifully interpreted in modern lines and soft finishes. This is the secret of American's leadership in contemporary styling. An intangible artistry that brings peace and quiet to bedroom, dining room and living room. The buffet illustrated is hand-rubbed walnut, a wistful reminder of our Colonial heritage. One of many stunning pieces from our American Square collection . . . about $194.00. Or ask your dealer to show you other exclusive designs created for American by Merton L. Gershun.

living's great in homes today!

Here's the kind of living you find in brand-new homes today. It's carefree living, with plenty of comfort, beauty and privacy for the family to enjoy.

A "shopping trip" through model homes is proof enough. Never before have there been so many conveniences to make life easier, or so many livable house plans to choose from; never before, so many new and improved materials for your builder to apply with modern methods; never before, a better time to build or buy.

Now's the time to move in where the living's great — in a new home of your own. Ask your builder or dealer about these modern U.S.G. products: wallboard, sheathing, roofing, siding, insulation, plaster, paints, hardboard, ceiling tile; or write Dept. HB-02, 300 West Adams Street, Chicago 6, Illinois.

In this colorful room, the wall is fireproof SHEETROCK* Gypsum Wallboard, accented between panels and decorated with TEXOLITE* Paints. Noise is hushed by the ceiling of attractive USG* Acoustical Tile. Sliding doors of built-ins and panel on hi-fi speaker are perforated DURON* Hardboard. Architect: Dwight T. # the gift of light Thoughtfully selected to illuminate a friendship, to create the at-ease environment for Dad after a busy day, to lighten a young man's homework, to add beauty to Mom's favorite hobby, her home... this is the gift of light! Unusual. Personal. And very practical.

Lamps provide myriad moods: soft and charming, bright and gay. Lamps provide light for sight: eye-easing and eye-pleasing. It is the awareness of these things that enter into the design of every Lightolier lamp. The authentic traditional and advanced contemporary styling... the careful selection of the most appropriate materials... the quality of illumination... these have earned for Lightolier the respect of interior decorators, architects and lighting engineers.

Each of the lamps displayed here combines inspired design with knowledgeable sight engineering... a blending of aesthetics with function which is the hallmark of Lightolier. See these, and many more distinctive lamps by Lightolier, at fine stores everywhere.

KLING MEANS MAPLE CHERRY MAHOGANY

Fieldcrest's Gold Crown automatic blanket made with 100% virgin Acrilan* comes out beautifully.

How can you identify a beautiful, versatile, durable automatic blanket like this? By the tag. The new Certification Tag with the big red "A"-Acrilan trademark. This tag tells you the blanket is made with 100% virgin Acrilan acrylic fiber. It tells you that you can machine-wash it without a qualm. It means, too, that your automatic blanket will come out as soft, as fluffy, as luxurious as when it first caught your eye in the store . . . that it won't mat, or lose its shape or color. The tag also means you don't have to worry about moths, mildew, allergies or expensive "special" washings. To sleep in comfort, with gentle automatic warmth and confidence . . . just look for the tag with the red "A", Chemstrand's assurance of rigid quality control. Blankets don't just get it—they earn it!

TRUE SHERRY STARTS HERE

In Spain this Autumn, they harvested the year's vintage.

Around the little town of Jerez de la Frontera, they spread out into the sunny vineyards to pick the ripened bunches of grapes to be pressed into sherry wine. Only from these few Andalusian acres comes the true "sherry" (English for "Jerez," as you can see).

This year's vintage will be aged in wood for your use long hence. Miraculously, it will taste exactly the same as its counterpart today.

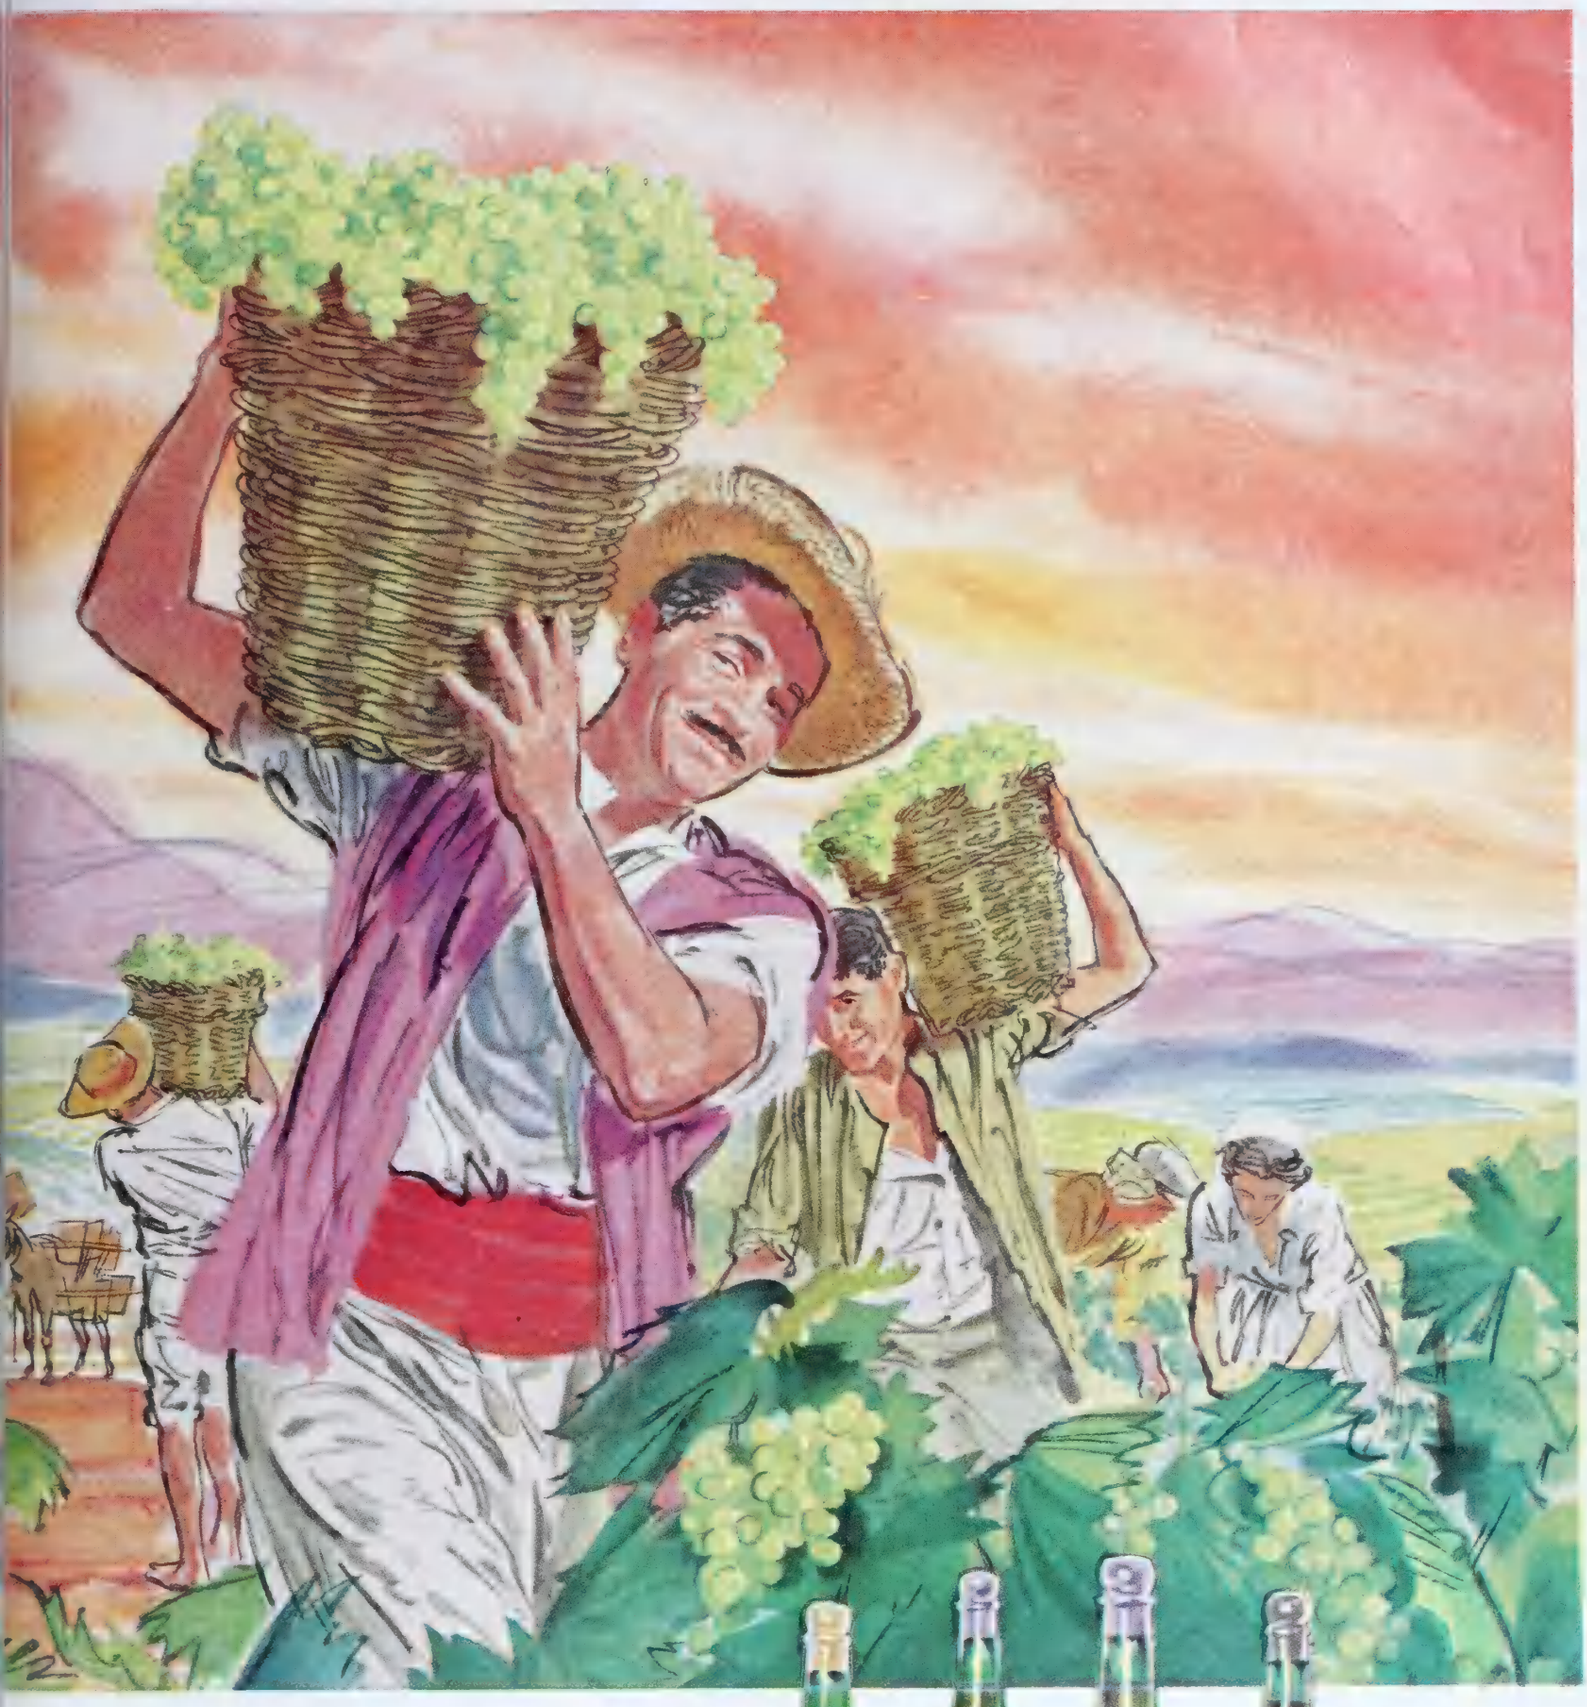
Meantime, it will be matured and mingled by transfer, little by little, at intervals of several years, through rows of stacked-up casks. This year's wine is poured into the top row, replacing older wine which has moved to the much older wines below. Many years and many minglings later, it is finally drawn from the bottom casks.

This is the slow "solera" system of Spain . . . descending through succeeding casks whilst ascending to perfection.

After the years have passed, some of the 1959 vintage will be "finos" (dry sherries), some "amontillados" (medium or cocktail sherries), others "olorosos" (sweeter, creamier).

It is the last mentioned, the precious "olorosos", that must be brought from Spain to Britain, for blending by an age-old art into Harvey's Bristol Cream. Only in Bristol, England, and only by Harvey's is this luxurious, mature wine bottled for you.

Perhaps it will not reach you for many years but when it does, Harvey's Bristol Cream will taste exactly as it does today, exactly as it did when Queen Victoria reigned.



BY APPOINTMENT TO HER MAJESTY QUEEN ELIZABETH II
WINE MERCHANTS, JOHN HARVEY & SONS, LTD.
FOUNDED 1796

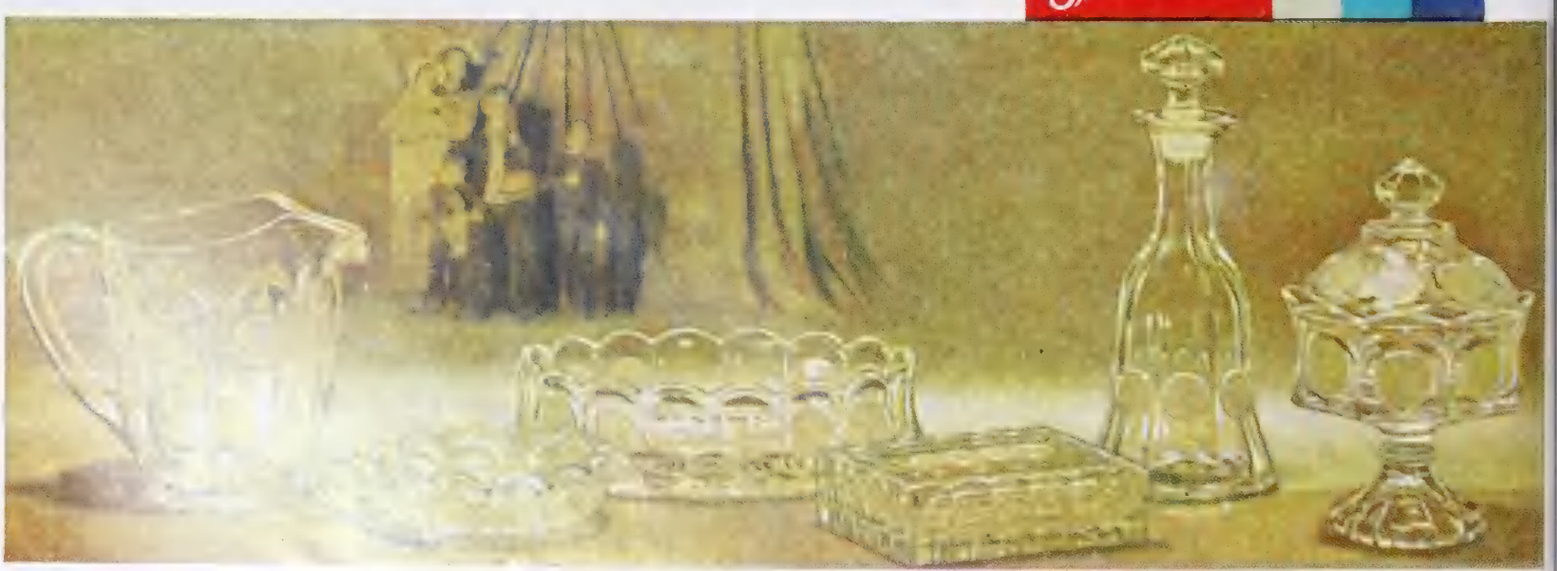
G. F. HEUBLEIN & BRO., HARTFORD, CONN., SOLE IMPORTERS FOR THE U. S. A.

BRISTOL DRY®. Pale, light "fino". A genuinely dry sherry. Serve slightly chilled or on the rocks.
HARVEY'S AMONTILLADO. An amber-colored "medium." Serve as a mild cocktail, slightly chilled.
BRISTOL CREAM®. The years have made it more costly, more golden, more sweet... incomparable.
BRISTOL MILK®. Also a golden, sweet, "oloroso." Famous for 300 years.



New/old COIN GLASS by Fostoria

Legal tender for compliments

The story behind Fostoria's COIN GLASS makes it lively conversation material — as well as legal tender for compliments. THE ORIGINALS ARE IN MUSEUMS — and a few private collections. But COIN GLASS hasn't been in general use since late in the last century when its production ended abruptly. It seems the originals reproduced real coins. This was declared illegal; the molds were destroyed. NOW COIN GLASS lives again. Fourteen handcraftsmen combine their glassmaking skills to recreate these lovely old shapes and the antique flavor of simulated coins. BUT we aren't making COIN GLASS just for collectors of reproductions. COIN GLASS sounds a decorative note that is pleasing in contemporary surroundings. See for yourself. Where? # You don't practice...you play

You'll find the simplest of tunes sound rich and full on a Conn Organ. Each note develops and holds its own tone even when blended. Why, even the "clinkers" sound pleasing! Of course, in no time you'll be playing real music...satisfying, complete music that sounds professional, for the Conn is a professional quality instrument, not a makeshift or semi-organ. Yet, it costs so little more. Prices start at $995. Choose from many superb models styled by Raymond Loewy. Before you decide, be sure to visit your Conn dealer's showroom. See and hear for yourself the noticeable difference in a Conn! Don't buy any organ until you try the incomparable CONN ORGAN

Made by C. G. Conn Ltd., world's most experienced manufacturer of musical instruments. • For free booklet and name of your nearest Conn dealer write today to Conn Organ Corporation, Dept. B2, Elkhart, Indiana.

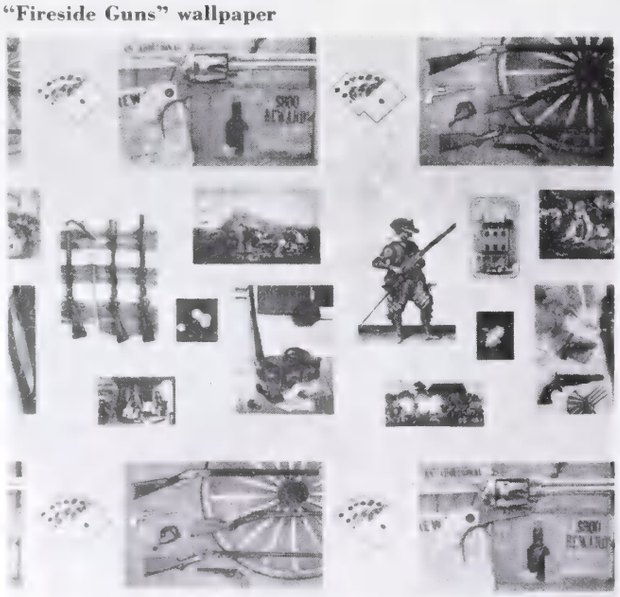
paneled with translucent plastic. This will obscure the view yet let light flow through.

"The grilles come in several different patterns—some quite simple and Japanesque, others with a more Moorish feeling (see photo)—and one of their best features is that they slide slick as satin and bundle back on Carlton's specially designed ceiling tracks."

The dividing device actually set the atmospheric keynote for the new living room. The shoji-like grilles we chose looked so calm and subdued that Mrs. Curtis decided to go all out on visual peace and quiet in the living area. We kept the gray rug, of course, which still covers the entire room because the divider needs no floor tracks. The new furnishings are in gray and white, with no unessential accessory to clutter this end of the room.

By day, when the screens are drawn and Mrs. Curtis is playing grand-lady hostess to the literary club, a pearly light glows through the panels, the light borrowed from the music-room windows.

The panels can also be installed in existing doorways (see photograph on page 32).



Last Thanksgiving at the Gilberts' home in North Carolina we were regaled at breakfast with quail on toast, the result of a foray Ed and the five boys had made on the local brush with gun and knapsack. So when Elinor's letter arrived, beseeching help on the refurbishing of the family room, the memory of that sunny morning meal and the talk of shot and shell popped right into my head. Before I was an hour older I was over at Katzenbach and Warren's showroom, demanding a close look at a quite special wallpaper I'd seen that I knew would do the trick.

The paper is called "Fireside Guns," and it is a sort of reprise of the illustrations in "The Fireside Book of Guns," written by game-hunter Larry Koller and published by Simon & Schuster. And if there's any important American gun missing in its pattern—from hunting arms and the Colonial types that conquered the wilderness to the ones the desperadoes used to conquer each other in the wide open spaces—I can't imagine what it could be. They're all there, symbolically and imaginatively composed with wagon wheels, and poker hands, decoys and old-time "reward" posters, in colorful squares and rectangles against a white background.

It comes in sheets 24" x 72", and is sold in single rolls which contain three sheets and cover 36 square feet of wall space. I decided to order it with a plastic coating, although it needn't have this. But I happen to know that plastic is a wise precaution where the Gilbert clan is concerned.

I've sent it down to Elinor with one of my own inimitable sketches. She'll have it on only two walls of the room, above the maple-paneled dado. The remaining walls we'll keep in white rough plaster, for they're cut up with bookshelves, a maple snack bar arrangement, and a wide fireplace of old brick. Her furniture is covered in red calico-patterned chintz, which she wants to duplicate because it has stood up so well, and so all we need to replace the old carpet is a great circular rag rug, laid on the bare oak floor.—M.G.

FRIEND OR FOE TO YOUR CARPET?

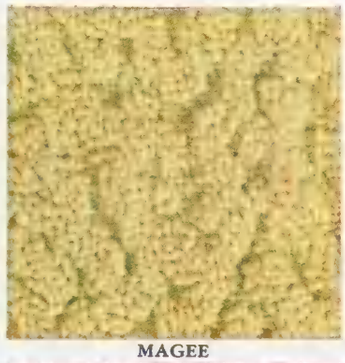
CARPETS OF CUMULOFT* NYLON STAY FRIENDS WITH THE FAMILY. THEY'RE RESILIENT; FREE FROM PILLING, SHEDDING OR FUZZING! When a carpet of Cumuloft nylon comes to your house it stays new-looking longer. The secret? Cumuloft nylon is a continuous filament textured nylon yarn developed by Chemstrand. Here is carpet with nylon's incredible strength . . . now richer, softer than you've ever known.



Unlike staple nylon, which sacrifices much of its strength (because of its short lengths), Cumuloft nylon's continuous strands retain nylon's full strength so it wears and wears. This means that your nylon carpet resists pilling, fuzzing or shedding. Your nylon carpet will also resist soiling—and cleans easily. Even under the trampling feet of children, the playfulness of puppies and heavy adult "traffic," nylon carpet will bounce back, retaining its look of luxury. These superb new Cumuloft nylon carpets are being loomed by Callaway, Firth, Magee, Mohawk, Philadelphia, Roxbury, Alexander Smith and Wunda Weve.

Candlelight by Colonial

Colonial Handipt Candles

ERRY — best known of all Cod Candles. Now in solid tapers — in plain or hand- sculptures and in Scent-O- ry 3″ shorty.

TURED GRAPE — a new creation in all white or hand- n silver, gold, antique or colors. ORENTINE, a new conversa- ce in gold antique.

Colonial Handipt Tapers are truly MASTERPIECES IN WAX representing the most beautiful colors known to candles. Three of 28 decorator shades are shown above — Pome Green, Burnt Orange and Autumn Gold. All made in 10, 12, 15 and 18 inch sizes. Solid Colors Throughout.

ILLARS — new popular two inch size — quare or round. Many in latest decorator nades. Also hand decorated in peppermint tick, sculptured gold and silver as well as Christmas designs.

SPIRALITES — sixteen beautiful colors — Amethyst, Old Rose and Light Pink are shown here. In 5½″, 7½″, 9½″, and 13½″ sizes. Also hand-decorated.

Taste this liquid rainbow...the new BOLS Pousse Cafe

BOLS POUSSE CAFE. DRINK OF THE YEAR

Here's how to make it:

Place the exclusive Magifloat* in the glass. 1. Start with fine Old Forester—this will rise to the top. 2. Then pour in richly gratifying Triple Sec. 3. Follow with Blue Curaçao, exotic, inspiring. 4. Next, blushingly red Creme de Noyaux. 5. Last, tantalizing Creme de Banana. For a stroke of genius, set it alight and have a flaming Bols Pousse Cafe. Cheers!

Only by using Bols is this Pousse Cafe perfect. These delightful liqueurs are available as usual in Fifths and in new 8-ounce "Host Size" Bottles. Try it today.

*Send 25¢ for your Magifloat and recipe booklet to: Bols Magifloat, Erven Lucas Bols Distilling Co., P.O. Box 5000-B1, Spring Park, Minn. (If you simply can't wait for your Magifloat, you can start without it, but—reverse the steps and very gently pour the liqueurs over the back of a spoon.)

MAGNIFICENT FULL-COLOR ART PRINTS

Yours For As Little As $1.98

SAVE UP TO 80%

Famous art prints used by interior decorators to beautify the walls of America's smartest homes and offices—yours at a mere fraction of decorator prices. Wide choice of periods, colors, and sizes to suit the decor of every room and the taste of the people who live there. Unconditional guarantee of satisfaction. Check the list and order today.

-702. PRE-COLUMBIAN BUST: *MAYA MAIZE GOD. This statue that once decorated the exterior wall of the 8th century Temple of the sculptured Doorway at Copan, Honduras, has been hailed as the crown jewel of medieval American sculpture. Silk screened in a stone-colored brown on exquisitely textured, hand made Japanese rice paper. 36" high x 24" wide. Pub. at $20.00. Only 2.98

-766. KLEE: *ORIENTAL FESTIVAL. Trees, buildings and flowers fade into a wonderful mauve and orange background, the warm colors enlivened by cool greens and jade blues. The opaque textures and merging hues are captured by silk screening. 15½" high x 30" wide. Special 2.98

-775. PICASSO: *TWO HARLEQUINS. A favorite Picasso theme, vigorously conceived in squares, cubes and circles, in segmented sections of red, gray, black, yellow, tan and white against a tan background. Silk screen. 22" high x 17" wide. Special 2.98

-763. DUFY: *CORONATION OF KING GEORGE VI. A richly crowded scene of royal pomp and pageantry; crowded groups of people and buildings set against glowing swashes of purple, blue, green and tan, and bright red, white, blue and gold flags and banners. A glowing silk screen reproduction 26" high x 35" wide. Special 4.95

-772. KLEE: *THE LONELY ONES. A subtly colored fantasmagoria of the non-objective and the semi-abstract, in which two lonely figures wander among shapes that relate through color rather than form—soft blues and browns and vivid splashes of indigo and orange. Silk screen. 23" high x 35" wide. Special 2.98

-653. BRAQUE: *STAINED GLASS. Here at last is a reproduction of a stained glass window that does full justice to the art form—silk screened on acetate, this is a reproduction through which the light can pour, creating a luminosity and richness no ordinary picture can match. Even hung on a light colored wall it vibrates with a colorful glow, alive with its vibrant yellows and greens, its rich, deep reds and blues, its subtle browns and off-whites. This remarkable Braque is dominated by a figure only slightly abstract and by the pattern of black lines that indicate the leading. 40" high x 20½" wide. Special 5.95

P-747. VAN GOGH PORTFOLIO. Eight full-color masterpieces: The Windmill, Dutch Landscape, Boy With Blue Cap, Portrait of Dr. Gachet, Le Chaumes, Bedroom at Arles, Irises, Flowers in Copper Vase—reproduced directly from the originals in the world's leading museums. 16" x 20" portfolio. Pub. at $8.00. Only 1.98

-771. CHINESE WALL RUBBING: *CELESTIAL FIGURE WITH LUTE. This unique and exquisitely handsome decorative hanging, the original of which was carved on a cave temple wall by some unknown master before the birth of Christ, depicts a stylized angel in flight, playing a lute. Now this long-hidden masterpiece has been reproduced by silk screen on interestingly textured, hand made Japanese rice paper. 36" high x 24" wide. Special 2.98

-757. PIRANESI: *PRISONS AND INVENTIONS. The remarkable and imaginative etchings produced in the 1740's that have been described as "landscapes of the mind," and have been compared by Aldous Huxley to modern abstract and cubist art, but more forcibly expressive, because of their subject matter, of spiritual confusion. This portfolio contains 8 of these architectural fantasies. 17½" x 22½". Special 2.98

-633. PICASSO: *WHITE CLOWN. Silk screened in full color with details finished by hand, on an elegant, textured cocoa brown stock. 25" high x 20" wide. Special 1.98

P-761. CHINESE ART: *HORSES IN ACTION. A pair of highly decorative panels, eminently suitable for adding just the right touch to your home decor. Each panel features four prancing steeds, brushed in with all the simplicity and verve of the Chinese calligraphic style, in soft black strokes on a field of tan. 44" high x 14" wide. The pair, special 1.98

P-223. *JAPANESE GEISHAS. A pair of "pillar paintings" depicting a charming trio in exquisite kimonos resplendent with gorgeous indigos, purple, blue, gold, yellow, sienna, grays and black. Created by an unknown 18th century Japanese master, reproduced by collotype to capture every nuance of tone and line, including the linen texture of the original. Each panel-shaped print is 40¼" high x 16¾" wide. The pair, special 1.98

P-168. FRENCH POSTERS: *PICASSO, CHAGALL, LEGER, MIRO, MATISSE. A portfolio of 8 brilliantly colored posters that will add a sophisticated sparkle to your library, den, office or living room. Reproduced directly from the original lithographs, their large size (16" x 20") makes them ideal for hanging singly or in a group. Pub. at $8.00. Only 2.98

WINSLOW HOMER WATERCOLORS

Beautiful watercolors from the collection of the Metropolitan Museum of Art, in silk screen reproductions of amazing fidelity, made from 19 hand-blocked screens to assure verisimilitude of color, line and texture.

P-723. SLOOP, BERMUDA. Painted in loose, sweeping brushstrokes, but marked by Homer's expert draftsmanship; richly colored in vibrant blues and greens and soft, creamy whites, it fully evokes the atmosphere of the sea against a storm-gathering sky. 15" high x 21½" wide. Special 2.98

P-724. FISHING BOATS, KEY WEST. A small boat, its sails furled, anchored in calm water alongside a boat in deep shadow; the white of the boat contrasts sharply with the shadows, the leaden sky, and the high-key blue of the water. 14" high x 21¾" wide. Special 2.98

P-558. CHINESE WALL PAINTINGS: *SINGING CRANES. A breathtakingly beautiful pair of bird portraits by the 14th century Ming artist, Wen Cheng. Every detail of feather and form is here in glowing scarlet, ash white, yellow and black, balanced by graceful ideographic characters in black, creating a composition of exquisite symmetry. Reproduced on simulated-linen-paper-weave panels, each measuring 39" high x 14⅛" wide. The pair, special 2.98

P-739. FRIEZE FROM A CHINESE TOMB. This silk-screen reproduction in red pigment of a priceless Chinese stone rubbing made over 2,000 years ago is the perfect center of interest for that important wall in your house. Every mark, every scar on the stone appears as it was executed for the Chinese master of the Chang Dynasty. The print is 15" high x 52" long, and its panel shape blends equally well with modern or traditional settings. Very special, only 4.95

P-304. UTRILLO: *MONTMARTRE STREET SCENES. Portfolio of 8 Parisian street scenes in the delicately colored tonalities that have made his moody landscapes collectors' favorites. Each full-color plate measures 16" x 20". Includes—Montmartre Street, Place de Tertre, The Garden of Montmartre, Rue de Montmartre, Montmartre Corner, Montmartre Scene, Le Lapin Agile and Village Road. Pub. at $10.00. Only 1.98

P-762. *ANCESTRAL CHINESE PORTRAITS. Since ancient times ancestors have been worshipped in China as sacred beings; every noble household treasured ancestor-portraits such as these, upon which the greatest artists lavished their genius. These noble ancient portraits, depicting figures in the regal splendor of their richly colored vestments, are serigraphed by hand on imported Japanese silk paper in a magnificent harmony of colors. Each limited edition portrait is on an 18" x 36" scroll with wooden dowels top and bottom. The pair, special 9.95

P-736. MATISSE: *MURALS. Two of the last works of Matisse, Snow Flowers and Vegetables; each of these highly decorative panels measures 35½" high x 14" wide. Brilliant white design flowers set against vivid blocks of green, orange, maroon and beige; and highly stylized vegetables in white, green, yellow and blue against panels of orange, gray, red, tan, and maroon. Limited edition serigraphs, from hand-cut stencils. Special 2.98

P-654. CHINESE SCROLL ON SILK: *WATERFALL. A charming oriental landscape painted by Tsu Tuah during the reign of Yi Tsung Lieh, in the year Chung Cheng. Tsu Tuah is considered by oriental critics of Chinese aesthetics to have been the most inspired landscape artist of the Ming Dynasty. The ancient, mellow, soft colors used by Tsu Tuah give this famous "waters and mountains" genre landscape a gentle loveliness and tender beauty unique in the history of art. A 36-inch silk scroll, 20" wide, with ribbon for hanging and wooden dowels at each end. Special 9.95

P-200. A PORTFOLIO OF CATS. Contemporary artists Le Ba Dang, Deshima and Yeisha have captured every nuance of careless grace, every expressive look and movement of their feline subjects in six exquisite pen and wash sketches in blue, green and black. Each plate measures 14" x 17". Pub. at $15.00. Only 2.98

PICASSO BULLFIGHT POSTERS

Hand-blocked silk screen reproductions of visually exciting Picasso creations, posters that capture all the color, fanfare and ceremony of the corrida. 30" high x 23" wide. Each, special 1.98—All four only 6.95

P-707. MATADOR. A stunning closeup of a matador in gold and black, fully delineating the richness of his costume.

P-756. TOROS. A magnificent design creation of matador, bull, bullring and spectators, in yellow, white, red, green, blue and black.

P-770. BRAQUE: *TORERO. A fascinating blend of stylization and abstraction in which an almost realistic but highly designed torero, in black and white, waves his red cape at a decidedly abstract brown bull, with a picador and the stands outlined against the gray wash background. Silk screen. 14" wide x 20" high. Special 4.95

P-664. PICASSO: *BOY IN HARLEQUIN JACKET. A tall, thin, wistful looking figure, deep-eyed and brown-haired, stands in profile in a salmon colored outfit with white frills at collar and cuffs, against a warm gray background. Silk screen. 35" high x 23" wide. Special 2.98

P-767. DUFY: *HARLEQUIN. A truly remarkable silk screen reproduction of a gaily dressed Harlequin in a Venetian Piazza that expresses the essence of Dufy's art. The actual picture area is 20" wide x 26" high; 18 separate screens have been used to create an incredibly faithful reproduction that captures the rare decorative quality and luminosity of the impressive original. Special 4.95

P-768. *FLOCK OF CRANES. By Korin Ogata (1603-1680) leading Japanese artist of the period. The stylized rendering and grouping of this procession of graceful, long-legged birds typifies the extraordinary sense of line and balance that has made Japanese art so popular. In this handsome silk screen reproduction the cranes, in black, white and gray, strut against a soft brown background and a curved black river bend. 20" high x 35" wide. Special 2.98

P-764. MARINI: *MAN ON HORSEBACK. A magnificent silkscreen reproduction in red, gray, chartreuse and black of a man on a horse by the famous Italian modern; framed or unframed, an ideal conversation piece for home or office. 25" high x 20" wide. Special 2.98

P-765. MARINI: *THE RIDER. Dazzling linear vitality, bold use of color and decorative near-abstraction of forms mark this handsome silkscreen reproduction in which tones of black and brown are set against a powerful field of red. 25" high x 20" wide. Special 2.98

P-725. KLEE: *BLUE EYED FISH. A superbly executed silk screen reproduction of a delightful composition of two highly stylized and slightly X-rayed fish with big, blue eyes and burnt sienna tails. Predominant colors are gray and blue, against a heavily textured ochre background. Irregular 15" x 25" area on white sheet 20" high x 32" wide. Special 2.98

ILLUMINATED MUSIC MANUSCRIPTS

Rare and beautiful 16th-century European decorative pages of music. The bars of music, hand-lettered in black and red, are set next to magnificent initial letters with exquisite floriation in gold, purple, green, red and blue. Each is re-created on a sheet of imported vellum that simulates exactly the time-worn beauty of the original and makes unique item of interior decoration. 27½" high x 19¾" wide.

P-776. MUSIC MANUSCRIPT I. From Spanish Source. Special 4.95

P-777. MUSIC MANUSCRIPT II. From German Source. Special 4.95

THE PAIR OF MANUSCRIPTS Special 8.95

JUNG IN KWAN'S TOTAL ASSETS

A discarded hat—a man's ragged suit—a look of hunger. These are all that 10-year-old Jung In Kwan has in the world.

Father and mother living? Jung In Kwan's father was killed in an avalanche. His mother died in a dynamite blast. He is alone.

Visible means of support? Well, Jung In Kwan does have a job of sorts. It is begging for food scraps to fill his gnawing stomach.

Any references? Yes, Jung In Kwan can refer you to several thousand orphans on the streets of Seoul. They are in the same business. They can tell you about his experience in aching hunger—lonely nights—frostbitten hands and feet. They can tell you of closed doors — indifferent crowds—dying friends.

Prospects for the future? Almost certain death for Jung In Kwan and many of his friends. Unless—unless a friendly hand sends help. One can "adopt" such a boy or girl by sending $10 a month to the Christian Children's Fund. This opens a door to one of the 91 CCF-affiliated orphanages in Korea. Such support lets in a hungry child. Indeed, any gift, large or small, from an American heart and pocket can save the life of a little boy or girl.

The cake Jung In Kwan is eating was given to him by a CCF worker who later admitted him to a CCF orphanage school. He no longer will be one of the unhappy half of the world's children. For every other child in the world goes to bed hungry every night. Communism's strongest ally is hunger. While most of us worry about excess weight, children starve because of the lack of a couple of pennies' worth of rice.

The cost of an "adoption" is the same in any of the countries listed.

Christian Children's Fund, incorporated in 1938, with its 391 affiliated orphanage schools in 41 countries, is the largest Protestant orphanage organization in the world, assisting over 34,000 children. It serves 30 million meals a year. It is registered with the Advisory Committee on Voluntary Aid of the International Cooperation Administration of the United States Government. It is experienced, efficient, economical and conscientious.

AGED LIKE VINTAGE WINE

VIRGINIA HAM

NEARLY 300 years ago, Virginia colonists sent to England hams of a distinctive savory flavor that soon were acclaimed by gourmet and royalty throughout the capitals of Europe. Both the fame and famous flavor have endured. Today, as then, the true Virginia ham is one of the world's delicacies.

Each magnificent ham now hanging in our aging rooms, slowly cured, smoked to a rich mahogany hue, aged approx. one year, has been tended by hand through each unhurried step—as we have done for the past 120 years. These carefully selected hams are put down in dry salt in cool cellars for 25 to 45 days, and turned often. The salt is removed and the ham allowed to mature for three weeks. Next it is rubbed by hand with a thick coat of black pepper. Then it goes into the smokehouse to hang for 30 days and nights over hand tended fires, until the juices drip and the dense, pungent hickory smoke permeates and flavors the meat. Then to darkened aging rooms, to hang for months.

And finally, just before shipment, each ham (in a 40-hour process) is soaked, simmered, the skin removed, the fat trimmed, then glazed with sugar and baked with wine to a savory feast of firm, sweet and tender meat.

Your Jordan's ham arrives ready to be enjoyed, needs no heating. It keeps for weeks and weeks. Traditional for Christmas dinner . . . perfect for cocktail party or buffet.

Sealed in cellophane, nested in burgundy tissue in Old Virginia Smokehouse box (carving, serving and keeping suggestions enclosed), here is a magnificent gift for those you especially wish to please this year, and a grand treat for your family.

We guarantee complete satisfaction. Weight 8 to 15 lbs. cooked; $1.89 per lb. (net cooked wt.) shipped anywhere in continental U. S. Shipped anywhere in world for $2.24 per lb. Please specify whether wanted now; for Christmas; or other date.

new! 2-in-1 Book Ends

SELF ADJUSTING!

Hold Books — and Records — Upright any place on shelf!

Ingenious 2-in-1 idea! New Aluminum post support books and store records—upright on shelf! Hold up floppy folders and magazines too. It's the smart, decorative way to end the untidy look of leaning books, the damaging effects of stacking books and records on their sides. Posts adjust automatically to any shelf height of 9" to 13½". Inside spring action holds posts steady, rubber tips at top and bottom won't scratch. Your choice of 2 good-looking modern finishes—anodized Gold or Satin Black. Specify finish. Satisfaction is guaranteed or your money back. Set of 2 Only $2.50 Pr. for $4.75

KIRKWOOD CO., Box 66-A, Burlington, Iowa

UP A TREE like this one, you'll find 22 neighborly little creatures of the woods living harmoniously. Bears, birds, squirrels, beavers, and foxes (all enchanting Steiff miniatures) inhabit the kitchen, living room, and bedroom of this charming three-story, tree-trunk home. Over 27" high, all-wood house and furniture, $75 exp. coll. (Wt. 22 lbs.) F. A. O. Schwartz, 5th at 58th St., New York 22.

OUR COLONIAL COUSINS would recognize the antique mellow brown finish on this knotty pine box, the early American feeling it has—but can you imagine their reaction to the less-work-for-Mom paper napkins we can't live without? 7½ sq. x 3" deep, napkin holder comes to the table or hangs on the wall. $4.50. The Lennox Shop, Hewlett, New York.

HOT TIP for a hostess famous for her parties is the Luau burner. Hawaiian version of the Hibachi has a polished aluminum volcano with open flame for grilling spicy sausages, tiny kabobs. And guests can twirl their own on wooden-handled skskewers. Copper burner uses alcohol, comes with fruitwood tray 11 x 8", 4 skewers, $10. Extra skewers, 50¢ ea. Malcolm's, 309 Reistertown, Baltimore 1, Md.

ARE YOU A KEEPER? Indulge your saving ways and treat yourself to a handsome Florentine box to guard your coin collection from a jaunt abroad, a group of first-edition stamps, match boxes from famous restaurants. You may choose 8½ x 10½" size at $15 or 6 x 8" at $6. Both are lapped with reproductions of old French sailing ship prints. Viarego, Box 257, Larchmont, New York.

An extension is welcome where the family relaxes

Home-wide Telephone Convenience

Winter brings so much to plan, so much to do! And in the thick of all your family's activities will be the telephone.

What better reason, then, for placing extension phones in your home where they'll be most useful and convenient for everyone?

For instance, pick locations where individuals spend a lot of time . . . bedrooms, the kitchen, a basement workshop. And also where the family gets together . . . the den, the living room and the game room.

For every location you choose, you'll find telephones in color that fit in beautifully. Extensions are surprisingly low in cost and very easy to order: just call or visit your Bell Telephone business office.

Extensions are handy where hobbies are enjoyed

A kitchen phone saves steps and time for everyone

Phones in teen-agers' rooms give desirable privacy and convenience

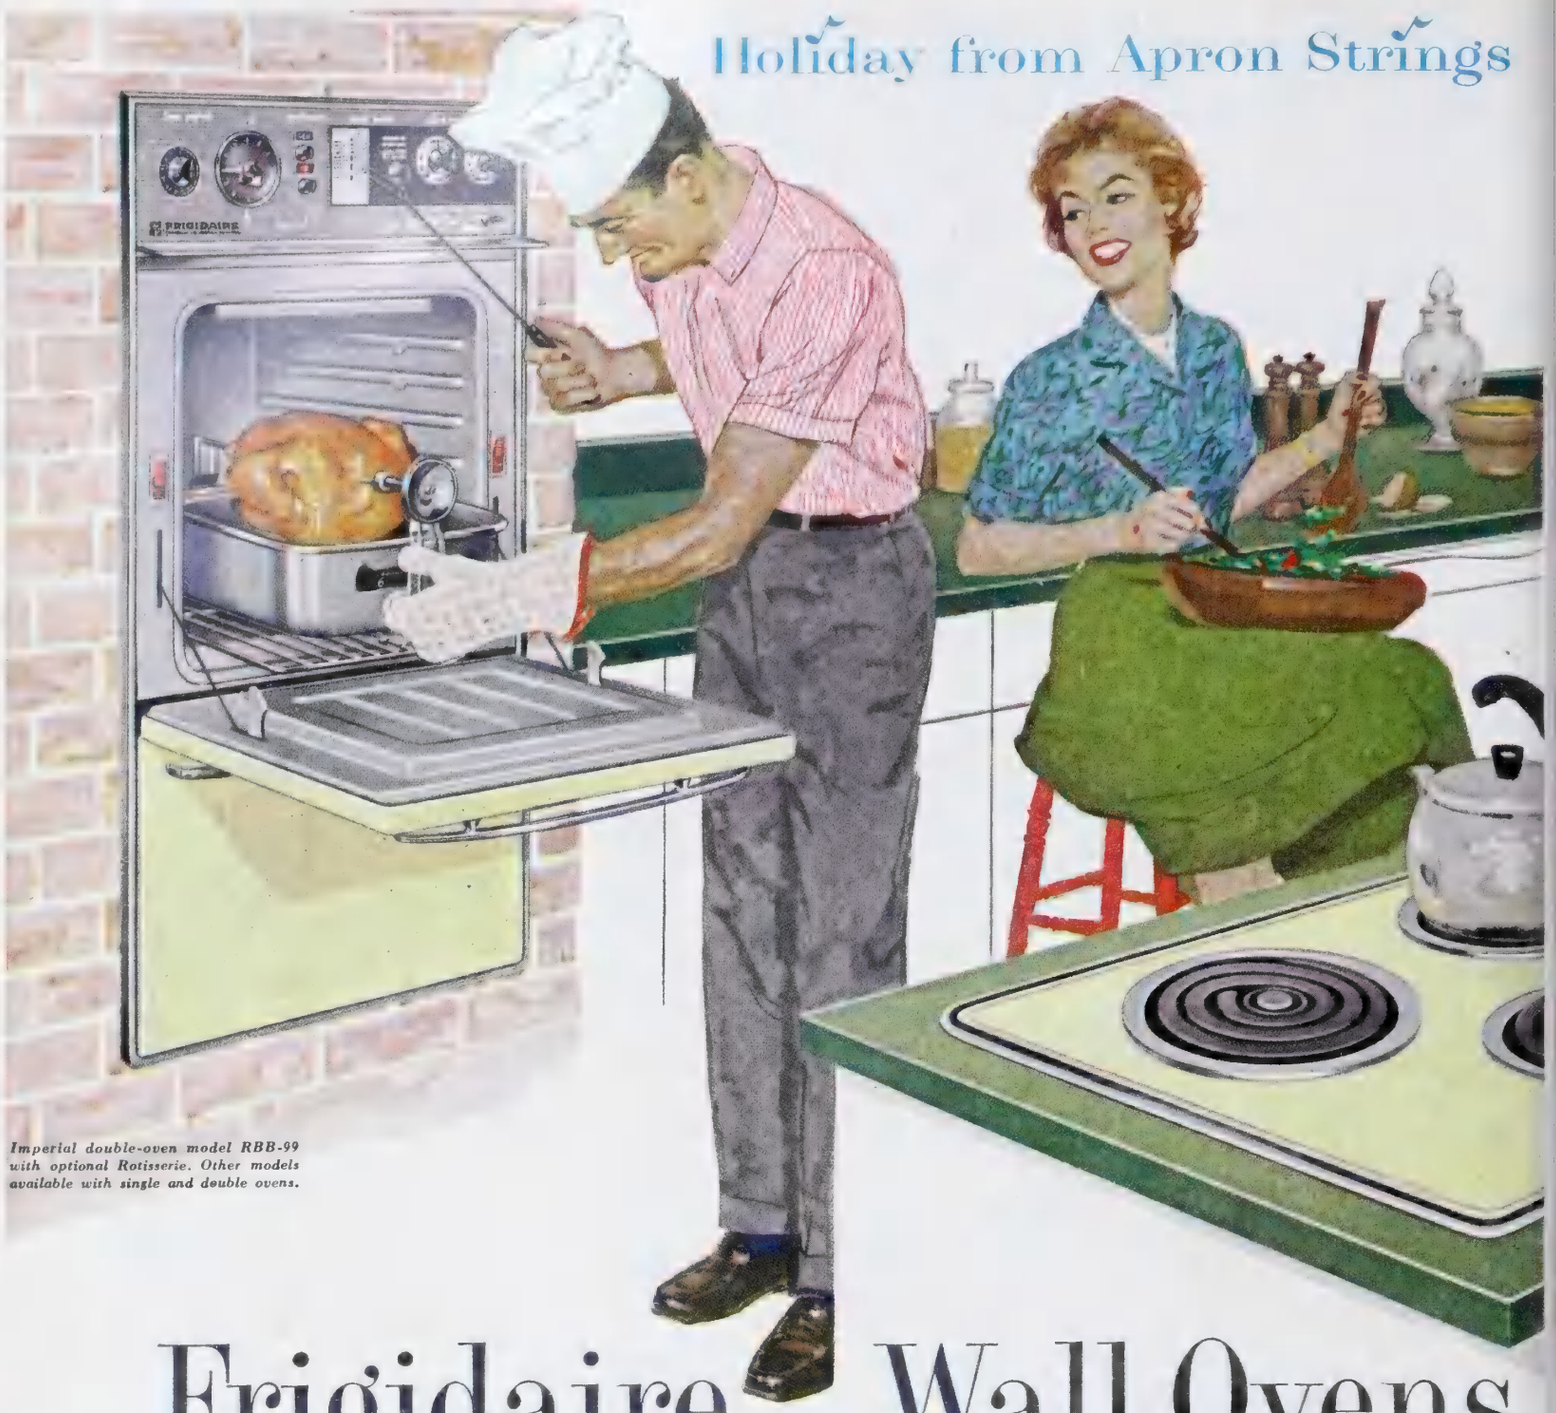
Dorothy Draper says..."Dine in outdoor splendor...indoors!"



all three...fabrics, carpets and wallpapers...by Schumacher's

The design ingenuity of Dorothy Draper is beautifully displayed in this festive trend-setting indoor dining pavilion. The gaiety and color excitement is provided by Schumacher's fine decorative fabrics and regal carpeting, against a background of the romantic wallpaper, "Gran Via."

Whatever the decorating challenge in fabric, carpet or wallpaper, the perfect answer to all three can always be found at one outstanding source... Schumacher's. There's a world of difference, except in price. Available through decorators and decorating departments of fine stores.

THE MYSTERIOUS

LITTLE BLACK BOX

There it sits, the little Black Box, the most intriguing intellectual novelty in a hundred years . . . quiet, sinister and waiting. The switch is thrown to "ON". Immediately there is a grinding of power as the box mysteriously starts jumping. Then the lid slowly rises, and from beneath it emerges a hand. The hand grabs the switch, pushes it to "OFF" and quickly disappears back into the box. The lid slams shut and all is as it was. IT DOES NOTHING — ABSOLUTELY NOTHING — EXCEPT SWITCH ITSELF OFF. It has a fantastic psychological impact. Once seen—never forgotten. $4.98 plus 25¢ postage. Satisfaction guaranteed.

176 Cutting Edges of This All-Purpose

Gourmet's Carver

Glide thru ROASTS, HAM, FOWL

Actually has 22 "corruserrated" cutting edges per inch of blade!

Now—for the first time in this country—the revolutionary "corruserrated" Sheffield Carver with 176 cutting blades! Gives you WAFER THIN slices that retain ALL the juices. Sharpens itself as you use it!

Here's the most amazing Carving Knife ever designed for the pleasures of eating! Ordinary knives tear thru meat and squeeze the juicy goodness out—but not this revolutionary patented invention! The All-Purpose Gourmet's Carver is made with a remarkable 8-inch blade actually containing 176 cutting edges. This amazing edge has razor-sharp blades alternating with chisel-action ridges, with grooves to prevent clogging. It's unbelievable how Gourmet's Carver glides thru ham, beef, fowl, game—never disturbing the juices within. Gourmet's Carver never needs sharpening! Continuous use forms a constantly new razor-sharp cutting edge.

This is the remarkable "corruserrated" edge that actually flows through tough leather. You can slice WAFER THIN meat, vegetables, tomatoes, onions, etc.—make your dinner table a joy to look at!

Carver is made in England of finest SHEFFIELD STAINLESS STEEL with PERMANENT MIRROR FINISH. Beautifully white and balanced handle for sure grip and perfect slicing. Order NOW for luxurious dining at home—or give as most unusual holiday gift. LIFETIME GUARANTEE covering replacement or reconditioning WITHOUT CHARGE. Attractively sleeved and boxed—ONLY $6 POSTPAID, or C.O.D. plus postage. Extra-heavy CAPTAIN'S CARVER with 9 in. blade and white handle only $8.

Long Wearing, Hand-Made ROPE DOORMAT

We were "roped in", and very pleasantly we might add, by this remarkable LOVER'S KNOT DOORMAT fashioned in 5 passes from heavy ¾" rope. The long lasting, nonslip rug does a bang-up dirt collecting chore under continuous foot traffic while remaining flat at all times. Traditionally nautical, this New England mariner's favorite adds distinction to any home. Weather actually improves it. The spliced ends and hand stitching mean permanent shape. Measures 18" x 30".

MOTOROLA TELEVISION AND STEREO HI-FI

in handsome cabinets of the Drexel Touraine collection

Motorola Television presents all the charm of French Provincial styling in a fine-furniture cabinet of the Drexel Touraine grouping.

New big 23″ over-all diagonal measure (283 sq. in. viewing area) screen-filling pictures are boldly real—clear and clean cut. And stay that way, too. The cabinet . . . in genuine walnut veneer with nut-brown Chateau finish . . . features sliding tambour doors to hide screen and controls when TV is not being used.

Below: Motorola Stereo Hi-Fi in Drexel Touraine cabinetry. Full-toned realism is reproduced by three separate amplifiers and three separate speaker systems. New Channel Balance Verifier control assures perfect stereo effect in any room. Exciting new sound of exclusive Vibrasonic system adds concert-hall realism to the dimension of stereo.

Modavanti—Mediterranean inspiration by Heritage at prices you can well afford

Heritage is famous for interpreting the best of the past in furniture for today and the future. Now, inspired by arts and architecture of Italy, France and Spain, they have designed Modavanti—brilliant new collection with lasting importance for tomorrow. Modavanti translates in warm, mellow fruitwood motifs borrowed from antique treasures, bronzes and marbles. A Renaissance knocker provides the hardware design. Touches of color and fruit patterns remind you of Della Robbia. Advanced techniques and cost-saving skills of Heritage craftsmen keep prices—for living, dining and bedroom pieces—at a minimum for such lifetime quality.

Mail ten cents for brochure of complete Modavanti collection, or fifty cents for extensive booklet of all Heritage living, dining, bedroom collections, to Heritage Furniture, Inc., Dept. HB-11, High Point, North Carolina.

WHAT'S CHRISTMAS without glowing candles and glossy holly? These are traditional decorations that are as beloved to us as the children's carols. This Tri-labra of gleaming brass plate with fresh-cut holly sprays and 6 red tapers makes a thoughtful gift. Delivery about Dec. 15th unless otherwise specified. $3.95. Northwest Corner Store, HB11, Longview 71, Washington.

DO YOU LOVE A MAN who dresses as if he were tailored by Saville Row, finds fabulous French bistros, makes you feel as chic as a mannequin, fascinating as Scheherezade? Then his gift must be as memorable as these emerald-cut amethyst or topaz cuff links wrapped in 14k gold, with Continental backs. Stones are ½" l., ⅝" w. $24 pr. tax incl. Merrin's, HB11, 530 Madison, N.Y.C. 22.

EVEN A DUFFER will keep his eye on this ball. It's the 1960 Titleist (a name that will earn him the respect of his caddie), and it's personalized so there will be no argument about whose ball is on the green. A dozen Titleists, ea. marked with his name (print name up to 18 letters), are grandly boxed for Xmas. $14.85. Achushnet Process Sales Co., HB11, New Bedford, Mass.

TANTAL-EYES. that's what a lady must do. And of course she must carry the tools of her trickery everywhere she goes. ## Show of the year: Cabin Crafts new "Collector's Group" rugs

You can't blame a man for dawdling when the museum exhibits Cabin Crafts rugs. These beautiful designs bring out the artist in everyone. Of course, we really make them to decorate the floor in traditional or contemporary homes. With those out-of-this-spectrum colors and intriguing textures, each one might be a showpiece crafted for you by hand. Yet, like all our rugs and carpets, that look of extravagance belies their reasonable price. Clockwise from bottom: "Marrakech," 4′ x 6′, $69.95. "Brookridge," 4′ x 6′, $44.95. "Biscay," 4′ 4″ x 7′ 6″, $49.95. "Madrid," 3′ x 6′ 6″, $69.95. "Footlights," 3′ x 5′, $19.95. "Octagon," 6′ x 6′, $59.95. High-fashion has entered the tool realm. The innovation, Ladyfingers Compact, can hang or stand; its glamour incites display. Toolrack leaf has show-case front; tiltout bins with nails, etc., fill rear unit. Tools, chrome with lustrous black handles, are beauties: precision-made, engineered for the woman's hand. Plastic case. Coral, citron yellow, sand, or black. $19.95. Abercrombie & Fitch, New York, Chicago, San Francisco.

Elegance like this gives new stature to plastic dinnerware; the ware is Enchanted Garden by Oneida. Color design, blended shadings of lapis blue on translucent white, accents pattern's delicacy and graceful sweep. Made of luxury-quality melamine, satin finish. Service for 8, $49.95; 5-piece setting, open stock, $10.65. Flatware is Oneida "stainless" in Driftwood pattern; 5-piece setting $7.98. All from Macy's, New York 1.

This miniature chest in original use was a shaving stand. In modern use, it affords the distaff side ideal kitchen facilities for last-minute primping, or, stationed in entry hall, it serves guests. Hand-crafted of solid pine; hand-rubbed finish has antique patina true to chest's authentic American-Chippendale design. Size 26½″ x 13″ x 6″. Mirror inset is plate glass. $25. From Greenbaum's, 105 Washington St., Paterson 1, New Jersey.

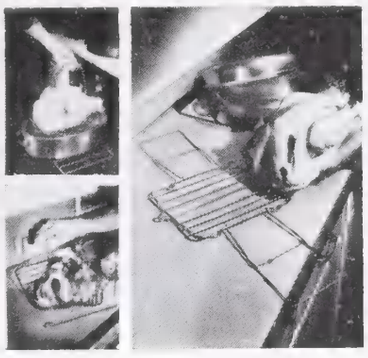
Luxurious coverlet duplicates a beautiful quilt of Early American origin; even hand-sewn effect is authentically captured. Appliqué motifs mingle green, blue, gold, and red. Silky poplin, sheer as batiste, encases soft Dacron filling. End result is feather-weight and supple. Finely done quilting has permanent lock-stitching. Floor length on twin beds; overlaps dust-ruffle in use on full-size beds. $59.95. W & J Sloane, N. Y. 17.

Circusland service from England proves design selectivity has value even where decorative goal is small-fry enchantment; a painless way to instill appreciation of fine things. Decorations are multi-color stripes, blue-and-white "tweed." The Mason Ironstone is fine glazed earthenware, light-weight yet hardy. Toddler bowl, $2.60. Plate, bowl, and mug, $3.50. Carl Forslund, 122 Fulton St., Grand Rapids, Mich.



Rod'R'Ring, ready-made yardage for café curtains, is merely cut into panels, hemmed at sides, hung. Just a heading fold-down shortens 33″ curtain; $2.25 a yd. Valance 11″ or 18″ (used for coverlet) $1.25, $1.35 a yard. Yellow, pink, blue, red, or green Schiffli embroidery on white Everglaze cotton. Design is Disneyland; floral designs are available. Idea booklet for Rod'R'Ring décor supplied. Ordering address Box 21, Valhalla, N. Y.

Unrolled, Roney Tote Bag forms 10-bushel leaf bin; rolled size is 3′ x 6″. When collecting, it lies lengthwise against the ground. Wood frame keeps it wide open; wood spikes provide windproof anchorage. For tote-ing, open end becomes a closure with grab handle. Made of heavy-duty burlap. Selected by U. S. Agricultural Department for International Horticultural Exposition. $5.95. Roney's, 601 W. 103rd St., Chicago 28.

Turkey or roast is pre-cradled by Androck lifter when set into roaster; automatically leaves pan in the cradle for transfer to platter or board. Here, central pin-removal divides lifter into separable halves for automatic unloading. Sectionally hinged for flexible fit. Meat stand, adjustable to fit any roaster, is steel-wire grille on legs; drippings have usual pan zone. $1.98; Washburn Co., Worcester 8, Mass.

Ornamental Cabinet-Susan is a new Flint Cook'N'Serve set by Ekco. Implements (6), gleaming stainless steel with melamine handles, have beauty benefits of fine materials and interesting styling; effectively decorated with beige, umber, and metallic gold on white. Safely machine-washable. Revolving hang-ring unites hardwood and etched "stainless." Comes with Cabinet-Susan or Counter-Susan, $19.95. Bloomingdale's, New York 22, N.Y.

"The whole world on a plate"

Through travel, we Americans have the greatest opportunity of any people to understand the world we live in. But are we taking full advantage of our big chance? Here we do some soul-searching

By MARION GOUGH

● The current October-through-March, 17-day excursion air rates that can get you across the Atlantic and back for $290 are the latest reminder that it's getting easier and easier for more people to go more places. As Americans, we are particularly blessed with the opportunity to see the world. We have more leisure, more money, more transportation facilities, and fewer restrictions on our comings and goings than any other people on earth. In a manner of speaking, we have the whole world on a plate. If anyone should be a well-informed citizen of the globe, it is the American.

We are privileged. But as they use to say in France, "Noblesse oblige," meaning that along with privilege goes responsibility. In these times, the American traveler's responsibility is staggering. We don't mean the obvious necessity of minding our manners when we go abroad. (Our national away-from-home behavior has been improving markedly.) We mean, rather, our urgent need to understand the meaning behind what we see and hear in distant places, then to relate it to our own lives and the points of view by which we live them. Today we are missing the boat rather crucially if we don't pay as much (Please turn to page 302)

WEAVERS OF FINE CARPETS AND RUGS

House Beautiful
NOVEMBER • 1960

This living room reflects the elegance of times gone by, yet it does so in a very contemporary, very personal manner. The rest of the house is explored on the pages that follow.

How people are achieving a new elegance

● Elegance at one time was the special province of the ruler who, for his court and courtiers, set its pace, established its form, and decreed its unwritten laws. As we know, it was often an arbitrary expression of his personal tastes or whims, and, in a few instances, his idiosyncracies.

Social customs change slowly. A similar practice continued after the monarchs disappeared. Elegance remained the private domain of the chosen (sometimes self-selected) few.

But, with a freer social structure and a more general enjoyment of wealth and leisure, this domain has been more widely explored. Fresh interpretations are appearing. We have many varied forms of elegance, not just one.

In the following pages you will see some of these forms, how some people are introducing elegance into their lives. Perhaps you may discover some clue, or clues, to the style of elegance appropriate to your life.

Shown first are two houses. Although these were designed by the same architects and are built on similar sites, they are different interpretations of elegance, determined by the particular needs and interests of their owners and shaped to the pattern of their personal and social lives.

Following these we show examples of how, without going all out and starting afresh, you can, within your present circumstances, enjoy some degree of elegance—be it in a meal or with a finely fitted piece of furniture.

Reminiscence of the past in a house for our time

By CURTIS BESINGER

ALL PHOTOGRAPHS BY DEARBORN-MASSAR

A covered terrace, reminiscent of the peristyles surrounding the courtyards of Pompeiian houses, extends along one side of the garden court and shelters the wall of glass of the main living area. It is terminated by the kitchen wing at one end (photo above) and by bedroom wing at the other (right).

● When Mr. and Mrs. William K. Blethen first met their architects, they had definite ideas concerning the environment in which they wished to live. In addition to their room requirements they named such desires as balconies, a Pompeiian villa, and the flavor of a Southern mansion. They also wanted to furnish the house with their collection of 18th-century furniture.

If these desires had been superficially understood and literally interpreted, the result might have been a strangely-mixed pastiche. However, realizing that these seemingly unrelated desires represented, in essence, one basic quality, Architects Terry and Moore designed for them a house that is an interpretation of this quality in contemporary terms. The things that they had named were representative of eras in which life had been elegantly lived.

Strictly speaking the house is neither Pompeiian nor ante-bellum. The forms of neither are imitated in it. But it does contain many of the qualities of both.

Embodied in its plan is the gracious sense of hospitality that we associate with the Southern mansion. It has a stately elegance in its high (Please turn the page) ceilings and in its slender-proportioned screens and the door and window openings. Its simple, subdued, and softly lighted interiors provide a harmonious and sympathetic background for the collection of 18th-century antiques around which it was planned. Its balconies and covered terrace are reminiscent of the South.

But the covered terrace is also reminiscent of the peristyles surrounding the courtyards of Pompeiian villas, and it serves much the same purpose as a sheltered outdoor living space, even though it is not of the same form.

The house is built around a courtyard somewhat in the manner of a Pompeiian villa; the living areas open into it and it provides a means of circulation between rooms as well as a kind of focal point. Open to the sky, it is bounded on three sides by the walls of the house, one of these being the glass wall of the living room. From the court one can look through the windows on the opposite side of the living room and toward a sweeping view of the surrounding landscape. The enclosure is completed on the fourth side by the retaining walls necessary to hold back the earth on this, the uphill side. In order to secure a level outdoor area on the steeply sloping site it was necessary to cut into the hillside.

But even though the house is partially built into the slope (the interior floors are below the ground level at some points) the floor of the (Please turn the page)

In the section through the house and site one can see how, although the main living level is well above the ground level near the street, the garden courtyard is partially cut into a slope and how the concrete or stone retaining walls complete the enclosure of the court on the side not enclosed by walls of house. Note the handling of garage doors making them a pleasant feature of the façade. Also, how the garage wall, moved out beyond the front wall of living room to secure added depth for cars, is used as a horizontal base to reduce the apparent height of the house.

Grace and ease were objectives in solving site problems

The main entrance is reached by several short flights of broad and generously proportioned steps. As can be seen in the plan on the opposite page, the stairs leading to the entrance are interrupted by several landings. Because of the great number of steps required here, these landings plus the change in direction make the total number of steps seem fewer and less formidable. These pauses in the ascent give it elements of grace and ease and make it more inviting and hospitable. A continuous, steep flight of stairs will discourage all but the hardiest of guests.

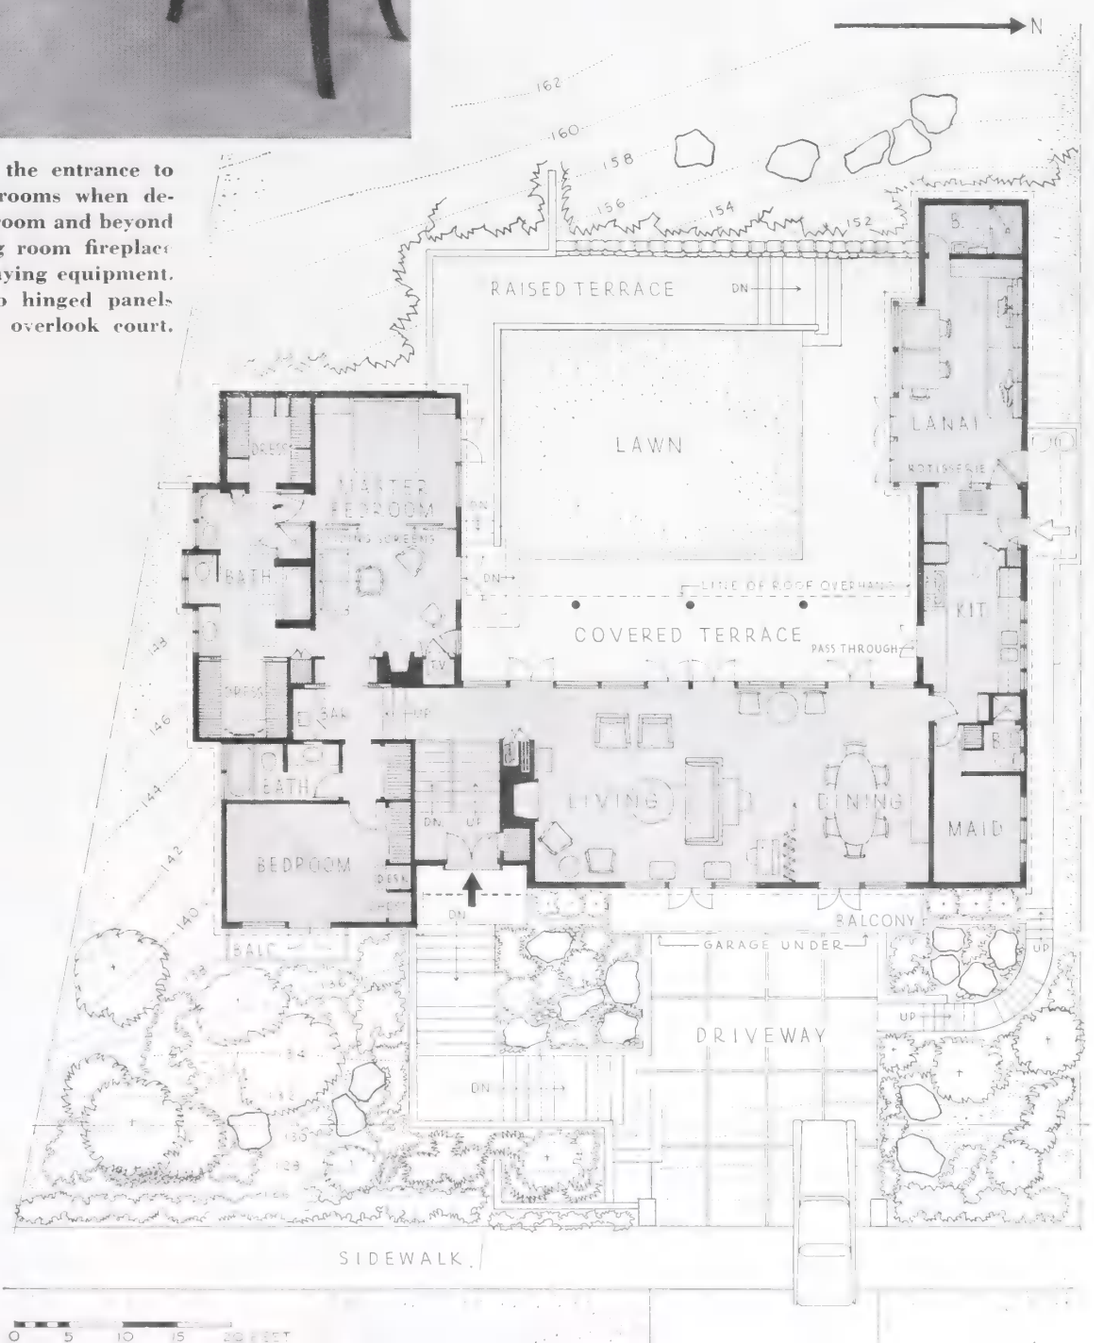
The master bedroom, seen here from the entrance to the suite, can be separated into two rooms when desirable. In the foreground is the sitting room and beyond it the sleeping room. Beside the sitting room fireplace is a closet concealing TV and record-playing equipment. Sliding panels are similar in detail to hinged panels of living room. Tall windows at right overlook court.



The large and luxuriously appointed master bath has dressing rooms at either end. Flush translucent panels in center of ceiling and also over the lavatory counters diffuse both natural and artificial light. Note the simplicity of detailing of tub and shower and how the marble surfaces around tub are continued as one wall of the glass-enclosed shower compartment.

The plan has none of the formal symmetry associated traditionally with living elegantly. But a study of the plan, together with the photos, will reveal that, although the forms associated with elegance in the past are not present, the spirit (which is what is important) is. It is in the many refinements planned for the comfort and convenience of guests and owners. It is in the carefully considered relationships of the living room, the courtyard and terrace, and the kitchen, enabling the owners to entertain either formally or more casually with equal grace and ease.

The enclosed lanai is somewhat detached from the main living areas (see plan). Located near the kitchen, it was designed as a pavilion to be used for more casual entertaining, but it is adaptable to many uses. Because of the adjoining bath, it can be used as a guest room if needed. It serves as a kind of hideaway library or den. It is also used occasionally for a breakfast room.

Charcoal broiling is a part of the pleasure of many informal suppers. Here the process can be enjoyed without going into the kitchen or "roughing-it" outdoors. Note that top half of dutch door at left of rotisserie also opens as pass-through.

The lanai, used for informal entertaining, is planned and furnished with an equal regard for appropriate nicety

A pass-through opens from the kitchen to the covered terrace seen in photos on page 199. This convenience eliminates extra work when serving lunch or refreshments in the atrium-like garden into which the main living areas open.

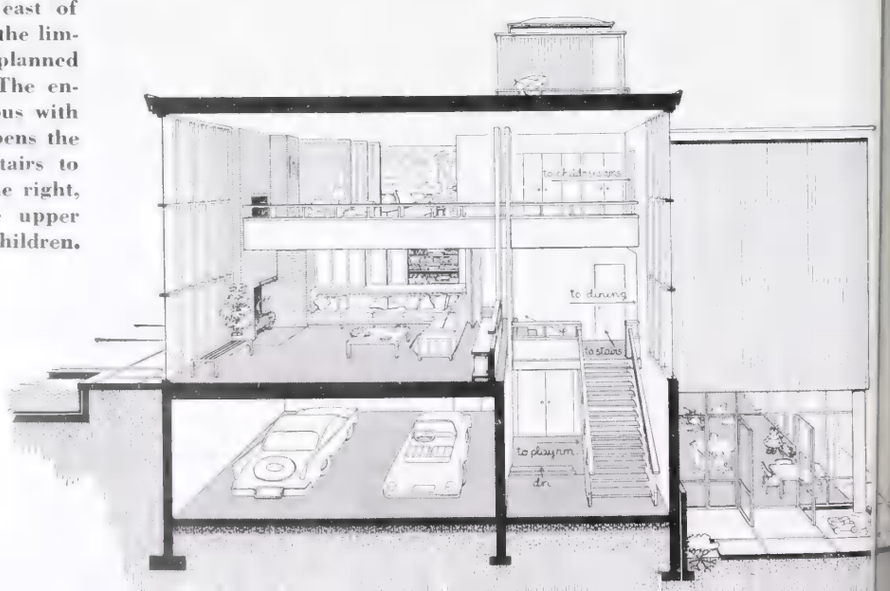
The panel in the opening between lanai and kitchen slides up into the wall to make the rotisserie accessible for use in the lanai. When closed, the panel is nearly flush with the wall and unobtrusive (above). Note the absence of any projecting moldings. When open, what is seen is equally sleek and presentable.

The kitchen has a kind of shipshape trimness that comes from a thoughtful selection of materials and a careful putting together of the essential and necessary elements. There is nothing extraneous added just to get some effect. Note how the lofty ceilings of the house here make possible the high windows above the cabinets over the sink. Facing north there is never any problem of light control, and at this height the distribution of light is general.

living room, on the side near the street is about twenty feet above the level of the street. This height created a difficult problem in the design of the entrance. Lowering the house deeper into the hillside would not have been a satisfactory solution.

The height was reduced somewhat by the upward slope of the entrance drive. The effect of the remaining height was modified by the design of the generously proportioned entrance stairway. Several turns and landings were introduced to reduce the apparent height and to provide pauses making the ascent less hurried and easier.

Only a thoughtless or anti-social host would confront his guests with a formidably steep and uninviting stair. This would discourage all but the hardiest. The awareness and consideration involved here are characteristic of the design of this house. It is a quality not readily apparent, but it is one that helps to make the guest (as well as the owner) comfortable and to put him at ease.



The house has none of the stiff and formal symmetry that was considered a part of elegance in the past. In its place is a kind of casual dignity that is appropriate for either formal or informal occasions.

Its plan is an expression of the personal needs and the social pattern of its occupants' lives rather than some preconceived idea of abstract form. Rooms are placed with regard for personal as well as for visual ease.

The kitchen is so placed and (Please turn to page 275)

The site, in one of the oldest residential areas in Seattle, is within a ten-minute drive of the main business district. On a steeply sloping hillside it has a view to the east of Lake Washington and toward Mt. Rainier. Because of the limited area of the site and its steepness the house was planned on three levels, but functions as a two-story house. The entrance foyer, although on the lower level, is continuous with the main living area. A push-button on upper level opens the doors so that it is not necessary to go down the stairs to admit guests. As can also be seen in the section at the right, the site's slope suggested a logical separation: the upper terrace for adults and the lower play terrace for children.

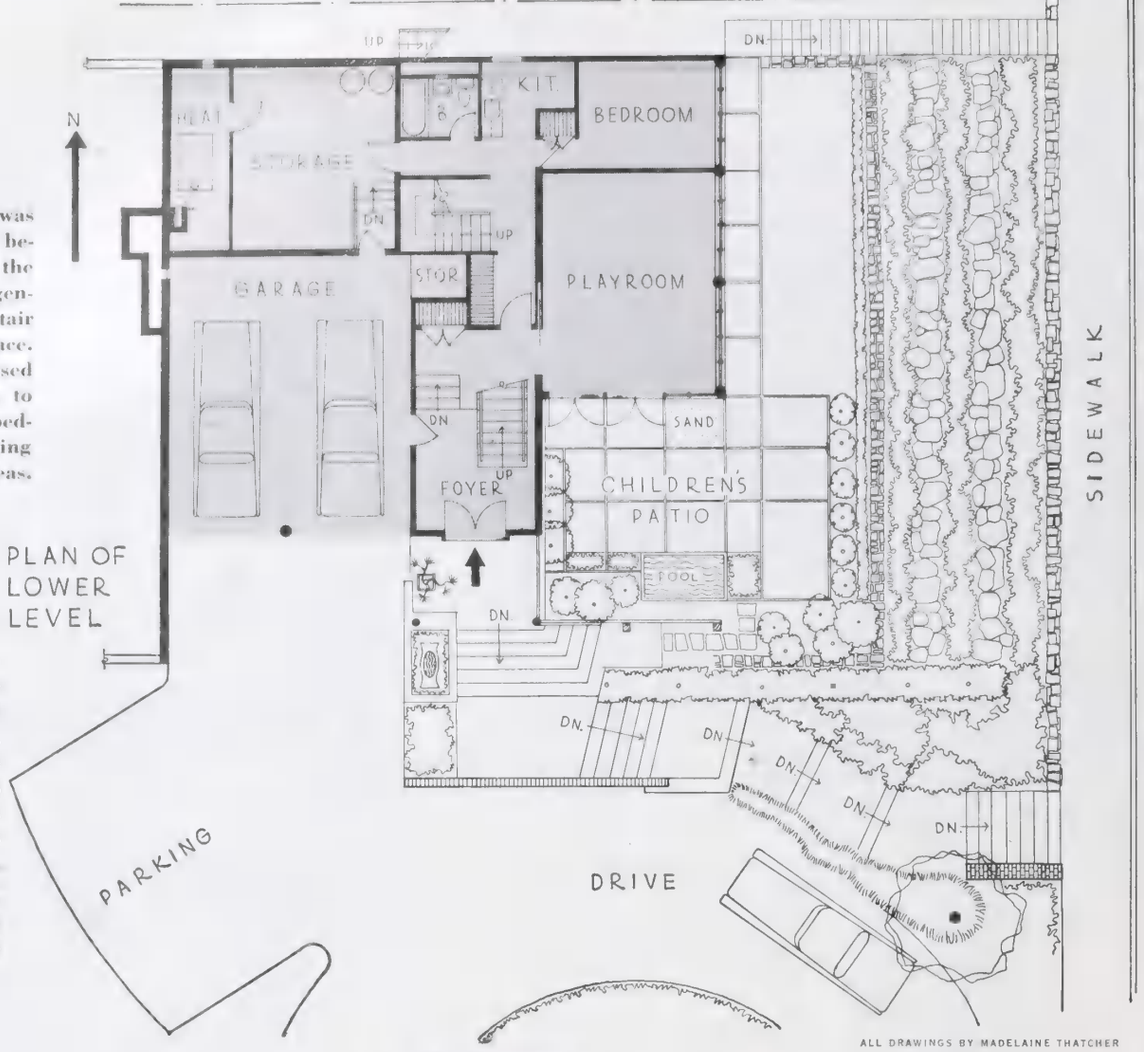
A contemporary house that restates the idea of elegance

● This house proves that elegance, whether as an environment or a way of life, does not require the trappings of the past. Though designed by the same architects as the house on the preceding pages, it is a full expression of contemporary design, detailed and furnished only with the skills of today's artists and craftsmen. Yet because of the restraint and finesse used throughout, the result can truly be called elegant in every sense of the word.

We sometimes forget that today's antiques were the contemporary product of their day. It is only as they represent the best of their day that they have survived. Somehow, work in which man has put the best of himself and which bears the imprint of this spirit has a power of survival. We treat it with a certain respect and regard.



Once we realize that the classics of tomorrow are being created today, we can appreciate the new kind of elegance achieved in a house that reflects only the work of today. Where the Blethen house, on pages 197 to 203, puts to appropriate use the best work of 18th-century designers and craftsmen, the house on these pages makes similar use of the work of contemporary artists.

The difference between the two houses, therefore, is not one of value or quality. These are nearly the same. The difference simply reflects the strongly defined tastes and preferences of the two owners. It indicates a kind of high-level non-conformity, the freedom to choose the best without concern for a particular design dogma.

Mr. and Mrs. John H. Hauberg, Jr., for whom this house was designed, have a great interest in the work of contemporary artists, particularly those in the Seattle area where they live. Out of the work of these artists came many of the furnishings for this (Text continued on page 209)

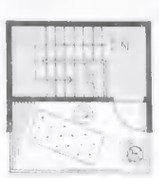
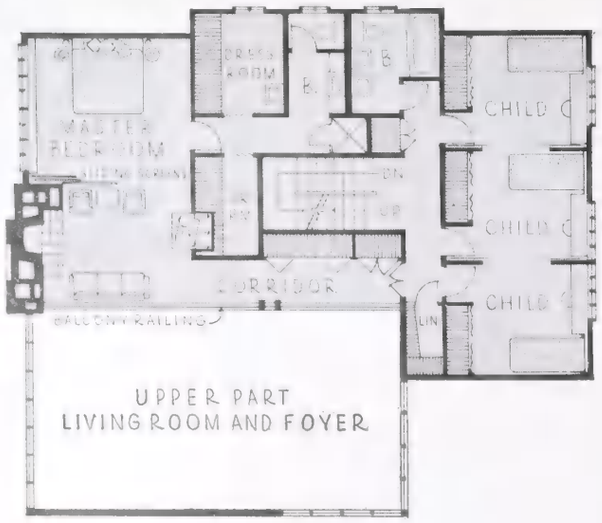
Entrance to house was placed at lowest level because of the nature of the site. From the foyer a generously proportioned stair leads up to living space. Note that central enclosed stair makes it possible to go from this level to bedroom floor without passing through the living areas.



PLAN OF LOWER LEVEL



The main floor (seen in the plan below) is essentially one large and continuous living space, ideally suited for entertaining. The patio and lanai, notched into the steep hillside, are used as a part of this space. Note that lanai has a fireplace to cut the chill of evenings.

PLAN OF FIRST FLOOR

The upper floor functions as two separate areas: the children's bedrooms and the master bedroom suite. The sitting area of master suite and its entrance are open, like a balcony, to upper part of living room. The central stairway continues up to small sun deck on roof.

distinguished house, including such details as light fixtures, mosaic pavings, and wall murals.

The house thus represents the work of many hands in addition to the architects, who also did the landscape design and participated in the design of the furnishings. (Except for a few pieces, all the furniture was custom-made specifically for this house.)

It is testimony to the work of these various artists that the number of participants must be called to one's attention, that it is not blatantly apparent. The work is not show-offish or attention-demanding. In some instances much design energy has gone into making some element unobtrusive or in giving refinement to some minor detail. The works of art are quietly enjoyed as a part of the whole and for their contribution to the ensemble. But when attention is concentrated upon them, they can also be enjoyed in themselves and are not soon exhausted of content. The many creative skills woven into the fabric of this house give it a depth of personal meaning and contribute to its quality of elegance (or special-ness).

was designed by Warren Hill in collaboration with Terry & Moore. He also designed the dining-room furniture and the custom-woven rugs in the living room. The master bedroom furnishings were designed by Lou Swift and Roland Terry. Irene McGowan designed the light fixtures at the sides of the entrance doors, and the chandelier that hangs from the high ceiling in the entrance foyer. She also designed fixtures used in the living room, dining room, study, kitchen, master bedroom, master bath, children's bath, and powder room. Many of these are subtle details not immediately apparent to the visitor at the house.

A painting by Morris Graves is hung on the wall by the piano in the living room. Even the fire screen was custom-designed by Glen Alps. A painting by Mark Tobey is over the buffet in the dining room. A floral mural by Paul Gustin was painted directly on the wood wall in the master bedroom.

Panels of pebble mosaic paving in the living room and the lower patio gardens were done by Guy Anderson. The terra-cotta sculpture in the pool of the children's patio was done by Everett DuPen. He also did the bronze figure standing by one of the pools in the living room patio. The handsome and sculptural garden vessel, cast in bronze, which stands in a planting area at the entrance portico was done by Paul Bonifas, ceramist and sculptor. (Please turn the page)

When needed as an extension, the smaller table is placed at either end of the large table. Two of the legs, hinged to the inactive section of top, are swung out under the active leaf to give it proper support.

When not needed, the extension table can be used as a service counter. When the top is closed, one of the sections is stored folded over on the other.

The extra table may be used in this manner with active leaf lifted and resting against the wall as a background. Both the active and inactive legs of this table are fastened to the inactive leaf of top.

A terra cotta sculpture by Everett DuPen stands in the pool of children's patio outside of playroom at the lower level of house. See plan on page 206. The bronze figure by one of the pools of the living-room terrace is by the same sculptor. Pebble mosaic panels in patio paving are by Guy Anderson, who also did mosaic paving areas in the patio adjoining the living room. The many creative skills used in house give depth to its meaning.

A handsome, cast bronze vessel, by Paul Bonifas, sculptor and ceramist, stands in the planting area at the entrance portico. To fully realize the scale of vessel, study it in relation to the entrance in photo on page 204. As placed here, it is somewhat remindful of both Chinese ceremonial bronzes and the hand-washing bowls outside of the entrances to tea houses in Japan.

A CONTEMPORARY HOUSE

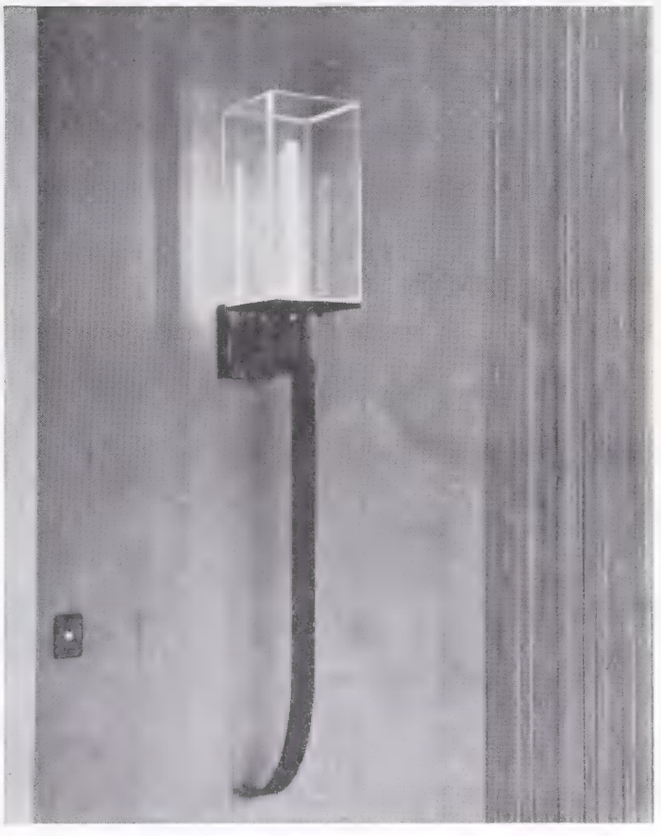
Because of the completely different atmospheres developed in this and the Blethen house (pages 197-203), it is doubly interesting to find that, on analysis, the architects faced many of the same design problems when starting the two houses—and solved many of them the same way. Both houses are based on an open plan. Changes in floor levels are used to secure spatial interest and to adapt to the site. Walls of glass between indoor and outdoor areas give a sense of openness to the interiors. Use is made of high space to emphasize the dramatic qualities of the site.

Both houses have the same finesse in detailing and restraint in the use of materials, though the materials themselves often differ. In the Blethen house very little wood appears in any of the finished surfaces: painted plaster is used. In the house on these pages, all finished surfaces are wood, inside and out. But such differences are of relatively minor importance. The chief differences in the houses stem directly from the owners' tastes and interests. Though the designers were the same in both cases, they did not superimpose their tastes to produce sameness. The individual preferences were allowed to shine through and achieve two separate expressions, each of high quality.



The living room rug (right), custom-woven by V'Soske to a design by Warren Hill, is one of a set of three rugs, variations upon the same motif, that he designed particularly for the house. Note the interchange of background and stripe colors in two of the rugs seen in color photo of living room on page 207. Two rugs (above), similar in design to the large one in the living room, are used on the landing at the top of stairs and at the entrance area of the living room.

A custom-designed and hand-crafted chandelier is suspended from the lofty ceiling of the three-story foyer space. The pendant, sculptural fixture is a vertical accent in this tall space. It was designed to be seen from above as well as from below and features flame-like, unshielded low-wattage bulbs.

Boldly scaled for out-of-door use, this torch-like fixture is one of a pair especially designed for positions at either side of the main entrance doors. The fixtures shown here, two of those designed for this house by Irene McGowan, show the many areas of design activity incorporated in the house.

It doesn't take a large planting to evoke reminiscence of the woodlands. Here, done very simply, is a variegated green pottery bowl planted with Christmas fern (Polystichum), a piece of gnarled old root, and a moss "ground cover." Such small plantings are a delight to have because they are so easily moved. You can place them where they will be enjoyed as readily as you move an ash tray.

Bring the Beauty of the Woods Indoors

By KAY MARTIN

● One of the great pleasures of a walk in the woods is the infinite variety of things to be seen. No two hills have identical contours. Every tree differs in its display of bark, branch, and foliage. On the ground is a microcosmic world of seedlings, blades of grass, fronds of ferns, carpets of moss, twigs, stones, and fallen leaves. No two things are exactly alike. And, for the observing eye, there is beauty in it all.

The essence of all this can be captured in miniature, taken home and planted in a container. Here, at close range, you can enjoy its intrinsic beauty as well as the larger—and smaller—natural scene it represents.

The container may be metal, ceramic, or glass, so long as the plantings are in scale and color harmony with it. Part of the fun is choosing the moss, lichen, wee seedlings, and woodsy plants to suit a favorite pot or bowl.

A collection of living treasures from woods or fields well-planted in a handsome container is a wonderful gift for any nature-lover. Collected now, it will be well established for Christmas giving. With proper selection, planting, and care such a container garden can live for years.

This is a good time of year to start. The leaves are off the trees, most of the grass and flowers have been turned brown by the frost. The little jewel-like things you want are easiest to find in a brown setting. Early spring, before the forest floor grows green, is another good time to start your search for them.

There are two approaches to (Please turn to page 303)

Half the interest here is the beauty of the container itself, and the planting was simplified so as not to compete with it visually. The plants, however, have definite interest of their own. The tall fine-textured plant is clubmoss (Lycopodium) with interesting flowering heads of palest green. The accent of shining foliage is wintergreen (Gaultheria), and there's a fresh green carpet of woods moss under it all.

ALL PHOTOGRAPHS BY HOWARD GRAFF

Here's a good example of fitting a planting to its setting as well as to the container. The round bronze bowl is widest at the top, well-suited to look down upon. The chest on which it sits is a good height for viewing and the time-worn wood is related in color and texture to the gray rock and lichen. Behind the rock is reindeer moss. The little gray rosette of toothed foliage is Saxifraga virginiensis. The rest of the planting is mostly red-coat lichen, which has marvelous little flowers, like the bright red tip of a match, scattered throughout. Close-up study (left) is additionally rewarding.

Furniture that takes the place of architectural detail

When the elegance of architectural detail is missing in a house or apartment, you can simulate its refining effects with furniture that stacks or bunches against a wall

By MARION GOUGH

● Elegance is primarily a talent for recognizing the means to distinction, for perceiving the way in which an ordinary situation can be made pleasantly extraordinary, hence more delightful. In France, where the very word originated, elegant people are said to have "flair," meaning a "nose" or "scent" for the nicety that can gracefully convert the commonplace into the notable.

But the French, sensitive as they are to refinements, have no corner on elegance. All you need as proof of this is to observe how Americans are now selecting their possessions and bringing them together to create homes of character and individuality.

The fact that American homes are becoming more individual rather than more and more stereotyped is particularly remarkable because most of our basic home furnishings and even our dwelling places are made in quantity. Of themselves they have no air of exclusivity. But we Americans are clearly acquiring a talent for eliminating the mass-produced look in our surroundings, devising ways of treating the ready-made imaginatively so the end result has the personal distinction of the custom-made.

There are, for instance, thousands of apartments and mass-produced houses in this country which, in order to be built at all, had to be practically identical in floor plan and finish. Even the very finest have the same bland, assembly-line look, with little architectural distinction. But, contrary to what you might expect, as homes they are as dissimilar as their occupants, for people are learning how to assert their independent tastes with color, pattern, and furniture arrangement.

In the New York apartments shown on these four pages, see how furniture is being used to achieve visual effects of interesting architectural detail where none in fact exists. All this furniture is from the Modavanti Collection of Heritage Furniture, Inc., but notice particularly the prevalence of pieces designed as units (Please turn the page)

Perceptive apartment-dwellers are giving their non-committal rooms the refining effect of architectural detail by "building up" the walls with furniture. Opposite, see the distinguishing change in the sofa group shown below, when it is flanked by two pillar-like combinations of a base and a hutch. The same components become an important, useful hall piece (above) when they are connected by a slab of marble. Base cabinet is 28″ high, hutch is 52″, so over-all height is 80″. These painted pieces also add pattern, with trophy-like design, contrasting molding, and hardware. They come in a variety of muted, antiqued colors. Apartment in Chalk House, New York, N. Y.

This apartment dining room is simply one end of the living room shown on the preceding page. A series of hinged painted panels divide it from the rest of the room, creating the effect of an architectural partition. Two-piece hutch-on-base china cupboard builds up wall, and an area rug plays a part in visually dividing dining and living sections, but if you look at the room before screens were installed (photo, left) you realize how such simulated architecture can transform the layout of a room. that can be grouped to stack high against walls or "bunched" in a co-ordinated line-up around the perimeter of a room. Although such furniture can present a substantial, built-into-the-structure appearance, which is in itself distinguishing, they are separate, independent pieces—chests, cupboards, bookshelves, tables. Since they can be composed in a variety of combinations, their appearance can change as each owner arranges them according to his own preferences and needs. Thus they give renters the advantage of a built-in look, yet can be easily moved and adapted to other quarters.

This stacking and bunching principle is not new. What is significant in the Modavanti Collection is that it can be grouped so flexibly and still retain the graceful scale and slender lines of its Italianate shape, whether the pieces are co-ordinated with one another, or used free-standing.

Included in the collection are painted wood panels that may be hinged together to form decorative screens—another graceful way to overcome architectural banality in ready-made surroundings, because a screen can actually change a room's apparent layout. (See "The Multiple Skills of the Screen" on the next two pages.) The panels come in a variety of muted, antiqued colors, often elegantly touched with gold.

Most of this furniture, which includes traditional non-stacking tables, chairs, and beds, can have either a pale fruitwood or a painted finish. The painted finish is a particular bonanza as a distinction-getting device, for, mixed with traditional wood finishes, one or two colorful pieces can accent a room with the fillip of the unexpected.

Decorator Raymond L. Toucher has used screens to simulate partitions and doors in his own New York apartment and, in effect and function, gets two rooms in one. Notice that the screens are ceiling high. By attaching one solid panel at a right angle to the wall, he has acquired about three feet of fixed wall space. The free-swinging panels serve as doors, their diamond-pattern molding giving the apartment the refinement of architectural detail it very much needed.

The multiple skills of the screen

● The screen has always been used as a device to create privacy and contain a small area in seclusion. But it is also one of the most versatile, economical methods available if you want to change the appearance and function of a room without changing its actual structure. The verticality of screens gives them the character of architectural uprights; their panels offer infinite decorative possibilities: and, as hinged, free-standing furniture, they are flexible, easily moved to different situations. By suggesting partitions they can create rooms within rooms; by replacing doors they can extend the apparent size of rooms; they can form bed niches, hallways, alcoves; they can control the flow of air and the direction of light. And, best of all, they give you the graceful means of individualizing your surroundings.

Opposite, in an apartment bedroom, three kinds of screen join to form a distinguished display of Japanese art and a practical bed niche. This custom-made combination of louvers, shoji-type silk paneling, and an antique foil painted screen can embrace the bed in complete privacy, the louvers permitting air circulation and light control. Area behind bed is dressing space. Notice how panels can be arranged to change apparent shape of a box-like room.

When an entry door opens directly into a room, a screen can create a foyer and an additional background for furniture placement. Fabric-filled panels and open-work top of this screen afford privacy without cutting off air. The fabric matches light-filtering Avisco rayon draperies, so screen also integrates room's color and pattern. Paul Krauss was the decorator.

This tall hi-fi cabinet might well be part of the room's architecture, yet it is a free-standing piece. The secret behind its effectiveness is that it was realistically scaled to conform to the structural dimensions of most rooms. It is 80″ tall, 27″ wide and 18″ deep—a practical size for filling in the often-wasted short space between doors or windows. Kenneth Kent designed it for Barzilay Furniture. About $285.

Custom-tailored storage solutions with ready-to-hang furniture

New modular systems are flexible enough to fit any space, so the results resemble the most expensive cabinetry. They start with supports or poles from which many different units —chests, cabinets, shelves, desks—hang on ingenious hook-and-bracket arrangements. Four uses of one wall storage system are shown here; two other systems are shown on page 270

How to find your own

Elegance Is Good Sense Expressed Beautifully. It is the result of directness in approach—to life, to people, and to possessions. Only through awareness of ourselves and our own situation can we see what is appropriate and becoming for ourselves. Since this is a matter of common sense rather than pretense, it is easy to see that what is elegant in behavior or use in one place may not be appropriate in other circumstances. A ball gown is wonderfully becoming at a gala occasion, but it would be clownish on a tennis court.

Composure and Ease are the Rewards of Elegance. But this is true only when the effort is your own. It is a very personal matter that includes making the most of your own assets and facing the truth about your limitations. The effort will never be a success if it is done to impress others. It must be a genuine expression from inside. Elegance in your home will occur wherever your deepest, most passionate interests are reflected, where original thought and concern govern what you do. Setting a stage in imitation of someone else's environment will never be deeply satisfying. Elegance in your surroundings will express itself in what is natural to your way of life, just as an athlete or dancer may be elegant in movement because of instinctive or studied understanding of his body. He knows what economy of movement is, the direct rhythmic gesture that will accomplish what is needed. A natural grace is the result, without useless flourishes or wasted effort. So elegance in action or surroundings is not a pose, not the crooking of the little finger, never artiness.

True Elegance Lies in Refining Everyday Life. It is the result of the polishing and enriching of daily problems. The spontaneity and stimulation that come when everything "clicks" can only occur when you are being yourself, when existing habits and necessary functions are turned to advantage as worth-while experiences. Human behavior, "the greatest of all arts," can be practiced with beauty and style in any circumstances. Elegance can characterize everything you do, but it cannot be superficially applied. Refinement can begin only where raw material exists. The refinement that is elegance must be based on your own individuality and on the daily necessities that you face. These are the greatest opportunities you have for creating real beauty.

kind of elegance

Luxury and Elegance Are Not Synonymous. Luxury is tangible. You can have luxury that is elegant and refined, but you can also have luxury that is vulgar. Elegance used to be considered the province of the wealthy, those few who could afford luxuries and assimilate them without self-consciousness. Those who couldn't imitated the outward look as best they could. Now, most of us have had the opportunity to learn through shopping experience, especially in clothes (where replacement is most frequent and the practice is most intense). Learning by doing is the best education. By trial and error, if not instinct or knowledge, we've discovered what clothes are most becoming, most comfortable, most likely to add to the occasion by making us feel and be our best. Trial and error is an expensive education, but it gets a lot out of the system. In all areas of shopping, through experience, we learn that expensiveness, rareness, and lushness are not necessarily guarantees of lasting satisfaction. The same is true of the meals we serve, the social occasions we plan, the houses we live in. The genuine effort that seems natural is where elegance appears.

The Components of Elegance Are Plentiful. They are available in bewildering quantity at all price levels. Beautifully conceived and executed clothes, furnishings, and building materials make our standards higher than ever before—and discrimination even more vital. Our problem, unlike any in the past, is to choose out of this vast and tempting array those possessions and customs that will become us and enrich our daily life. The touch can be developed. It means encouraging awareness in four areas:

Dissatisfaction. The dissatisfaction that makes you want to put zest into life needs to be kept alive. It can give you the energy to look for beauty in the realities of daily life and nudge you out of routine and habit.

Discrimination. In what you buy, look for intrinsic goodness rather than imitation or pretense. Caring about things in depth means being fastidious about everything that touches your life. Several people have told us that they try to look at every object they buy—a fork for instance—as if none had existed before. Then they can judge more easily. They test how it feels in the hand, how gracefully it will serve its purpose, how well its design and construction will bear use. Most important of all, looking with a fresh eye lets you see quickly whether there is superficiality and a pretense or imitation of something not there. The assurance of the goodness and sensibility in what you own gives you freedom.

Knowledge. You need to know all the market offers so you can choose, out of the multitude of possibilities, those things that best serve your own particular needs and use. You need to keep abreast of what can be had, but also you have to keep an open mind for new ways to use your house and garden to best advantage in your own way. Watching how other people handle things can give you ideas and stimulate your own creative imagination. But your own solution will be the elegant one. Your own elegance lies in developing your personal atmosphere at home and in your own ways of entertaining—in your own interests and the things you understand. Beautiful china can make a great meal greater, but it can't rescue an inept performance.

Self-Awareness. This is most difficult and most important. Elegance can occur only where forms and manners are natural. Formalities and mannerisms are meaningless. Your own elegance depends on your awareness of what is appropriate to you and your environment. Naturalness and enthusiastic self-confidence are the beginning of elegance. This means knowing yourself and your family at your best and working to create the situations and surroundings where you will all flourish. Pleasure and interest should be present in the way you do things and in the possessions you use. But a sense of appropriateness in the over-all scene is vital to elegance. In furniture, for instance, richly carved panels on a cabinet can introduce a meaningful and sensible ornamentation. But if every piece in the room is ornate, these small delights can build up to chaos. A room must be seen as a whole. The high points in color and decoration are needed, but only to the right degree. Elegance lies between the wastefulness of excess and the poverty of carelessness.

To us at HOUSE BEAUTIFUL it seems that elegant living today is unlike the elegancies of the past. Never before have so many people possessed the touch of elegance. But it is not patterned after the behavior of a few leaders. Today's elegance is an individual matter, a personal expression. We are closer than ever before to being free of fashion or styles. This new kind of refinement has sprung from the fact that so many of us have learned enough to make our own judgments. We decide for ourselves what to do and how to do it. Instead of leaning on patterns of the past or imitation of others, we are all discovering our own ways to get more out of our lives and our own circumstances. And the doing of it is stimulating and fun.

Since 1922 (left), when it was designed by Clarence C. Merritt, this house has always had an essential elegance. Less discriminating owners might have attempted to "modernize" it by squaring off its distinguishing arches and painting out its dark, dignified woodwork. But see how effectively modern-day distinction was achieved (right) by letting powerful architecture remain dominant and untouched, actually playing up its strong Mediterranean grace with Henredon's Spanish-flavored modern furniture of compatible scale.

Selectivity is the key to elegance

CONTEMPORARY PHOTOGRAPHS BY WILLIAM HOWLAND

With such compelling architecture, it is important to avoid the clutter of many things, so furnishings are few but well scaled.

The modern furnishings that enhance the inbred distinction of this 40-year-old house remind us that in any era elegance stems from an educated choice

By FRANCES T. HEARD

● The outward forms of elegance may change from era to era, but always underlying the elegant is a certain finesse of choice—a talent for searching out the most precise and the most gracefully imaginative solution among many good possibilities. It is a talent for selectivity. Even though some people seem to have it instinctively, we believe that America's growing sense of elegance proves that it comes more from deliberately educated tastes than from personal giftedness.

This kind of disciplined selection of furnishings in the home of Mr. and Mrs. Lionel Peabody Marks in Larchmont, New York, has made a distinguished modern dwelling place of a 40-year-old house and still preserved the intrinsic stately elegance of its Mediterranean architecture. Except for a few Spanish antiques, furniture is primarily Spanish-flavored pecan and walnut, modern in usability and engineering, made by Henredon Furniture Industries. It was chosen for its compatibility with the strong scale and pattern of the structure itself, which decorator Howard Elliott, with a noteworthy sense of elegance, has permitted to dominate. And when you observe how few pieces of furniture are actually used here, you will realize how much elegance depends upon restrained, highly selective choice.

Opposite, no effort was made to attain authenticity in the furnishings, for despite the dark oak beams and walls painted white in the Spanish manner, this room is for modern American living. Selection was a matter of assembling compatible designs—and this calls for greater discrimination than the composing of a period piece. Upholstered furniture is contemporary, the rug pattern is of Finnish origin, the library table Spanish antique. Above, the room forty years ago.

Buffet table in the dining room is the 82-inch extended version of the mahogany pedestal lamp table shown below. It can seat six comfortably and with no diminution of its grace. It is quite typical of this new American elegance that we still recognize the need for furnishings that function in many ways, but are increasingly insistent that they function with charm.

You may not immediately discern the design relationship between the oblique sides of this marble-top cabinet and the stair pillars, but of such detail is elegance born.

One sign of America's growing flair for the elegant is that manufacturers are making "accent" furniture that appeals to the elegant-minded. Henredon's fruitwood table with scroll legs in antiqued green is just such an incidental piece.

Here you see the buffet table without its extendable leaves and functioning as a lamp table. See how its copper-banded triangular bases join together to form a curve-sided square. Leather-covered chairs are a refined version of old Spanish.

Enjoy the Sound of Poetry

By EPSIE KINARD

Intimate acquaintance with the poet himself, stirring performances by some of the world's great actors, these are benefits of bringing poetry reading into your living room for family listening

● Silent for too long, the sound of poetry is heard again in the land. From an ever-growing list of LP records you can hear great actors and distinguished poets read aloud. It is fun—and often insightful—to hear the poets themselves. It is inspiring to have masters of the spoken word read to us. And what could be more delightful than to have T. S. Eliot himself introduce the children to Old Possum's Book of Practical Cats?

Thanks to today's recording facilities, inflections of the poetry reader can be reproduced as distinctly as the tonal and rhythmic inflections of a symphony orchestra. Since poetry, like music, is a vehicle for patterns of rhythm and sound, its meaning comes alive when it is read aloud. The nonsense of Edward Lear, the rat-a-tat of Edith Sitwell, the sound-for-its-own-sake of Gertrude Stein, the majestic phrases of Shakespeare were composed as much for the ear as for the mind and heart. While nothing quite takes the place of reading aloud ourselves, the contributions of Robert Frost, Ralph Richardson, Judith Anderson, and others can increase a hundred-fold our understanding and enjoyment.

Two young women are largely responsible for today's library of recorded poetry. Just out of college and with "The White Cliffs of Dover" still ringing in their ears, Marianne Mantell and Barbara Holdridge blazed the trail for the recording industry. All they had to work with were a love of poetry in their hearts and a tape recorder in their knapsacks.

on Records

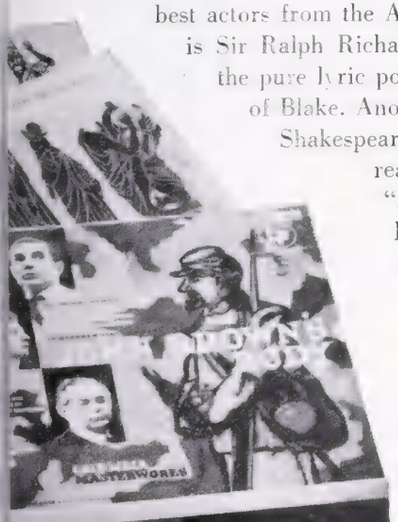
Records, Inc., set out eight years ago, like bobby-soxers stalking autographs, to capture actors and poets who could make recordings that would do justice to the best in American and English poetry. Their first catch was Dylan Thomas, the late Welsh poet whose magnificent, organ-like voice is as unusual as his poetry. The initial recording has sold 225,000 copies since its issue eight years ago and is still going strong.

One reason often given by the record shops for such phenomenal sales as these—phenomenal for poetry records, at least—is curiosity to hear the poet's own voice and his interpretation of his own work.



Although it's a rare poet today who has so spectacular a personality as to gallop nude on a white charger into a foaming sea, like D'Annunzio, or swim the Hellespont, like Byron, the poet himself is still a special and awesome creature. A serious poetry-lover feels about his poets the way the ancient Greeks felt about Pindar and Homer, or the way the Romans felt about Virgil and Horace: They are men set loftily apart by their extraordinary gift of language.

Not many poets have the actor's craft. In fact, most poets hesitate to record. Quite often, however, their charm, the intimacy they create, and the special understanding they have of their own work give their readings a valuable inner statement.

Take Robert Frost, for example. When he reads aloud with his easy New England accent, you feel as much at home with him as you do with a neighbor chatting across the fence, talking about apple-picking; or going out to fetch the newborn calf, so little it totters when its mother licks it; or why it's better for birch trees to be subdued by small boys than by ice storms.

When you hear a poet read, you have a sense of identification with the creator of the work and share for a moment that glorious feeling of discovery he felt when he first created his poem.

The actor's interpretation, on the other hand, brings to the poem the tools of another art and artist. His voice and its control and his ability to project an interpretation of sound and meaning make his reading an artistic expression of its own. He adds to the poem by his own art. Such performances have been turned in by some of the best actors from the American and the English stage. One is Sir Ralph Richardson to whom has been entrusted the pure lyric poetry of Keats and the mystic beauty of Blake. Another is Sir John Gielgud, who reads Shakespeare sublimely. Katherine Cornell's reading of Elizabeth Barrett Browning's "Sonnets from the Portuguese" adds her beautiful voice and deep understanding to the poems of that artist of a hundred years ago.

Helen Hayes, Judith Anderson, James Mason, Raymond Massey, Beatrice Lillie, Cyril Ritchard, and Carol Channing have all recorded for children. They are great fun. Such fun, in fact, that adults will want to listen, too.

Our suggestion is to savor and share poetry aloud. Not all records on the following list have an accompanying text. So we suggest that sometimes you find the verse in a printed collection, and follow the poetry with your eyes as well as your ears.

The following are 12-inch 33⅓ rpm LP records, unless otherwise indicated. Most of these records are available through your local record shops. To facilitate ordering, addresses of small companies or special sources are given at the end of the list. Key letters after records indicate that addresses are listed.

When your grandmother made a cake

TEXT BY ELIZABETH ENRIGHT
PHOTOGRAPHS BY JOHN ENGSTEAD WITH MARVA SHEARER

When your grandmother made a cake, it was more serious nd important than when other peole made cakes. It took longer, and ie kitchen table had to be cleared f whatever was on it, because she eeded a lot of room.

"None of your ready-made mixes or me!" she said haughtily. "I on't care what anybody says, they l taste of the factory."

She brought out a battery of owls and utensils, and then began sembling ingredients.

"Eggs," your grandmother stated, tting down the box. "Milk and utter," she remarked, slamming e refrigerator door. "And flour, course . . . and sugar . . . and t me see, now, what else. . . ."

"Chocolate?" you said hopefully.

"It's in the double-boiler already. o, I know: baking powder."

Last of all she said, "Vanilla," tting down the little bottle.

You took the cork out of the bot- and sniffed it: the most delecta- e smell in the world, but you new better than to taste it. You d done that once and had been trayed. It was the same with the ocolate in the double-boiler.

"Those things need sugar for a rtner," your grandmother said.

She looked satisfied and calm as she made the cake. She broke the eggs skillfully. The yolks went skulking into one bowl, the whites into another. She sifted the flour with a long rushing sound, and the sifter smoked faintly with a white dust. The melting chocolate on the stove began to declare its own fragrance.

"Will it be much longer, Grandma?" you pleaded.

"Not much longer now, my pet," she said.

Her arms were round and strong. When everything was mixed together, she beat and beat the batter with a wooden spoon. It made a thick clucking sound. Because you couldn't help it, you sneaked a finger out cautiously and quickly skimmed off an edge of batter and licked it up.

"Now just be patient," your grandmother said patiently.

The batter grew smooth and silky. You watched it slide richly into first one cake pan, then the other. It heaved itself level in the pans, and then your grandmother opened the oven door and put them in.

"Now can I, Grandma?" you said.

"Yes, now. But better take it outdoors. Nobody should have to lick a cake bowl neatly."

And that was true. It was good not to think of tidiness; just to sit there using your spoon and your fingers, totally absorbed, completely surrendered to the taste of chocolate. It was a kind of bliss. And after this bowl there would be the icing bowl.

"I like raw cake best," you told your grandmother.

"I don't suppose you'll eat a bite of dinner now," she said. "But never mind, it doesn't happen every day; a little spoiling is good for a child. I think it does what sugar does for chocolate and vanilla!"

The Case for Wine Drinking

A statement by the "grand old man" of the gastronomic world, founder of the original Wine & Food Society, which now has 69 chapters in 16 countries. This article is taken from his book, *The Wine Primer

By ANDRÉ SIMON

● Air and water are indispensable: nothing else is. There is, of course, much else that is highly desirable, but not indispensable: wine and milk, for instance. The Chinese drink no milk: Moslems drink no wine, and the same may be said of a considerable proportion of the English-speaking population. But there is a difference: Moslems are not allowed to drink wine; we are free to drink what we please, but there are some who do not care for wine and others who love it but cannot afford it.

Wine is the best form of drink for civilized people: that is to say, people whose senses are trained and disciplined, trained to appreciate that which is best without the danger of their appetites getting out of control. For such people as these, wine is best. It is best because it is the most natural of all the drinks which man has contrived to prepare for himself. It is also the one with the greatest measure of individuality, the oldest form of beverage and the most universally accepted drink (if we except water, which is not a drink, like wine, beer, or cider) imagined by man in his quest for happier days on earth.

Wine is the suitably fermented juice of freshly gathered grapes. Grapes grow practically everywhere except in arctic regions, but they demand too much attention and do not reach the right degree of ripeness to be worth anybody's trouble to grow commercially for wine-making in lands where summers are not dependable, as in England, or where they are too fierce, as in the tropics.

In Europe, the northern limits of wine-making vineyards are, from west to east, Brittany, Normandy, Picardy, Flanders, the Rhineland north of Coblenz, and the northern plains along the course of the Danube. The southern limits are the waters of the Mediterranean, including many island vineyards and those of Italy.

In Africa, there are flourishing and very extensive vineyards at the two extremes of the Continent: in the north, from Morocco to Tunis, through (Please turn to page 289)

The Specifications for a Wine Connoisseur

What is a Connoisseur? A Connoisseur is one who knows and loves that which is good, beautiful, uncommon, interesting; everything that is the best of its kind and, above all, genuine.

To become a Connoisseur one must be keen and one must be trained.

Many can see who do not appreciate beauty any more than a cow looking at the most glorious sunset.

Many can hear who do not appreciate harmony any more than a dog in an organ loft.

Many can taste what they drink who are interested as much in the quantity of the supply and as little in its quality as some of the animals at the zoo.

Pictures, music, and wine may be good, bad, or indifferent; it is all the same to those who cannot see, hear, or taste; and it is very nearly the same to those unfortunate people who do not see, hear, or taste with the keen, appreciative, appreciative mind of the Connoisseur.

The Connoisseur must possess a lively sense of appreciation and be guided by good taste. Good taste is nobody's monopoly, and different people may have good taste who have not the same tastes.

The Connoisseur must neither give up his individuality nor fall into eccentricities; he must cultivate the sense of "measure," of true proportion, which is the hallmark of good taste.

The Connoisseur must be prepared to make mistakes; they are inevitable, they should be helpful, and they must not make him lose confidence in his judgment.

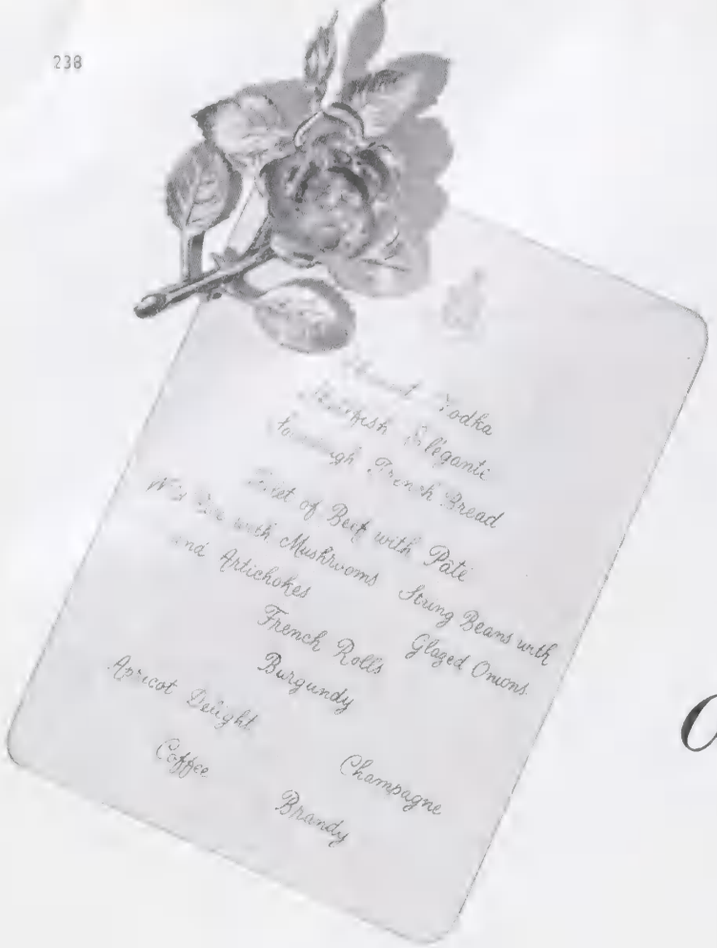
The Connoisseur must be critical and not take for granted that the expert is always right; but he must not be self-opinionated and refuse advice.

The Connoisseur must not be extravagant or hasty; but he must still less be mean or casual.

The Connoisseur must school himself to resist temptation; he must learn to go without that which he cannot afford and to leave alone fakes, doubtful bargains, and "just-as-good" substitutes which cost less and are worthless.

The Wine Connoisseur. The Wine Connoisseur is one who knows good wine from bad and who appreciates the distinctive merits of different wines.

The Wine Connoisseur drinks wine in moderation, but regularly and appreciatively. It is excess—not habit—which blunts appreciation.



A little wine every day costs very little money and is the safest, as well as the pleasantest, tonic for body and mind alike. But wine, whatever its name, its age, or its cost, must be honest if it is to be good and to do good.

How can you tell good wine from bad: how can you become a Wine Connoisseur?

By using your senses and your common sense. By looking at wine, smelling it and tasting it with critical eyes, nose, and palate before committing it to your veins and your brain.

Look at your wine critically; it must be not only clear but brilliant, be it ruby or amber, young or old, cheap or dear. If it be (Please turn to page 290)

How to give a truly elegant dinner party

By VIRGINIA STANTON House Beautiful's Party Editor

Needless to say, it must be a gastronomic delight. But it must also have some dash and originality about its presentation. And there should be no clichés anywhere—in the menu, in the recipe nor, we hope, in the conversation!

● Every woman owes it to herself and her reputation as an "operator" to give at least one "all-out" dinner party every winter. I mean a kind of "no-holds-barred" performance, where you forget the cost, the trouble, or whatever you usually use as the excuse for not entertaining in the grand manner. Once you decide to do it, it's good for your adrenal output, and afterward you are full of that precious commodity called self-satisfaction.

A super-deluxe, elegant dinner party primarily takes careful planning. Let me tell you about one I pulled off, and exactly how I went about it.

I had to consider several phases so that I could manage it with a maid (if I were lucky enough to get one) or to cope with it all by myself. Another angle to consider was the mechanics of the affair—what to serve where. Then I also wanted to select and present my food pattern in the most sensational manner. I enjoy hearing those squeals and exclamations when the food is presented.

After much carding and discarding, I finally worked out a menu that seemed just tops, together with a method of serving that made the whole affair go smoothly. This is what I evolved—and it worked like a charm:

I would have a fish course first, one preferably that could "wait." So I conjured up a platter of lobster medallions and Belgian endive, simple to prepare, delicious when chilled. I could present it when I had everything under control. Let's call this Shellfish Élégante.

This first course I would serve in front of the fire with the drinks. In this way I would not have to cope with complicated hors d'oeuvres, but just serve some glamorized olives and nuts. Then also I could get the table set up with the hot main dish without fuss while the guests were having the fish course elsewhere.

For the main course in the dining room, I decided to have a beef filet. This can be a truly gourmet event and is so easy to prepare.

I decided to serve the dessert course, with coffee, liqueurs and champagne from a tray wagon, either in the living room or library. I did not want the guests to have to sit through clearing and crumbing the table. If I had an "old family retainer" of ten minutes, she would not be trained, and if left alone, she could (Please turn to page 292)

Elegance in presentation can make the greatest of menus even greater. Here Interior Designer James Amster has created a refined setting for a sparkling occasion where guests can appear at their best and enjoy an evening that itself becomes a work of art. # Create your Own Epergne

● From the ashes of Victorian fussiness rises the useful epergne, simplified, and wonderfully dramatic in our modern not-enough-space lives. The epergne takes little table room and stands as tall as you make it, a pretty technique for serving foods or displaying flowers importantly. You can make an epergne from your own collection of compotes, dishes, baskets, or bowls. While they should be similar in style, your epergne components don't need to match. Place them on bases, if need be, one on top of another, making graduated platters for hors d'oeuvres, flowers, or nuts and candies. Fruits and cheeses can be an appetizing and dramatically elegant buffet centerpiece before becoming the dessert. (For more suggestions see page 256.)

Here, by adding two more compotes to the epergne (top, left), Mr. McFadden builds a lofty tower of fruit. Such creative play with accessories helps to develop your sense of awareness.

Silver repoussé altar dishes from Siam, placed one upon another with a candle holder on top, make an important arrangement of short-stemmed flowers. Components (right) are alike in style but have different patterns and shapes.

Amaryllis

dazzling queen of the bulbs

By WYNDHAM HAYWARD

For striking size and color, the amaryllis stands alone. It is demanding enough to justify pride in the flower, but not really difficult. This report from a veteran amaryllis grower will help you bring it to full bloom

DRAWING BY ZUE MARTIN

The painting by Gene McComas (left) dramatizes the rich color and impressive size of the amaryllis. All this beauty comes marvelously packaged in a big brown bulb that is planted in the fall. Potted as shown above and cared for as recommended, it is sure to thrive and bloom in early spring. Note drainage material, sand on surface, and shallow planting.

Once you've seen an amaryllis in flower, there can be no question about its dramatic size and unusual richness of color. But it also has a less obvious quality, which, to some, is as rewarding as the flower itself.

More than most bulbs, amaryllis can be an indicator of your gardening skills. It will grow and flower with minimum care for the first year. But with more expert care, it will grow larger, produce more flowers and foliage, and will continue to perform more dramatically in succeeding seasons of growth.

This is not to say that amaryllis is difficult. But it does have some specific requirements that must be met to help it perform really well. If you do keep one going year after year, increasing in size, developing more flowers and handsomer leaves, you can rightly take pride in your skill and lay claim to a green thumb.

The process of bringing an amaryllis to bloom in the house next spring starts this fall. The first step is choosing the bulb, and a lot depends on the choice. You'll find the bulbs in late fall and winter in florists' shops, seed stores, garden centers, hardware and department stores. The more you can find out about the origin and expected performance of the bulb you buy, the better. Some are simply sold as amaryllis with no hint as to where they were grown or the color they will be. Some are sold as bulbs of a given color and some as mixed colors. Some are named varieties. These may have a color picture of the flower on the box. Only the true named variety can be depended upon to produce flowers of a predicted size and color.

The bulbs you get may be from California, Florida, or Holland. The named varieties are the Dutch type. They are the most expensive, because they are improved, top-quality bulbs carefully grown in greenhouses with complete control of hybridizing and propagation for form, color, quality, and flower characteristics. Although the largest bulbs (3½ to 4½ inches in diameter) do not necessarily produce the largest flowers, they usually give best all-around results.

You may also find Dutch seedling bulbs in color groupings. These come in white, striped (white with red markings), orange, salmon, pink, scarlet, and dark red. And new shades, near lavender and purple, are coming along. While bulbs in a group may not be identical colors, about 90 per cent of them will be as listed. These usually cost less than the named varieties because they are easier to produce.

A Dozen

These great Danish breads say "Velkommen" to neighbors and friends. Many of them can be baked, wrapped, and stored in the freezer to have on hand for holiday entertaining. The authentic recipes for these traditional breads are from Ingeborg Dahl Jensen's treasured collection

• Ask why Danish breads are so good and you get two simple answers: one, Denmark's varied and abundant grain and her bountiful yield of fresh, sweet butter bless bread inside and out; two, Danish cooks have a talent for bread-making that goes back hundreds of years. Long ago, before the common people used dishes, Danes were baking big rounds of crusty flotbrod to serve food on, and everyone but the elite ate their plates.

As soon as a little Danish girl can bend her elbows over a floured board and push a wooden spoon, she becomes a full-fledged apprentice to a bread-maker—her mother. She learns patience enough to let her dough rest as long as necessary; to cream sugar and butter with her hands; to mix eggs one at a time; and to beat well after each egg is added.

There's still another reason why Danish breads of whole-meal, rye, sweet potato, rice or wheaten flour, with their spicy flavors and golden crusts, are so delicious. They reflect the influence of French finesse on Danish cooking. For centuries the people of Denmark were settled around a royal court heavily influenced by French dress and cuisine. Chefs, imported from France, reigned over the big, luxurious royal kitchens. To learn the fine art of baking, young Danish bakers went to France. To this day in Denmark, white bread means "French bread."

Our dozen breads include the white or "French" bread, the light, the dark, the deep rich brown, and the yellow, which owes its sunny color to sweet potato or saffron.

Some of the recipes have been handed down from mother to daughter for as many as four generations. From them you can make "hospitality breads" to slice and serve, half-warm, as the Danes do. Or you can let your bread cool, wrap it in foil, and store it in your freezer to have on hand for the holidays. These are breads to butter generously with fresh, sweet butter, as the Danes do. These are breads to savor with freshly ground, lovingly brewed coffee; with iced aqvavit or vintage wine; with a mug of steaming glogg; or with a glass of cold Danish beer.

Danish breads make delicious gifts. In Denmark miniature loaves baked during the holidays are wrapped, pan and all, in shiny paper decorated in many colors, interwoven like a little girl's braids.

These breads can be the backbone of lunch or dinner, turning the simplest meal into an occasion. They can be used smorrebrod-fashion to make holiday party fare more exciting. Smorrebrod literally means spread or buttered bread, but the word has also come to mean an open sandwich on which a creative cook expresses her versatility with meats, sea foods, and spreads.

Here are a dozen Danish bread recipes, chosen to meet different occasions and needs.

Sweet Saffron Bread
(Sod Safronbrod)

1 tablespoon sugar
1 cake compressed yeast or 1 package dry
¼ cup lukewarm water
¼ cup butter
¾ cup sugar
1 teaspoon salt
1 cup scalded milk
¾ teaspoon saffron
¾ cup hot water
6 cups sifted all-purpose flour
½ cup seedless raisins
¼ cup dried currants, soaked in enough red wine to soften
¼ cup toasted almonds, slivered

Blend yeast with sugar, add ¼ cup lukewarm water and dissolve. Cream butter with ¾ cup sugar and salt in a rather large bowl, add milk, and stir well. Dissolve the saffron in the ¾ cup hot water, let stand 10 minutes; then strain. Add this saffron water to the milk mixture. When lukewarm, add the yeast mixture and blend well. When smooth, gradually sift in three cups of flour, stir to blend. Blend one cup of flour with raisins, currants, and nuts; add the dough and mix. When smooth, work in enough of remaining two cups of flour to make a soft dough. Knead on a board until smooth. Put dough back in the bowl, cover and let stand in a warm room until doubled in bulk, about two hours. Remove and cut dough in half and knead gently on floured board. Make two loaves or one braided one (as pictured on opposite page). To make the braided loaf, divide one-half of dough into three equal parts. Roll each piece (Please turn to page 271)

Hospitality Breads

PHOTOGRAPH BY JAMES VILES

Typical of the variety in Danish hospitality breads are the four kinds shown. Reading clockwise are a loaf of sweet saffron bread, braided, which can also be made into a wreath; a miniature loaf of sweet-potato bread, which Danish cooks love to give, pan and all, as a gift to children; a steamed brown bread; and the traditional kringle med kakepulver, or coffee ring, which is baked here in a round holiday loaf.

If you go with your mind as open as your eyes, as a traveler rather than as a tourist, India is the most colorful, thought-provoking, paradoxical experience of romance, reality, and world-awareness on earth

By MARION GOUGH

● In the chill dawn of a January morning, the plane from Bangkok came down in New Delhi. We left the urbane and elegant world of Chateaubriand and champagne that is Air France and entered India, carrying the Dior stockings and French perfume we had bought, at great savings, in flight. The airport arrival room was dark and empty, except for some barely distinguishable bales of quilting that lined its walls. Suddenly the quilts began to roll and heave, and out from under rose a corps of what we thought to be uniformed functionaries, shaking themselves awake. But in a matter of minutes, they were lined up alertly at their counters, stamping papers and filling out forms with such competent relish that we wondered if we had really witnessed that curious awakening in the anteroom of a modern airport.

This was our first impression—and a prophetic one—of this ancient, complex, and paradoxical subcontinent struggling into independent existence as a modern country in a modern world. Many times we were to wonder if we could believe what our own eyes saw. We wonder, even now, as we gather our notes and memories to set down these impressions. And it is only in personal impressions that a short-time Western visitor can presume to comment on a 4,000-year-old civilization and a country so vast, so ethnically, geographically, and linquistically diverse that its own 400 millions cannot always communicate with each other.

We went to India, as all (Please turn to page 297)

Here are nine chests that encourage orderliness and create a sense of personal elegance

■ Having a place for everything in your private world, whether it be freshly laundered shirts or a shoe-shine kit, is a pleasurable experience. It makes you feel well attended, positively pampered. Nothing flusters the well-organized person more than a last-minute search through the bottomless-pit type of drawer for some piece of apparel. And at the end of the day, undressing can quickly disarrange a room that provides only bulk storage facilities.

Big spaces are not enough; you need smaller compartments sized to fit particular articles of clothing. If this kind of storage isn't built into your home, it can be found in ready-made furniture, in any style preference. Far from being a luxury, a thoughtfully engineered chest like those shown here can be a time- and temper-saver.

More gentlemen's chests appear on pages 266-267.

When in repose, as left, this walnut chest with its inlays of olivewood is a truly handsome piece of furniture. In service, it has six roomy bins for shirts and two kinds of drawers for sox, scarfs, handkerchiefs, sweaters, underwear. From the "Ronda" collection by Romweber Industries. About $349.

This gentleman's chest of cherry is carefully designed to cope with all of his paraphernalia. Twenty sliding Masonite shelves hold up to 40 shirts without crushing; five deep drawers hold bulkier sweaters and pajamas; two smaller drawers are catch-alls for keys, small change, and jewelry. Special hardware permits pull-up mirror to be adjusted to height of person using it. From The Lane Company, about $314.

Created specifically to fit a narrow space is this tall walnut cabinet designed by James Caldwell for Brown-Saltman. Features that please and pamper any man include built-in tie racks, a long toiletry shelf, several small jewelry drawers, and a full-width mirror set into the back wall of the unit. Hardware-less doors have unobtrusive finger-tip recesses for opening. This chest in pastel walnut finish, about $250.

The original armoire was designed to store a knight's arms and armor. Here's a finely detailed adaptation for the modern man. In this chest by Kittinger, a well-organized utility core hangs from a central pivot, and with one quick motion reveals its inner workings. Mahogany cabinetry with boxwood inlays, approximately $1,190. Another version is available with traditional fittings: full-length wardrobe and drawers.

Revival of a Victorian seating arrangement, tête-à-tête chairs like these meet other needs. They separate for use as occasional chairs. Luxurious channel-back cushions are used on cherry frames in fruitwood or painted finishes. From Heritage "Modavanti" Collection.

"CERAMIC TILE MAKES THE DIFFERENCE... EASY TO WORK WITH...RELAXING TO LIVE WITH..."

To help create a warm, functional kitchen, Architect Huson Jackson used ceramic tile . . . and captured this rare combination for work-free convenience and relaxed living.

The semi-separation of the breakfast area—to the right of the ceramic tiled cooking island—affords a pleasant place for eating and relaxation. In the kitchen section an aqua tone ceramic tile wall from floor to ceiling keynotes an easily cleaned, colorful work center. The tiled counter tops and drainboards guarantee lifelong service and economy. Why? Ceramic tile won't burn, scratch or stain!

Of course, the floor is ceramic tile, too. No waxing here! Still another work-saving, wife-saving feature of tile. But why not see your local tile contractor soon—he'll tell you about new, lower-cost ceramic tile applications for your home.

AMARYLLIS, DAZZLING QUEEN OF THE BULBS

based on fine-quality European stock and subsequent generations have been maintained in good quality by careful selection of parents and rigid control of hybridizing in the greenhouse. The Howard and Smith hybrids are among the best-known and most dependable California amaryllis. These are usually sold as mixed shades or "select strains" of a given color.

Florida amaryllis are field-grown in that mild climate and are the most abundant of all. Most of these are the "Mead Strain" which are excellent field-grown bulbs but can't compare in flower size or purity of color with the Dutch bulbs or the California bulbs. Florida amaryllis are sold widely in the South for garden use. In the colder climates, amaryllis can be grown only indoors. Most people who take the time and effort to grow them indoors in pots prefer the larger types.

Prices vary, as you might expect. Top quality Dutch amaryllis, whether choice seedlings or named varieties, cost from $2.50 to $10 or $15 each according to size, quality, and availability. Most Dutch bulbs are the 3- to 4-inch size. But there is a smaller size, 2½- to 3-inch, as well as the larger 3½- to 4½-inch bulbs.

The California bulbs come in sizes of 2½ to 4½ inches in diameter and cost from 85 cents to $3 each. Florida amaryllis measure from 2 to 4 inches and cost 50 cents to a dollar or so.

If you are growing amaryllis for what they best provide—imposing size and vibrant color—it pays to invest in the best bulbs you can afford to buy.

Some catalogs list the flowers as early, midseason, late, and very late. By choosing bulbs from each season, the bloom period can be extended. The average time, from beginning of growth to flowering for an "early" type is 6 weeks. For a very late bulb it is 8 to 9 weeks. A well-grown mature bulb can produce as many as two or three scapes (stems) of four flowers each. In a reasonably cool place, a flower will bloom for a week or ten days. So, by good planning and culture, you can have them in continuous bloom for a month or more. If some are kept at temperatures of 50 to 60 degrees after potting, this will delay the time of bloom. Temperatures of 70 to 80 degrees will speed it up. Once growth starts, keep temperature above 65 degrees.

There are two basic kinds of amaryllis flower shapes. The Reginae type have more or less trumpet-shaped flowers; the Leopoldii type are flaring and open-faced. The latter are preferred by most people.

The miniature types are favored by collectors, and more of these delightful flowers are becoming available. But, as an introduction to the amaryllis, the large ones are the best choice. You may also hear about double amaryllis or orchid types. These are hard to find, and of most interest to collectors.

How to Grow Them

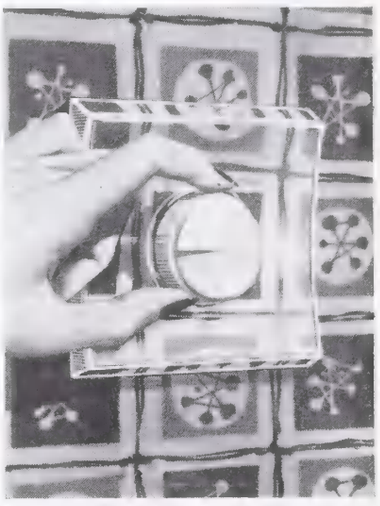
The bulb will usually be unpotted when you get it, and should be potted as soon as possible. Choose a container large enough to allow at least an inch of soil all around the bulb. A 4-inch bulb, for example, should have at least a 6-inch pot. Put an inch or so of fiber, broken pot, or gravel in the bottom of the pot to facilitate drainage. Set the bulb in the pot so that about half, or a little more, shows above the soil level. Leave about an inch of the rim of the pot above the soil as a reservoir for water. If the bulbs have roots, which is all to the good, be careful not to break them off, but firm the soil around them well when you set the bulb in place. You can put as many bulbs as you wish in a container providing each has the recommended amount of soil to grow in. The better the bulb is established as soon as you get it and pot it up, the better will be the quality of the flower and the more blooms you are likely to have.

Amaryllis must have rich, well-drained soil. One of the most famous collections, that of the United States Department of Agriculture, was grown in the Washington greenhouses in a potting soil of two-thirds sandy loam and one-third well-rotted cow manure. If you can't get the latter ingredient in your area, you can buy dried pulverized cow manure which will do very well. It is available in most garden stores. If you'd rather not cope with the soil mixture, you can have a florist pot the bulbs.



After potting, water sparingly, and put the plant in a cool place away from the light until the new growth begins to show. Then bring it to the light of an east or south window and water it well. If the soil is as open as it should be and drainage unobstructed, there's little danger of overwatering. Don't let the soil dry out, and don't just add a little moisture to the surface. Water thoroughly each time. By rotating the pot every few days it is possible to keep the stem growing straight.

Some bulbs will produce handsome glossy strap-like leaves when the bloom bud appears. Others will bloom with little or no foliage. This is due to the mixed-up genetic background of the modern hybrids.

If the tall stem seems unsightly, it can be camouflaged with surrounding plants. Asparagus fern, small Boston ferns, or other small potted plants or vines are often used to provide screening for the long bare stems. In succeeding years a well-cared-for bulb is more likely to have foliage of its own and not require screening.

After-care

When the flowers fade they should be picked off to prevent seed from forming and taking strength from the bulb. Cut the stem off at the top of the bulb. Add weak liquid fertilizer and continue to water, for at this time, next year's flowers are forming. Leave any foliage on until it fades, for this too helps feed the bulb. After flowering, pots can be plunged in a shady place in the garden and mulched to reduce frequency of watering.

At the end of the growing season the leaves begin to yellow. Reduce the watering and let the foliage dry. Clean the outer scale off the bulb and put the pot in a dry place where the temperature will be 55 to 65 degrees.

Next December or January, re the amaryllis as if it were a r bulb. While the old soil in pot is a good storage medium doesn't have enough nourishm in it to support another ye growth.

The following list of favo Dutch exhibition-type amaryllis a personal one, intended only a starting point. As any amaryl fancier knows, there are actua many dozens of wonderful kinds grow. One of the intriguing aspe of growing amaryllis is that th don't all perform the same w Some have less tolerance th others. This list includes mai spectacular performers that reasonably easy to grow.

YOU CAN CREATE YOUR OWN EPERGNE

Brighten the kitchen corner with an epergne of vegetables made from the straw baskets or trays now widely available. Each basket rests on inexpensive straw-rings that can be found at Mexican and Swedish shops or in most large department stores.

Wood plant stands, a footed bowl, and a plate are all there is to this simple but handsome epergne. The stands, used here to lift the plate, fit together sturdily. They can be found at the florist's or in Japanese specialty shops for under a dollar.

This walnut screen was designed by Andrew Delfino, decorator for Mr. & Mrs. John McGuire. In remodeling their old dining room, he decided to eliminate the large French doors between the dining room and the pantry. Using twelve very tall walnut panels, he created an important event in a room completely minus any architectural detail. The panels bundle to the left of the doorway until dinner is on the table. Closed screens shut out all kitchen noises.

All of the screens in the story on pages 220-221 were custom-made. Similar screens can be ordered through decorators or through the decorating departments of some department stores. Other types of fabric, metal, or wood screens come through department stores, mail-order chains, lumber yards, or large hardware stores. Plans for build-it-yourself screens can usually be found with materials at lumber yards, building supply dealers, or large hardware stores.

TALL FURNITURE

PHOTOGRAPH BY WESLEY BALZ

A room of any atmosphere can profit by the space-setting, wall-filling asset of tall furniture, which is now made in great variety of style. This high piece by Mount Airy combines 18th-century looks with five drawers, four shelves, and a desk. About $260.

PHOTOGRAPH BY GEORGE SMALL

Slender width and interior filing space qualify this high chest-desk, by West Michigan Furniture Co., as a perfect housekeeping desk to fit in a family room or a kitchen. About $150. Desk surface is "Formica." Flooring is "Amtico" vinyl tile.

PHOTOGRAPH BY WILLIAM HOP

Low table together with a soaring, slender mirror puts the wall to use and fills the crying need of every dweller in small space—a mirror for full-length viewing. It's a modern version of the pier glass for hall, bedroom, or bath. Lane Co. About $70.

TOGRAPH BY GEORGE M. CUSHING, JR.

PHOTOGRAPH BY GEORGE SMALL

Bookcase-chest by Kittinger demonstrates a timeless elegance and nicety of detailing that never goes out of style. Silhouetted, the sweeping curves of its pediment draw the eye upward, make the upper reaches of a room as visually interesting as lower. Multi-pane glass door protects books and ornaments. About $975.

Cabinetry details of this Stickley bookcase-chest—the subtle, intricate shaping of the cut-outs and the precision with which the glass is set in—put the elegance of precise design on the upper walls, give a serviceable straight form a graceful, bulkless look. About $350. Biedermeir chair, Abraham & Straus.

BEAUTIFULLY APPOINTED GENTLEMEN'S CHESTS

TWO PHOTOGRAPHS BY GEORGE SMALL

Two separate chests from Sedgewood collection by Ramseur join forces to become a 58"-high storage arrangement. Particularly appealing to the masculine eye are four panels of saddle leather and beautifully sculptured hand-pulls. Approximately $265.

No reason why a gentleman's chest can't be taken over by a lady. Spaces in this Heywood-Wakefield armoire are so flexible they work as well for hats, handbags, and lingerie as for men's necessities. Doors and drawers are richly carved. About $279.

There's no "bedroom" label on this chest of imported French walnut veneer. John Widdicomb Co. designed it for use in the living room or hall. It can even pinch-hit for linen storage in the dining room. Note the loving hand of the craftsman in the vertical-grain inlays that are set into the doors. Approximately $400.

How to Spade Your Garden

From his comfortable seat behind a typewriter, our Garden Sage tells you it's tim to get out and dig with a shovel

By WILLIAM ALVADORE BU

• The advantages of getting the spading done in the fall have long been accepted and I have heard no quibbles about them. Of course, it is a tedious task and the gardening enthusiasm runs low in cider time. For all the pomp of autumn, the year is dying and who can feel along his muscles the transfiguration that will come with spring? At any rate, after the season's work, the muscles are probably in better shape for digging than they will be when spring fever comes around again.

If you want to turn a sod or work in leaves, seaweed, fresh manure, or other raw organic matter, autumn is the time to do it. Materials that contain much cellulose, such as leaves and straw, rob the soil of plant nutrients in their early stages of decay, but this primary process will work to an end over the winter and they will return the fertility much increased.

Do not work in chemical fertilizers in the fall, for the winter rains will leach them away. Do, however, put in some bone meal by all means if you garden in the long-plowed earth of the East or South, unless you know that your soil is high in phosphorus. Most of these soils have a radical shortage of phosphorus and bone meal contains 22 to 30 per cent of this important element. I have seen a mere 25 pounds do wonders in a garden some 700 feet square. It is slow in acting, and may require all winter, or even two winters, to become available. Bone meal also contains two or three per cent of nitrogen, which becomes ready enough to help with the decomposition of the organic trash in the soil the first winter.

Another advantage is that tilling the soil will probably kill many an insect free loader. White grubs, cut worms, and other marauders b row down to find a snug harbor their quarters, and if you turn th up they die of exposure.

Leave the plot in the rough, j as the earth slips from the spa and the winter's freeze and th will do much to improve the str ture of the soil; if the garden on a slope, there will be less e sion. If you can now beg, borr or rake up some hay or straw other mulch material and sprea over the garden there will be e less erosion, and less fertility leach away.

Among the latest words in g den practice are these: "Never your soil go bare for more tha few days." This is a good word remember when the weeds ge lead on you and you begin to guilty. Some sow a cover crop a plowing—an excellent procedu

The final boon does not appea you sow a cover crop. This adv tage is that next spring you snatch the first good garden days to plant those things that p ticularly need an early start— ions, lettuce, the brassicas, a especially, peas. Here, in the virons of New York City, in Ma and early April such days are too rare.

Deep down South, fall plow for spring planting is not rec mended. Where you do not hav deep freeze to lock the nutrie in the top soil, loosening it o hurries the winter leaching, do more harm than good. For the sa reason, an extremely sandy s north or south, should not plowed in the fall.

Otherwise, you can plow spade at any season when the ea is dry enough to work. If the glistens when you cut it with a t if it sticks to your tools, if makes a solid mud pie and sme the hands that mold it, the soil is too wet to dig. If the gardener works most soils in this condition, later they will form rocky clods.

Sandy soils and most others that thrive with organic matter, however, may be tilled when pretty wet. One spring I was planting in land that was almost muck. It seemed as though the rains would never end. I had sowed a winter cover of rye grass, which was growing like wild, and I saw that I would risk lumbago or a broken back if I let it go much longer before I turned it in. All the planting was late. Finally, one fair day, trusting that the thick roots of the grass would preserve the structure pretty well, I turned the sod part way over in blocks so that it would drain. It worked fine. It was dry enough so that I could chop in the grass in a day or two.

I suppose the rotary tiller does the best job of modern, shallow plowing, but many I have seen do not go deep enough for my notion. The plow or spade should go ten inches deep at the least, I believe. But a digging spade for sandy soils and a spading fork for most others can do all the turning and mixing that is needed. The kind with the D-shaped handle is the easiest to manipulate. Step the spade vertically into the ground as far as it will go. I like to turn the spadeful (or spit, as it is called) on its side, taking little care to be neat and pretty, smack the spit a glancing blow or two to crumble it, and then tuck in any stubborn trash by an upright jab with the tool.

If you want to mix in a cover crop, leaves, or other trash, I find that the spade is always the correct implement. However, watch for the color of the subsoil; do not go deep enough to lift more than an inch of it into the top soil in any one year. It is good to bring up a little and thus deepen your layer of top soil.

However, you may believe in scratching up the top of the soil instead of spading. If so, you are in good company.

The publication of Plowman's Folly by Edward H. Faulkner in 1943 dusted up a fuss that is still in the air today. The man had sufficient background in the business—agricultural college, practical farming experience, a tenure as a county agent yet he speculated and talked nonsense about abolishing the plow—all plows! The book has changed many capable minds.

The fault of the moldboard, he argued, was that it so very efficiently placed a layer of organic matter, last year's weeds, leaves blown by the autumn wind, and crop residues deep into the soil. This layer acted like a blotter in worn farm land, depleted of its organic matter; it absorbed the rain falling from above, and created a barrier that cut off the capillary flow from below. The right place for this organic matter to decay was where nature laid it in forest and prairie, on the surface and in the upper few inches of the earth, where the roots of young crops could reach it.

We need have no concern about building deep top soil without the moldboard, for as it decays the organic fertility drifts lower, carried by bugs, worms, gravity, and rain. A crop can starve in a field that has been well fertilized when dry weather comes, for, of course, plants can take little nourishment except in aqueous solution. With the moldboard's early blotter and surface drought effect, the young plants do not achieve a sufficient root system to thrive in the summer heat. But even if just scratching the top is your idea of plowing, it should be done—and soon.

A DOZEN HOSPITALITY BREADS

½ cup sugar
2 tablespoons cinnamon
Melted butter for brushing

Scald milk and pour over rolled oats, raisins, sugar, butter, and salt. Stir until sugar is dissolved. Cool. Soften the yeast in lukewarm water, add to the mixture, then add egg. Gradually work in enough flour to make a soft dough. Knead on lightly floured board 10 minutes until smooth. Shape into a ball and place in a greased bowl. Cover and let rise in a warm place until doubled in bulk. Punch down on the lightly floured board, and divide the dough into two portions. Cover and let rest 10 minutes. Roll each portion into long rectangle. Mix the ½ cup sugar and 2 tablespoons cinnamon and sprinkle over the two rectangles of dough. Roll up crosswise to form loaves, sealing edges of dough underneath. Place in two greased and lightly floured bread pans about 8″ x 5″ x 4″. Brush top of loaves with melted butter, cover and let rise in a warm place until level with top of pan. Bake in a preheated 350° F. oven 40 to 50 minutes or until done and browned. Makes two loaves. This may be baked, cooled completely, wrapped, and then frozen.

Try serving a slice of this spicy bread with a rich peak of sour cream.

Sourdough French Bread
(Surbrod)

You need to make a starter (one that you'll add to and keep in your refrigerator for making sourdough bread).

Starter
Step One:
1 yeast cake
½ cup lukewarm water

Put warm water in bowl, crumble in yeast cake and let stand until dissolved, about 10 minutes. Stir.

Step Two:
2 cups lukewarm water
1 tablespoon sugar
1 tablespoon salt
2 cups sifted all-purpose flour

Add the above ingredients to first mixture and mix well, cover, and let stand for three days in a warm place of about 78° F. Also keep warm at night. Stir the mixture daily.

Bread

1 cup starter, at least three days old
½ cup milk
2 tablespoons sugar
1 tablespoon shortening
3¼ cups sifted, all-purpose flour
Melted butter

Measure out starter into bowl. Scald milk, and stir sugar and shortening into it. Cool milk to lukewarm, and add this mixture to starter. Stir in specified amount of flour or enough to make a soft dough, and turn it out on floured board. Knead it well for a minute or two. Place the dough in a buttered bowl and brush it lightly with melted butter. Cover the bowl with a cloth and let dough rise in a warm place, free from any draft, until doubled in bulk—about 1½ hours.

Then punch dough down and let rise again for about 30 minutes or until doubled in bulk. Punch down once more and shape it into a round ball. Let rest for 10 minutes. Shape the dough into a loaf for a 9″ x 5″ x 3″ pan, greased. Cover with a cloth, and again let it rise in a warm place until doubled in bulk, about 55 minutes. Bake in a preheated 400° F. oven about 50 minutes or until the crust is crisp and well browned. This bread shrinks from the pan, and when tapped sounds hollow.

To continue your starter, add to the remainder of it one cup lukewarm water, ½ cup sifted all-purpose flour and one teaspoon sugar. Cover and let stand in refrigerator until you need it to make sourdough bread again.

Pumpernickel Bread
(Rugbrod)

1½ cups lukewarm water
½ cup molasses
2 tablespoons caraway seeds
1 tablespoon salt
3 tablespoons soft butter
2 packages dry or 2 cakes compressed yeast
2 cups rye meal (not rye flour) (See mail order source at end of article)
4 cups sifted all-purpose flour
Corn meal

Pour lukewarm water over the molasses, caraway seeds, salt, butter, and yeast. Add rye meal and beat well. Add enough flour to make a stiff dough. Turn out on a lightly floured board and knead till smooth and elastic, about 10 or 12 minutes. Place in a greased bowl, cover, and let rise in a warm place until doubled in bulk, about two hours. Turn out on a floured board, cover, and let rest about 10 minutes. Divide and shape into two round loaves. Grease a baking sheet or loaf pans and sprinkle lightly with corn meal. Let rise in a warm place until doubled in bulk, about one hour. Brush top with cold water. Bake in preheated 50° F. oven for 10 minutes. Reduce temperature to 350° F. and ontinue baking for 35 minutes r until done. Makes two loaves.

After baking and cooling completely, this may be wrapped in oil and frozen. Sliced paper thin, makes wonderful tea sandwiches ith a spread of any soft cheese nd fresh, sweet butter.

Danish Bran Bread
(Danske Klidbrod)

packages dry or 2 cakes compressed yeast cup lukewarm water cup butter cup lard or shortening
cup scalded milk
cup cold water cup molasses cups all-bran cereal
cups sifted all-purpose flour
tablespoon salt
teaspoon soda cup brown sugar cup chopped nuts cup raisins cup chopped dates
elted butter

Dissolve yeast in the ½ cup lukearm water. Add butter and the rd to scalded milk and stir until issolved. Add cold water and olasses. Place all-bran cereal, six ips of the flour, and remaining ingredients in a large bowl, stir and mix well. Make a well in the center and add the cooled liquids and dissolved yeast. Blend thoroughly. Work in enough of the remaining flour until a soft dough is formed. Turn out on a lightly floured board; knead until smooth and elastic. Place in a large greased bowl, cover with a cloth and let rise in a warm place until doubled in bulk, about two hours. Divide into two parts and shape into loaves and put into two greased loaf bread pans. Let rise until level with top of pan. Bake in preheated 375° F. oven one hour. Remove from oven and brush with melted butter. Completely cooled and wrapped, it may be kept in the freezer for several weeks.

Danish Currant Spice Bread

1 cup dried currants
2 cups sifted all-purpose flour
2 teaspoons baking powder
½ teaspoon salt
¾ teaspoon cinnamon
¼ teaspoon cloves
¼ teaspoon nutmeg
½ cup butter
1 cup sugar
3 eggs, unbeaten
1½ teaspoons vanilla
½ cup milk
red wine

Wash currants, dry on paper towel, soak in just enough wine to expand them to size of fresh currants. Sift flour, baking powder, salt, and spices together. Work the butter until soft and creamy, then add sugar gradually. Beat eggs into the mixture until light and fluffy. Add vanilla and beat hard. Stir in flour mixture and milk in small proportions. Beat well. Carefully stir in currants. Put in a well-greased loaf pan about 9″ x 5″ x 4″ and bake in preheated 350° F. oven for one hour or until done. Cool and slice very thin. After baking and cooling wrap in foil and store in freezer.

Cherry Bread
(Kirsebaerbrod)

2 tablespoons butter
¼ cup brown sugar
¼ cup chopped blanched almonds
12 or 18 large maraschino cherries, halved
2½ cups sifted all-purpose flour
3 teaspoons baking powder
¾ cup sugar
½ teaspoon salt
1 egg, beaten
1 cup milk
¼ cup maraschino cherry juice
2 tablespoons melted butter
1 cup bran flakes (crushed fine)

Divide cherries and chopped almonds each into two equal portions. In a rectangular loaf pan about 9″ x 5″ x 4″, or a little larger, melt the first two tablespoons of butter, brushing the sides of pan well. Sprinkle the ¼ cup of brown sugar over bottom of pan, then the one half portion of almonds. Now place one half portion of maraschino cherries over these. Sift together flour, baking powder, sugar, and salt. Combine egg, milk, cherry juice, and last two tablespoons of melted butter and mix well. Add to flour mixture, and blend well. Add the bran and mix only to moisten. Add the other portion of cherries and almonds and stir mixture well. Pour this batter into the pan lined with the first batch of almonds and cherries. Bake in preheated 350° F. oven 60 to 65 minutes, or until done. Makes one loaf. When cool, slice thin. Wonderful to serve with hot spiced wine.

Rice Bread

½ pound rice cooked
8 cups sifted all-purpose flour
1 package dry or 1 cake compressed yeast
2 cups warm milk
1 teaspoon salt
3 teaspoons sugar

Mash the rice while hot, and rub it into the flour with the tips of your fingers. Soften yeast in milk. Add salt, sugar, and softened yeast to flour mixture. Knead in enough additional flour to make dough just soft enough to handle, knead well, and place in a well-greased, shallow pan. Let it double its bulk, and bake in preheated 400° F. oven for about 45 minutes or until done. Tap to test. It should sound hollow.

Serve while hot (or after reheating) with butter and maple syrup.

Quick Coffee Ring

(Kringle Med Kakepulver)

¼ pound butter
½ cup sugar
¾ cup milk
3 cups sifted all-purpose flour
2½ teaspoons baking powder
Pinch of salt
½ cup raisins
½ cup mixed candied fruit
1 egg yolk
⅔ cup chopped blanched almonds
Sugar for topping

Mix first 8 ingredients, blend well. Knead five or six times on lightly floured board. Form into two round loaves, place on greased cookie sheet. Brush top with yolk of one egg, beaten slightly, and with enough sugar to taste. Sprinkle with chopped almonds. Bake in preheated 350° F. oven for 15 to 20 minutes, or until done. Our "Danish," as pictured on page 245, is a round loaf. If you want to make a traditional ring, work in more flour so that dough can be handled and shaped into a ring. To make, roll with your hands into a rope, and join the two ends together to form a circle.

Danish Ginger Rolls

Here we picked one of the recipes that has been handed down for four generations of good bread-makers in Mrs. Jensen's family.

1 package dry or 1 cake compressed yeast
¼ cup lukewarm water
2 eggs
½ cup milk
2 tablespoons melted butter
3 tablespoons sugar
1½ to 2 teaspoons ginger
1½ teaspoons salt
3 to 3½ cups sifted all-purpose flour
Melted butter

Dissolve yeast in lukewarm water. Beat eggs until light and fluffy and blend in milk, butter, sugar, ginger, and salt. Add sifted flour, and mix to a soft dough. Place in greased bowl, cover, and let rise in a warm place until dough has doubled in bulk, about 30 minutes. Roll out on lightly floured board to about ¼-inch thickness. Cut into rounds with a 3-inch cutter. Brush with melted butter. For folding, crease each round off center with a dull knife. Fold the smaller part over the larger, and press edges to seal. Or cut the dough into 12 equal parts, roll each piece into a rope, tie in knot, and tuck ends under. Brush with melted butter and sprinkle with granulated sugar. Place on greased baking sheet and let rise in a warm place about 30 minutes. Bake in a preheated 375° F. oven for 15 minutes or until browned-topped. Makes about one and-a-half dozen rolls, delicious when slit and served hot with sweet butter or ginger or a kumquat preserve.

Steamed Brown Bread

2 cups whole wheat flour
1 cup corn meal
1½ teaspoons soda
1 teaspoon baking powder
1 teaspoon salt
1 cup seeded raisins
½ cup chopped pecans
¼ cup sifted all-purpose flour
½ cup molasses
2 cups buttermilk

Mix whole wheat flour, corn meal, soda, baking powder, and salt. Add raisins and chopped nuts mixed with ¼ cup all-purpose flour. Mix molasses with buttermilk and add to dry ingredients. Beat well. Grease well three No. 2 juice cans, and fill two-thirds full with batter. Cover tops of cans with two thicknesses of waxed paper and tie with string. Place cans on a rack in a steamer. Fill steamer with boiling water up to the half way mark of cans. Cover pan tightly and steam three hours. Cool 10 minutes before removing from cans.

Slices from these small round loaves (shown in photograph on page 245) can turn a tureen of lentil soup or a pot of baked beans into a gourmet meal.

planned that it is possible to entertain in any of several areas in the house and with varying degrees of formality ranging from dinner served in the dining room to a self-serve steak supper in the lanai. Other possibilities included are a buffet dinner either in the living room or on the terrace, lunch or a light snack on the terrace, breakfast in the lanai.

The kitchen is one room which, in the past, would not have been thought of in connection with elegance unless an elegant meal might have been thought of as coming from a kitchen. But then, perhaps, to let the thought of the kitchen and food preparation enter one's mind was considered inelegant.

But now that the hostess enters the kitchen, our attitude and feelings about it have changed.

This kitchen illustrates one form that elegance may take. It has the shipshape elegance of a finely fitted boat or an expensive sports car. Nothing extraneous has been added to make an impressive show or to secure an effect, cute or otherwise. The materials have been carefully chosen and skillfully combined to serve the various functions of a kitchen. The result is a kind of trim simplicity and refinement. It is not the simplicity of simple-mindedness. It involves perceptiveness and a willingness to put the thought into the design that makes it just right, to eliminate the raw edges, the elements of clumsiness or crudity. The result appears easy.

The house reflects a regard for this kind of simplicity and ease.

CONSTRUCTION INFORMATION

Basically, this is a flat-roofed, wood-framed house on a steep sloping site (part of the house is built into the hillside). Foundations, footings, and retaining walls are of poured, reinforced concrete. Brick facing, where used, is selected second-hand brick. All living areas are over either full-height basement or crawl space. Floors, above-grade walls, and flat roof are framed with Douglas fir.

Exterior walls are covered with integrally colored cement stucco. Exterior trim is painted vertical-grain Douglas fir except for eave soffits, which are of exterior grade waterproof plywood. Mineral wool batt insulation has been installed in all exterior frame walls and in roof. To prevent moisture problems and reduce heat penetration, the roof is ventilated with a continuous copper-screened opening under the eaves or with round screened holes.

The hall, living room, dining room, and lanai have polished terrazzo floors. Floors in maid's room and bath are covered with asphalt tile, and vinyl tile is used in the kitchen. Other floors are carpet-covered plywood. All interior walls and ceilings are painted hardwood plywood.

Painted flush doors were used throughout the house except for custom-made decorative panel doors and glazed steel exterior doors. All glazing is 40-oz. crystal sheet glass. Interior trim for doors and windows is vertical-grain fir strips. Much of the trim is set flush with the plasterboard and painted to match it, making walls, trim, and openings blend into one continuous plane. Cabinetwork in the kitchen is custom-built of selected white birch except for sliding upper cabinet doors and painted hardboard. Basement storage room, furnace room, and garage have smooth trowelled concrete floors. Walls and ceilings are covered with 1 x 6 tongue-and-groove fir boards.

Waterpipe is type K copper tubing, soil pipe is cast iron, and vents are galvanized steel pipe. All gutters, downspouts, and flashing are made of 26-gauge galvanized sheet iron. Hearth and fireplace facings are Italian Travertine marble. Counter tops, backsplash, and wainscot in master bath and counter top in guest bath are Italian Cremo marble. Lamps in the loggia are antiques.

Following is a list of the specific products used in this house. Building materials and equipment can usually be purchased from local lumber dealers, specialty contractors, or department stores. Retail stores and addresses are indicated only for items not available nationally.

This conventionally wood-framed house rests on footings and foundations of reinforced concrete and concrete block. Exterior walls are covered with stained 1 x 4 fir flooring, nailed with galvanized nails. Sheathing is 5/8" Douglas fir plywood. Interior and exterior masonry, including chimney, is faced with painted common brick. Exterior door and window trim, fascia, and grillwork is of vertical-grain fir.

Floor is marble and slate in entry; 20-foot lengths of stained and waxed 1 x 3 oak in living room, dining room, and study; trowelled concrete in playroom, maid's room, storage room, and garage; carpet in master bedroom, children's bedrooms, and powder room; and rubber tile in master bath and children's bath.

Interior walls and ceilings throughout the house are stained fir flooring. Wood trim and custom cabinetwork throughout the house are stained vertical-grain fir. The kitchen sink is custom-made of stainless steel, and part of the kitchen counter is covered with imported Italian marble. The refrigerator is also custom-built.

Exterior walls have 2 inches of blanket insulation, and the flat, built-up roof has 4 inches of insulation. Flashing is 26-gauge galvanized sheet iron. Soil pipe is cast iron, and vents are galvanized steel pipe. Fireplace is marble-faced and lined with fire brick.

Following is a list of the specific products used in this house. Building materials, equipment, furnishings, and accessories may usually be purchased from local lumber dealers, specialty contractors, and department stores. Retail stores and addresses are indicated only for items not available nationally.

Lengths of logs split to serve as risers separating long treads of crushed rock. Side boards nailed to the ends of the logs hold the rock in place. A seat under the pepper tree gives this walk through the flowers a reason for taking it. The garden of W. A. Sheriff.

The easiest possible steps to build

These good-looking steps can be built by simply laying down logs, cut in lengths or rounds. The natural material is sure to look at home in any garden

Half-logs can be held in place with stakes attached to the upper side and covered by the ground on that side. For informal steps, such as these, the logs can be set at any interval dictated by the slopes. Garden detail by Landscape Architect Douglas Baylis.

Rounds of logs stacked on a slope and overlapped, create an unobtrusive natural-looking set of steps in keeping with this informal boulder-strewn slope. The charm of steps of this kind lies in the complete naturalness of the material. The bark and pattern of annual rings is a pleasure to see when you walk up. Log steps are stable and easy to build. Back of step below supports front of step above and, by offsetting the rounds, steps can easily be curved in any direction you wish. Designed by Rodney Walker.

GARDEN DESIGNED BY LANDSCAPE ARCHITECT THOMAS CHURCH

Height of risers is controlled by thickness of cut. These weathered wood steps gain impact by their relationship to the wood-round paving at their base. Wood steps are not recommended in wet shady places where moss would make them slippery. Redwood, cedar, or cypress are the best woods to use in contact with soil. Wood preservative should be liberally applied to prevent rotting.

BRICK Brings

Different, Lasting Beauty Into Your Home

(. . . and Home Buyers Prefer Brick Over Any Other Building Material)

Warm and friendly brick fireplace, charming kitchen wall, unique bar in your den—what a wonderful difference brick makes in your home! Two-stage dimmer controls provide bright or dim light, replace standard wall switches

Inexpensive dimmers give a low level light for romantic dining, night lighting, mood lighting. Units fit in standard wall-switch boxes, will easily replace existing switches, need no new wiring. Capacities range from 200 to 500 watts, prices run from about $7 to $15. Single-pole, three-way, and outdoor switches—available at electrical supply stores—are made by various manufacturers. Shown is 200-watt Minneapolis-Honeywell Tap-Lite Dimmer control with push-button operation.

Luminous ceiling has no dividing bars, fits any room

Honeycomb-like plastic panels, suspended on wires below an existing ceiling, form the basis of this luminous grillwork ceiling. Instead of the usual metal or wood channels, adjacent panels are joined together with invisible plastic clips. Once installed, joints disappear. Panels around room edges can be cut to fit tight against walls or stopped short of walls to form a floating panel. Standard fluorescent or special diffusing fixtures (available from manufacturer) may be used above the grillwork. Installed cost (less lighting fixtures) about $2 per sq. ft. ### New sliding glass doors combine beauty of wood, strength of steel

Wood-framed, sliding glass doors with warp-proof steel-reinforced frames can be stained or painted to match any house. They are made in eight sizes for openings 6′ to 16′ wide, and are designed for either plate glass or ⅝″ or 1″ insulating glass. Doors slide on stainless steel tracks. Matching fixed-glass panels, 3′ and 4′ wide, screens also available. Pella Sliding Glass Doors, from lumber yards. Rolscreen Company, Pella, Iowa.

Wide one-piece lavatories provide their own counter tops

ALL DRAWINGS BY DOUGLAS GORSLINE

Sink-and-counter combinations in enameled cast iron, steel, or vitreous china are now made by many plumbing fixture manufacturers. Widths vary from 24″ to 42″, making it possible to find one to fit almost any situation. Some are available only with ready-made cabinet bases; others, with or without such cabinets. All eliminate expensive custom counter work and the troublesome joints where dirt can collect and leaks develop. Prices start at about $55 for a 24-inch width top without cabinet. For information about specific types, consult plumbing contractors or plumbing supply houses.

Algeria, and in the south, at the Cape of Good Hope, and for many miles inland. There are also vineyards in Nairobi, directly under the Equator, and outside Johannesburg, in the Transvaal, but they are very small, an experiment or a hobby, not commercial ventures.

IN AMERICA the largest vineyards and many of the best wines are found on the western or Pacific coast, from California and Mexico in the north, to Chile in the south, and the Argentine, the largest and best vineyards of which are on the eastern slopes of the Andes. On the Atlantic side, there are vineyards and there is wine made in Canada, in the State of New York, and other Eastern States of the U.S., as well as in Brazil and Uruguay.

In Australia there is much wine made in New South Wales, South Australia, and Victoria, and there are also vineyards of more modest importance in some of the other states.

In Asia Minor there are vines growing all along the shores and in the islands of the Eastern Mediterranean, in Palestine, Syria, Lebanon, Armenia, as well as in Persia and the Asiatic Provinces of the U.S.S.R. Although Asia is now the least important of the continents as regards its vinelands, it can claim to have been the first to produce wine, since it was on Mount Ararat that Noah's Ark came to earth, and it was on the slopes of Mount Ararat that Noah planted the first recorded vineyard.

In the making of wine man interferes as little as possible with the course of nature, which is the reason every wine is different, possessing an individuality of its own in a very much more marked degree than any other beverage made in large vattings, be they beers or spirits, and so blended and reblended and "averaged" that he who has a thirst but no imagination may be sure that the label to which he has become accustomed is a guarantee that the beer or spirit in the bottle is identical to that which the same label has served to identify year after year.

There are, in different types of wine, such as red Bordeaux and Burgundy, Sauternes and Chablis, German white wines and Moselles, and the rest, a family likeness, of course, but the members of each family all have their own features and moods, which vary from vintage to vintage, according to the differences in the hours of sunshine and inches of rain which the grapes get each year.

That is not all. After the wine has been made—that is to say, after the grapes have been pressed and their sweet juice has been left to ferment—the natural process which transforms the sweetness in grape juice into alcohol and carbonic acid gas, it is but a green wine which must be given time to show its worth or the lack of it. The cask in which the new wine is lodged must be kept full to the bung, so that there shall be no excess of air having access to the new wine. It must be protected from draughts, extremes of heat and cold. Presently the wine in the cask reaches the bottling status. It has discarded and thrown out what it did not need any longer, chiefly tartrates which form the lees at the bottom of the cask; and it can be bottled and binned away to mature slowly with the merest fraction of air, which reaches it through the porous texture of the cork.

Slowly but surely the wine in each bottle will grow softer and better, up to the time when it will begin to grow flat and bitter. It is then quite unfit to drink. To the spirit drinker, whose tipple is always the same, this glorious uncertainty of what the wine is going to be like from one bottle to another, from one month to the next, may be a nuisance.

BUT THE wine lover does not always drink the same wine, and he does not care for the same wine from the same bin to be inevitably, monotonously the same, like a patent medicine. He tries one wine one day and another the next; he tastes with the utmost care and pleasure, one bottle from one bin one day and another bottle from the same bin on another occasion, and he notes with joy any improvement or with dismay any sign of decay. Of course, in the latter case, he never hesitates but gives the doubtful wine no further chance to become too old. In the case of wine, age is not a matter of years. Some wines will retain their youth and go on improving for many years, whilst a wine from the very same vineyard, but made in a less favorable vintage, will "go to pieces" after a very short term of residence in bottle.

Wine is never monotonous, and he or she who will only take the trouble to look for it should be able to find just the right wine for the right company and occasion. There are wines of many hues from the palest amber to the deepest purple; there are still and sparkling wines, and yet others which are just lively, not quite still and not really sparkling; there are dry and sweet wines, a whole range of fine shades and degrees of sweetness; there are wines which contain so little alcohol that any teetotaller could drink them with a clear conscience, and there are also wines which are so potent that they must not be quaffed but sipped; there are wines which are quite delightful to drink freely within a year or two of their vintage, whilst others may live up to twenty-five, fifty, and even to a hundred years and still be a real joy for wine connoisseurs.

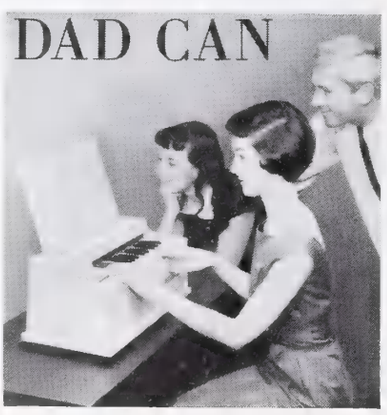
There is but one rule which needs to be remembered as regards the choice of different wines for different meals and occasions: "The best wine is that which is the most suitable, hence the most pleasing at the time." There are many rules concerning the service of wine, but none of them is binding, although most of them are reasonable.

It is reasonable, for instance, to serve a bottle of a sweet white wine with a sweet dish at the end of a meal rather than with a roast grouse or a pork chop. It is reasonable to choose lighter wines to begin with and stronger, heavier wines to follow rather than to precede them, but the most reasonable thing of all is to find out what your guests would like and, if you have no guests, to make up your own mind what you think would be the most suitable, hence the best, wine.



Last, but by no means least, wine is best because it is the safest, pleasantest, and most wholesome of all beverages. It is safer than water or milk; you cannot get typhoid or T.B. from any wine, be it old or young, cheap and nasty, or rare and costly. No microbes live in wine. It is pleasanter than other safe drinks because it is more gentle as well as more varied. There is no wine without any alcohol, since grape juice does not begin to be wine until it has fermented, and by then the sugar of the grape juice has become the alcohol of the wine. But the alcohol in wine is like the canvas upon which the artist paints a picture; it is there, of course, but you do not see it and do not think of it; it is not the canvas that you are interested in, but the picture which is on it.

How to Buy Wine

Wine is the living blood of t grape; it possesses life; it is liab to sickness and doomed to deat

Never buy any wine—be its price ever so cheap or its name ever so famous—which is not sound. A sound wine is a healthy wine; health alone is harmony.

The best wine for you to buy is the wine which suits you best, not the wine which it suits somebody to sell to you.

Buy wine from a wine merchant with a reputation to lose.

Never buy a wine as a speculation; it is not safe.

Never buy any wine that you do not care for, and do not buy more of any wine than you are likely to require.

When tempted, be wary lest you fall! Bargains are not safe; it is better to pay more and buy less; but buy well.

Public Auctions are not safe. It is better for you to give the wine merchant the price he asks for. If his wine fails to satisfy you after a time, whatever the cause, the wine merchant will see you through; his responsibility lasts as long as the wine he sells. The auctioneer's responsibility lasts no longer than the auction.

When buying wine, place quality first, variety second, quantity third, and cost last. Always buy some cheap, new, sound beverage wines, even if you can afford to buy the most expensive wines as well.

Buy cheap wines to drink habitually and fine wines to drink occasionally.

Trust your wine merchant or leave him. Train your palate so that you may trust your own judgment, but find a wine merchant whom you can trust as well.

Buy fair wine and treat it fairly. Find a home for it—a cool, dark, and quiet home: a good cellar.

How to Keep a Wine

A good cellar should be underground, but well ventilated; cool in summer and winter alike, and scrupulously clean.

When wine is delivered to you, remove the straw envelopes and paper wrappings; examine every bottle and reject faulty ones.

Never lay down a bottle of wine which shows signs of "ullage"—that is to say, the cork of which has allowed some of the wine to ooze out.

All wines should be binned in a horizontal position, so that the whole of the inside face of the cork is constantly in contact with the liquid, failing which the cork will shrink, some air will find its way into the bottle, and the wine will be spoiled.

If you are so short of cellar space that you cannot bin away your champagne or other cased wines as soon as you receive them, be careful to see that the cases are lying flat and not on their sides; otherwise the bottles inside the case would be in a vertical instead of in a horizontal position; half of them would be neck downward and safe, but the other half would be standing up and likely to grow flat after a time.

When binning Port, see to it that the white "splash" on the bottles is always uppermost; it will then be in exactly the same position as before it reached your cellar, and the crust, which is bound to be disturbed by the moving, will settle down much better into the old grooves, which it has made for itself in the very metal of the bottle.

Watch your bins of wine. Be on the look-out for any "weepers," so as to remove them and use them quickly before they have become "ullages."

Wine needs and repays care. Wine deserves not the hireling's care, but that loving care which is the only care that is intelligent and worthy of so precious a gift as wine.

How to Serve Wine

Decanting. Wine should always be served in brilliant condition.

All red wines with bottle-age throw a sediment which fouls the wine if it passes from the bottle into the glass. All such red wines should be carefully decanted.

Whenever possible, decant your old wine in the cellar, straight from the bin.

Take the bottle gently from the bin and lay it softly in a cradle.

Remove the metal cap or the wax protecting the outside face of the cork.

Wipe the upper lip of the bottle all around and thoroughly with a clean cloth.

Drive your corkscrew slowly right through the center of the cork and draw the cork steadily without any jerks, without either haste or hesitation.

Once the cork is drawn, wipe the inside lip of the bottle with a clean cloth, take hold of the bottle firmly in your right hand, and slowly pour its contents into a decanter held in your left hand.

Place a lighted candle or an electric bulb behind the shoulder of the bottle and watch the wine as it passes out of the neck of the bottle. As soon as you see some loose sediment come to the neck of the bottle, stand the bottle up. What wine may be left in the bottle is unfit for consumption; it is far better to lose a little wine and much sediment than to spoil a decanter of good wine with a little sediment.

Do not serve wine from basket or cradle if you can help it. It is always better to decant it.

The temperature at which you will serve your fine wines is of great importance.

Temperature. Avoid extremes. Use neither fire nor ice; shocks are always bad for wine.

White wines should be served cold; they may be iced, but no ice should ever be put in the wine itself.

Red wines should be served at the temperature of the dining room. They will be spoiled if warmed up quickly, either by being dipped into hot water or placed near the fire.

Decant red Bordeaux one hour, and Old Port two or three hours, before dinner. Let them stand in the dining room, where they will take the temperature of the room.

Glasses. Never serve fine wines —or fine brandy—in small glasses. Use large glasses, but never let them be filled to the brim. The subtle "bouquet" of a wine is its greatest charm, but you will neve be able to appreciate it should yo glass be too small or too full.

Fine glasses materially add to th enjoyment of fine wine. They en able one to appreciate its brilliar color. Above all, it is absolutel indispensable that both decanter and glasses should be faultless clean. The cloth used to wipe an polish glasses should never be use for anything else; the finest win will be completely ruined if serve in glasses which have been wipe with a dirty cloth.

The order in which wines shoul be served varies according to ind vidual tastes and the food serve The usually accepted order, how ever, is as follows:

With oysters, Chablis or Dr Champagne. With soup, Pale She ry or Dry Madeira. With fis Champagne or Dry White Wine With entrees, red Bordeaux. Wit roast or game, Burgundy. Wit sweets, Sauternes. With desser Port, Brown Sherry, or Rich M deira. With cheese, every kind wine is acceptable, which is wh Grimod de la Reynière calle cheese le biscuit des ivrognes.

clear and clean in her own inimitable way. Otherwise, if I had no one, then the children could "unset" the table at their leisure after the dessert and coffee.

By arranging a dinner party so that different courses are served in different rooms, it removes much of the stress and strain and you can truly enjoy your own feast. Half of our concern, I think, is the desire to have the party run smoothly at the time. With this modus operandi you can't fail to have an apparently effortless dinner party.

This dinner is easy to run up on the cooking level. But let's face it; it is expensive. Any lavish feast is, but let your mind go blank and loosen your purse strings! If you start gathering in the goodies ahead of time you can sort of spread the strain over the groaning budget.

Shellfish Elégante with Sauce Piquant

If you can't get live lobsters, then get them cooked. And if you live in a part of the world where superior ones are unavailable, then serve frozen Alaskan King Crab legs, or Jumbo Shrimp. After lobster, prefer King Crab, for it is so swee and delicious.

Allow one 1½- to 2-pound lob ster per person. One section the giant leg of the King Crab pe person should be sufficient, or fou Jumbo Shrimp.

I used a packaged box of spice for the Court Bouillon (seasone water) in which I boil crab shrimps, and lobsters. It is calle "Rex Crab and Shrimp Boil, packaged by New Orleans Impo Company, New Orleans, La. Yo can prepare your shellfish the da before your party. filet of beef, if done properly, be the most succulent meat in world. And its presentation can the most glamorous when done he manner that I dreamed up. nch terminology divides a filet into four sections. The large end of the tenderloin is where the "Bifteck" comes from. It usually is not cut thickly. The center section is the Chateaubriand and is cut very thick. The Tournedos are from the small end, are usually trimmed round, and are about 1¼ inches thick. The flat tip of the tenderloin is called the Filet Mignon and is cut in various thicknesses according to desire. In this country, however, we seem to have two categories, the Filet Mignon, and the Chateaubriand.

It is from the large end of the tenderloin that you should have the butcher cut your filet. It should be about ten inches long and weigh nearly four pounds. It must be a good heavy filet. Cut as I describe, one will serve six; so, if you are having sixteen, you will need three of them.

Wipe well with a wet paper towel and pour a good Madeira over all. I use either Leacock Fine Dry Sercial Cocktail Madeira, or Rozes Fine Bual (medium dry) Madeira. Allow about a quarter of a cup for each piece of meat. Pepper well with Java cracked pepper and put into a cold oven and turn on to 300° F. Allow 1½ hours cooking time, basting four times at even intervals with the following sauce.

The amounts given are for one four-pound tenderloin.

Sauce for Beef

⅓ cube of butter, melted
¼ cup of Madeira drippings from meat

Keep basting sauce hot, and take the beef out of the oven, pour pan drippings into the basting sauce, and then baste meat copiously with sauce. Return to oven, and repeat process four times in all. If the beef is fat, you must skim off excess fat before each basting, for grease is death to a delectable sauce, and that is what you want to head for with the Madeira.

After the beef has been cooking for half an hour, or when brown, turn so the other side will brown. The Madeira has enough sweetness, so the beef should be a lovely dark color.

The temperature behavior of all ovens seems to be different, but here is what I do. I put the room-temperature beef into a cold oven, put both top and bottom elements (I have electric ovens) on high, then when the roast is browning and sizzling, I turn the top element to low, and the lower one to medium. All through the cooking period the thermostat is set at 300° F.

Permit us to speak frankly. You do yourself an injustice if you force the attendance of ordinary vegetables upon a truly fine cut of beef. If excellence is your goal, we invite your consideration of LeSueur Brand peas. They are by no means an ordinary vegetable.

These tiny, very tender peas are the result of years and years of careful breeding. And they are grown on only a very few square miles of land, where conditions of climate and soil are deemed ideal. This care and caution has resulted in peas that are unrivaled for delicate substance and flavor . . . except, perhaps, by the famed Petits Pois of France.

We urge you to grace your table with Le Sueur Brand peas soon. The tiny, very tender ones.

New type filter stops five times the fine dust—can be vacuum-cleaned

A new type of air filter is now available throughout the country. It will especially interest those who've found many popular kinds of filters unequal to the demands of modern forced-air heating and air-conditioning systems.

Replaceables Not Replaced. Filters designed for periodic replacement are probably the worst offenders. Since the need to change them frequently is rarely emphasized, users merely take them out and shake them off every once in a while. Under such conditions, they cannot filter properly.

Expensive Filters No Answer. Even when more expensive, so-called "permanent" filters are used, there are problems. Many of them require regular reoiling — a messy proposition at best. And they're only permanent in comparison with the short-lived throwaway types.

Traps Fine Dirt. It's easy to see, then, why the new PLIOTRON CR Filters have created so much enthusiasm among the technicians who put them through their paces. Trapping dirt with the help of electrostatic action, they stop as much as five times as many of the tiny, hard-to-catch dust particles. And their full filtering efficiency can be restored by an easy vacuum-cleaning or simple water rinse.

Lifetime of Filter Service. Best of all, PLIOTRON CR Filters are really permanent — serving at full filter-power for the life of the heating or air-conditioning system. You can get complete information by filling out the coupon below—or see your heating or hardware dealer.

A TRULY ELEGANT DINNER PARTY

I serve this meat so it looks like a real "production." My large silver tea tray is the basic holder of the scenery. On top of it I put a silver sauce boat and a silver plate for the block of sliced pâté. Cover the edges of the bigger tray with loads of parsley. A thick bed of this is important for it must be lush-looking. Leave the center space empty to receive the meat platter. We use a large crêpe pan so we can have it good and hot.

Have a cup of brandy warming on the stove, for this will be the touch that contributes the glamour. Remove the tenderloins from the oven. Then slice a portion off the large end so it will be level and you can stand these beauties upright. Place them carefully in the warmed crêpe or serving platter. Then pour the sauce from the roasting pan over the meat. Bring it to the serving table.

When the guests are assembled, pour the hot brandy over all the meat and flame. It is very spectacular and the burned brandy merging with the cooking sauce gives a delectable flavor. Keep spooning the brandy sauce over the beef until it is all burned out. The burning brandy merges all the flavors.

The carver can make a great show of spooning the burning brandy over the meat and everyone will admire the blazing beef.

A tenderloin is the easiest thing in the world to carve, but here's a tip: slice the meat in rather thin slices, for the pâté and sauce would be lost on a great thick piece of beef. Each piece of beef will have medium, well done, and rare meat. The ends are more done than the center.

After carving, put on each beef slice a slice of pâté and a spoonful of sauce from the sauce boat (which is different from the sauce from the cooking process).

Heat the soup, undiluted, saving some to dissolve the arrowroot in. (I use Taylor Brothers, London, England.) Add slowly to the hot broth and cook on very low fire for about five minutes. Add the chopped truffles and mushrooms, which have been marinating in the Madeira, pour the whole thing in, heat and cook for a minute or two. This sauce can be made the day before and stored in a covered container in the refrigerator.

Serve bubbling hot, with a small saucespoon over each slice of beef, for the helpings of this delectable sauce should be small. You don't want the plates drowned in this rich brew.

I hope I have given you this picture clearly; it is a sensational dish and to me one of the easiest.

The pâté can be sliced in the thinnest possible slices in the morning and arranged on the serving plate. It is easier to slice when cold. I like the "block" type, for the slices are uniform, and it is more easily and attractively arranged.

I send over to France for my pâté, for it is superb. It is called Pâté Foie D'Oie, 5 Rue Saint Silain 5, Perigueux. However, Louis Henry Foie Gras is excellent. The "baby block" of 7½ ounces might be enough for 16 if you are an expert slicer. To be on the safe side buy the 11-ounce block. Refrigerate and then slice carefully with a hot knife. Lay the slices tenderly on your serving dish and refrigerate, putting dish and all in a plastic bag. Whisk out when you are ready to "mount" your wondrous dish.

Wild Rice

This wild rice is a favorite with my family, so, since I like to please them as well as have a great banquet, wild rice we shall have.

Allow one cup of wild rice for five persons. The box says four servings per cup, but we are going to add mushrooms and artichoke hearts, so one cup will serve five.

Wash the rice in many waters until water is almost clear. I take the rice in two hands and rub it together to get out all the dust and particles. Then I allow it to soak in cold water for an hour. Bring consommé to a boil; have twice as much consommé as rice. Add some salt, drain the rice and put in the saucepan, cover and cook until done—about thirty minutes. Rice must be flaky and tender. If there is any consommé left, pour it out. You can cook this rice the day before, and if you do, save the consommé and add a little to reheat. This prevents sticking on the pan.

This is Shellfish Élégante, first course of my truly elegant dinner. I served this course in the living room in front of the fire, so it could be cleared away easily and quickly when we went into the dining room.

Put a generous mound of rice in ne center of a hot platter, place rtichoke hearts with mushrooms round the rice. Scatter chopped hives and parsley over all and erve.

Mushrooms and Artichoke Hearts

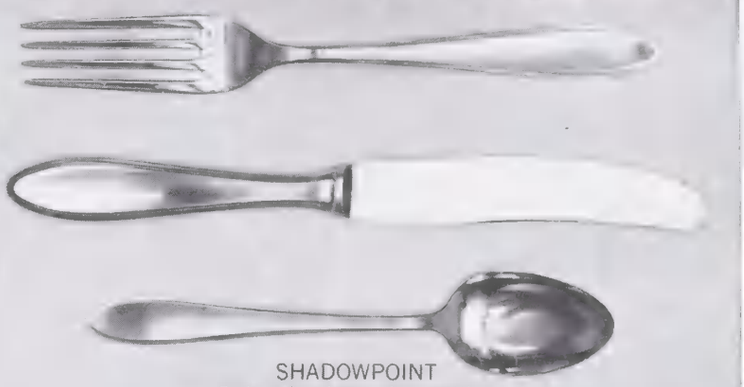
I much prefer the fresh artiokes, but if you have to resort to repared ones, I prefer the frozen the canned. Mushrooms are so uch better fresh, but the tinned uttons done in butter can be used you live in some place where resh ones cannot be obtained. ried mushrooms, soaked, then mmered briefly in consommé will erve too.

In preparing the mushrooms and ne artichokes, I use my two favore spice concoctions. One is "Beau londe" (Spice Islands) and the her Chef Howald's "All-N-One easoning" (Box 543, Des Moines, wa).

In selecting mushrooms, get them f uniform size. This permits them all get done at the same time.

Rinse the mushrooms quickly. ut off the stems even with the cap these to be chopped for the eak). Melt a big thick pat of utter (about a third of a cube). dd a half teaspoon of each "Beau londe" and Chef Howald's, plus quarter of a teaspoon of M.S.G. in a frying pan with the butter and add spices. When butter has melted, swish it around the pan to mix the spices, then add mushrooms, cut side up. Cover and allow to cook until just tender, not limp. You can do these in the morning and store in the cooking utensil and reheat.

Put the same spice brew in another frying pan for the artichokes, adding just enough water to cover the bottom of the pan. Add the frozen artichokes and cook until barely tender. If there is any liquid on the cooked frozen artichokes, drain. These also can be done the morning of the party.



If you are using fresh artichokes, boil the whole artichoke in seasoned water, until barely tender. Peel off leaves and store the whole hearts in a covered container until ready to use. The family can have the leaves for lunch. Sauté the whole cooked artichoke hearts just as you did the mushrooms and serve with the rice.

I pour the rice into the serving platter first, then place the artichokes next, then tumble the mushrooms over the artichokes—oh yes, pour the seasoned cooking butter out right along with the mushrooms and artichokes.

String Beans with Onions

3 boxes frozen whole green beans
1 can tiny whole onions
¾ teaspoon "Beau Monde"
¾ teaspoon Chef Howald's seasoning
¼ teaspoon M.S.G.
⅛ pound of butter

This serves eight. (I use either C & W whole baby string beans or "Flav-R-Pac." The C & W is packed or distributed by California & Washington Co., San Francisco. "Flav-R-Pac" is put out by North Pacific Canners & Packers, Inc., Portland, Oregon.)

Scatter the "Beau Monde," Chef Howald's and M.S.G. lightly in the bottom of the largest frying pan you have. Thinly slice the butter and cover the bottom of the pan. Break the frozen string beans apart by pounding the sealed packages on the edge of the drain board, whacking them on all sides and ends. Scatter the beans as evenly as possible over the pan, and add a quarter cup of water. Bring to a quick boil, lower heat and cook about five minutes. You may have to allow longer time, depending on the size and thickness of the string beans.

Mound on a hot platter, garnish with the sautéed onions, chopped chives, and parsley, and place on the serving table. If you serve in covered containers, the vegetables will keep hot longer, especially if you have an electric warming tray.

The onions are called York County Dutch onions, with a printed word "tiny" on the picture of the onions. Packed by Hungerford Packing Co., Hungerford, York County, Pennsylvania.

Drain the onions, saving the juice to be used at a later date. In a frying pan put a thick pat of butter and one half teaspoon of brown sugar. When all is melted and sizzling, put in the onions and sauté them for a few minutes, or until nicely golden brown, and add to the just-cooked string beans and serve.

I am the gal who likes more sauce than cake, so I heap masses of goodies on a "base." This dessert is a dream to make, for it is so easy, and also it wows the guests.

Apricot Delight

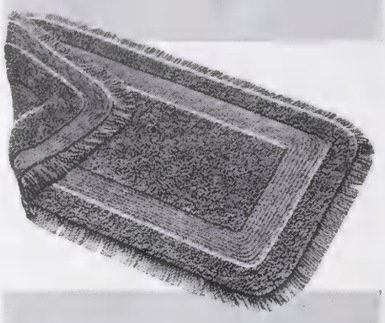
1 lovely light sponge cake, 1½ inches thick
2 cans whole peeled apricots
12 macaroons (almond flavored)
½ cup slivered almonds
Apricot jam
Orange marmalade
Cointreau
Whipped cream

Make your cake the day before, or if you prefer, make it day ahead and freeze. If you use package mix and it makes a tall cake, cut it in four layers. I prefer the 1½-inch thickness, cut in two layers for ease of serving. I prefer to make two separate platters of it, rather than pile it in four layers. You know how difficult it is to cut and serve, for it topples into a mess.

Drain the apricots the day before, saving enough juice to keep them moist and sparkling. Boil the juice down to a syrupy consistency and store in a covered container until ready to use. Chop the macaroons and store them in a covered container until ready to use. If you cannot buy almonds already slivered, then do them yourself. Again you can do this a few days ahead. I always keep a container of them on hand.



Whip a pint of heavy cream, sugar lightly, then flavor it with Cointreau. Two to three tablespoons, according to your taste. You can do this a few hours ahead of time. Cover the container with foil and refrigerate until ready to use.

I invite my guests to leave the table before the dessert course and go to another room. This affords more opportunities for conversation with more people. Also, while the guests are assembling in the "dessert room," I can bring together the ready parts of this "Apricot Delight." Cut the cake across in half, for you are going to make a sweet sandwich. On the top of the bottom layer, spread a generous amount of apricot jam, scatter half the chopped macaroons and nuts over this. On the bottom of the top layer, spread a thin coating of orange marmalade. Place this marmalade side down gently over the bottom layer. (You should do this on your serving platter.)

Around the cake, heap mounds of the whole peeled apricots. Then pour over the apricot syrup, then over the top of the cake scatter the remaining macaroons and nuts. Drip over a half cup of Cointreau. Mound the whipped cream between the apricots and bring your beautiful production proudly in to your guests. Serve by cutting as you would a pie.

Serve coffee and liqueurs at your leisure.

PHOTOGRAPH BY GEORGE HOLTON

Kashmir and the romantic idyll of a houseboat afloat on Dal Lake, against a setting of terraced gardens and the snow-capped Himalayas are at their loveliest in the summer. Houseboats rent at about $5 a day, including meals and four servants. The nearest city is Srinagar, Kashmir's capital.

wise travelers will, during the winter. From October to March, the weather is fair, dry, and pleasantly cool, even cold in the morning and evening. During the rest of the year, temperatures sizzle or the rains come and all who can take to the cool northern mountains. (Summer is the season for the houseboat in Kashmir so many of us dream about.) But since winter is the time when most Indians themselves do their traveling, hotel, plane, and train reservations must be made in advance.

India is a land of many festivals, most of them religious in character. But to a traveler, the most rewarding festival of all is Republic Day, January 26, when all of India seems to converge in New Delhi to take part in a tremendous pageant of parades and folk dances. (All 21 states are represented in local costume, so it's the closest most of us can come to seeing India in toto.)

But always in India one has the feeling of people going somewhere, moving, on bicycle, in jingling horse-drawn tongas, in farm carts, in cars, on foot. Although there are architectural and scenic sights to be seen to rival any fairy tale in beauty, to most Western eyes the most fascinating attraction is the people themselves, colorful, exotic, tantalizing because there are so many different kinds of faces and dress—and so much to learn about them.

Walk along the Janpath in New Delhi—the modern, planned capital—there are the bearded, turbaned Sikhs, who never cut their hair, wear a steel bracelet, and are the traditional warriors, doorkeepers, and taxi drivers. There are Jains, devout apostles of non-violence, wearing nose masks lest they breathe in and destroy the insects in the air. There are the followers of the god Siva who mark their foreheads with a bright red dot and three horizontal stripes of sandalwood paste; the followers of Vishnu, who mark their foreheads with three vertical stripes; the draped Muslim women, their faces hidden in a veil of mesh; the emaciated holy men in saffron, with matted hair and rosary beads; Tibetan refugees, redolent of yak butter, their garments so filthy and worn that they blend into a mess of rags. There are men wearing the dhoti, the white swaddling cloth that hitches up between the legs and is the Hindu equivalent of trousers. There are men in Western clothes (but rarely do you see an Indian city lady—no matter how "modern" her outlook—in anything but the graceful sari).

Along this broad and really lovely road, which leads to the fashionable Diplomatic Enclave, the embassies, and fine homes, squat fakirs and sweetmeat sellers, soothsayers and souvenir hawkers, snake charmers and men who stage the miserable and universal mongoose and snake fight. Maybe you will see a dancing bear, or sauntering calmly through the crowds, a cream-color Brahma bull—unmolested because he is considered sacred. This is urban India—and only the merest, minuscule glimpse of the whole, for 80% of India's population lives in villages.

To capture the essential atmosphere of India—and to grasp her greatest problems—you must go out into the country. Follow the inevitable tourist triangle from New Delhi to Jaipur to Agra, and make the trip by car instead of plane. You will drive through flat fields of millet, past the dried river beds, along roads lined with the neem tree, whose twigs are India's toothbrushes, into the dusty, sunstruck villages with their mud houses, tiny temples, or mosques. This is the land of the water wheel, of cow-dung patty baking on the wall to be used as fuel, of incredibly graceful women in brilliant skirts and head veils, jingling with their dowry of silver bracelets, anklets, nose jewels. Here is where you see the scampering monkeys—and the brilliant peacocks. And you will see also how the land, tilled with the crudest of home-made tools and the most arduous hand labor, is blowing away in clouds of dust.

The villagers seem to live their lives mostly in the open, with unself-conscious casualness. Outside a thatched mud house, a man sleeps on his bed of woven rope. His wife squats on her heels in the dust, sifting grain, surrounded by children. Looking into the house you catch a glimpse of a grandmother, more women, more children, for India follows the joint family system, brothers and their families living together in their parents' home. On the floor you see their handsome sand-scoured brass water jars and on the wall a garish lithograph of a Hindu god, garlanded in marigolds. A child relieves himself in the roadside ditch. A dead dog lies in the road. A flock of vultures wheels overhead.

This is the reality of India—much of it so exotic, so picturesque in form and color that it lends itself to romanticizing. To a Westerner, much is also ugly, squalid, heartbreaking in its human implications, and no honest reporter must neglect to point this out to potential travelers. But what you see will fall into more understandable perspective if you acquaint yourself with some of the complex facts of India's life.

About 84% of India is Hindu, followers of a 4000-year-old doctrine of reincarnation and denial of worldly preoccupations. Hinduism, with its 330 million gods and goddesses, its labyrinthine mythology, its poetic scriptures, is followed as a ceremonial religion by the masses, although many modern intellectual Hindus tend to regard it more as a philosophy. But, however it is followed, it literally permeates every act of daily life for close to one-seventh of the human race—from bathing to lovemaking, from birth to cremation. It is the basis of all truly Indian art—sculpture, painting, architecture, dancing—and even reflects itself in the motifs and forms of handcrafts. (Needless to say, you'd do well to learn something about it before you go.)

Stated superficially, a Hindu believes that the more patiently he tolerates his lot the more he is assured of a better life in his next incarnation and the closer he comes to his ultimate goal—moksha, complete liberation from the natural world and union with the universe. At this point he will not live on earth, but with the gods.

In other words, in his apparently passive acceptance of misery and the seamy side of the world, a Hindu beggar may not consider himself as badly off as we would consider him. Still, he is suffering from disease, filth, poverty. But it helps the squeamish traveler to remember that educated Indians not only recognize this, but are working with astonishing dedication to eradicate the causes. Against the tremendous odds of superstition, illiteracy, and inertia, the 10-year-old Republic has already accomplished miracles in its gargantuan task of education, agricultural reform, conservation, and development of resources and industry. (In 13 years the rate of literacy has risen from 16% to 40%.) There are problems on every level, all urgent, from India's population explosion to the threat of Communist China on the northern borders and the influx of refugees from Tibet and China. Only when you are aware of this infinitely complicated background can you understand what you see and hear in India. Since the fate of this balance-wheel country of Asia must inevitably be reflected in the whole world, there has never been a time when it was more urgent for the West to know

Amber, a beautifully preserved fortress-palace built in 928—a little jewel of a sightseeing experience which deserves a good deal more publicity than it gets. It is magnificence on a human scale, so you can visualize the life that was lived in its courts and pools and mirror-mosaic halls. To compound the romantic novelty, you ascend its steep approach on an elephant painted with floral motifs.

IT IS a four-hour drive from Jaipur to Agra and the Taj Mahal, but take a couple of hours to stop at Fatehpur Sikri, another amazingly well preserved fortress city. It was built in 1569 by the Muslim ruler, Akbar, whose curiously un-Muslim tolerance for all religions shows up in the architectural detail of this vast, red sandstone complex of courts, pools, and palaces. There are the Hindu lotus and left-handed swastika, the Chinese bracket, and painted on the wall in the house of his Christian wife, a Bible scene.

Clearly, a taste for architecture characterized Akbar's line, for the Taj Mahal in Agra was built by his grandson, Shah Jahan, who also built the Red Fort in Delhi and much of Agra Fort, both great compounds of palaces and public buildings, little cities in themselves.
Most people think of these domes and spires and arches as typically Indian, but they are Moghul architecture, the ultimate result of the eighth-century Muslim invasion of India. Indigenous Hindu architecture, much more ancient, is infinitely more florid, using much sculpture and carving. In the South, its form is pyramidal; in the North it is shaped like attenuated beehives.

The Taj Mahal exceeds every description. To appreciate it fully you should visit it at different times of day. No sight in the world can match its ephemeral loveliness by moonlight. (This winter full moon will occur Nov. 3, Dec. 3, Jan. 2, Feb. 1, March 2.) It is a Muslim tomb, built by Shah Jahan for a beloved wife, Mumtaz Mahal, and the story is that it took 22,000 men 18 years to build it (1630-1648). At close hand you'll discover that it is not white marble alone, but magnificently inlaid with floral designs in semi-precious stones—a craft that is still the local specialty.

In Agra most Western travelers stay at Laurie's Hotel, which like many Indian hotels perpetuates the British morning bed tea, afternoon tea, a garden, and a watery way with vegetables.

We found Banaras the strangest and most colorful city in terms of atmosphere and incredible sights. It's the great holy city, on the sacred River Ganges (or Ganga) where every devout Hindu longs to come to bathe himself free from imperfection. Consequently you can see here a cross-section of India on pilgrimage. Its road approaches teem with old, young, sick, dying, and the dead, carried in their flower-wreathed shrouds en route to the most desirable place of cremation—the Banaras burning ghats. The narrow, crooked streets and the crowded, mazelike bazaars of the old city are alive with activity. Everywhere there are temples and shrines. As a Westerner, you move in the unaccustomed pungence of incense and human bodies and the omnipresent marigold. In early evening when prayers are said the streets are full of the alien din of temple horns and clanging bells.

But you get the full impact of Banaras in early morning, when the devout come to pray as they bathe in the river, descending the steps of the bathing ghats into the water. Seen from a boat on the river, the city and the sight of the bathers have a strange beauty, almost painfully intense in color, glittering with the flash of metal bathing bowls.

A little beyond the bathing ghats are the burning ghats, colorful in their own terrible way because the shrouds of wives are red, others are white, and there are flowers and flame. No pomp and little ceremony. From our boat we watched a small boy, accompanied only by a young man, put the torch to his father's bier, walking five times around the pyre.

In Sarnath, a short drive from Banaras, is a deer park which is a place of pilgrimage for the Buddists, for here Gautama Buddha, a sort of Hindu protestant against the religion of his time, preached his first sermon in the 6th Century B.C. and started Buddhism on its powerful way through the East.

The weaving of fabric is India's greatest and most marvelous skill, each region specializing in its own type. From Banaras come the magnificent heavy brocades and silk saris, lavishly bordered with gold, and highly prized as trousseau material by Indian brides. No two are ever precisely alike. We saw a thrilling selection at the state (Uttar Pradesh) Industrial Cooperative Association. The choice ones run from $27 to $50. Like all saris, they are generous 6-yard lengths, 46" wide, tremendous bargains in beauty.

The two best hotels in Banaras, the Hotel de Paris and Clark's, are in its countryside outskirts, far from the crowds and hubbub.

From a brief look at the industrial metropolis of Calcutta, we conclude it is not a pretty one. It is Western in a British way—as India naturally is wherever the Western influence shows up. The hard realities of our world are sadly represented here in the miserable plight of hordes of Chinese refugees. Paradoxically, from this sometimes sordid town comes some of the most advanced thinking and cultural accomplishment of modern India.

The Grand Hotel is considered best here. It's one of the Oberoi chain which operates hotels throughout India which, from our limited observation, appear most desirable to Westerners.

In Calcutta, for about $15 we found the indigenous white silk, blue and red bordered saris at the Handloom House of the All India Society. This is also the locale of the brilliant, delightful clay toys.

In Madras you sample South India, where everything gets even more colorful. The city itself is quite beautiful, stretching along the beaches of the Bay of Bengal. From here you go back, back to India's past, to the well preserved 6th-century ruins of Kanchipuram, where the Pallavas ruled. Not far is Mahabalipuram, an ancient temple by the sea.

Madras was our initiation into the bewildering, controlled beauty of the classic Indian dance, performed in an outdoor theater by Kamala Laxman, one of the most adept of the women dancers. Highly symbolic, the dance is a disciplined interpretation of religious stories, so the most an uninformed Westerner can expect of it is to enjoy its colorful grace and remarkable kinetics, against the unfamiliar rhythms of flute and drum. When you attend a performance, your forehead is marked with sandalwood, you are given sugar on your tongue, and flowers for the enjoyment of their scent—so mind and senses are symbolically prepared for the uplifting experience the dance represents.

In Madras we found the shop of the Victoria Technical Institute a treasure trove for embroidered organdy and appliqué table linen, for children's dresses, and similar fine work. The Handicrafts Emporium

How to Send Your Baby to College on $9.50 a Week

A good college education today costs as much as $65 a week. But, the same education can be bought with much less financial strain if you start now, putting $9.50 a week into U.S. Savings Bonds. At college age there will be more than $11,000 —and over $2,750 of it will come entirely from interest. That's like getting a whole year of college free.

HERE'S WHY U.S. SAVINGS BONDS ARE SUCH A GOOD WAY TO SAVE

• You can save automatically with the Payroll Savings Plan • You now earn 3¾% interest at maturity • You invest without risk under a U.S. Government guarantee • Your money can't be lost or stolen • You can get your money, with interest, any time you want it • You save more than money—you're helping your Government pay for peace • Buy Bonds where you work or bank.

The Connemara Hotel appeals to Westerners, but we had our eye on the new Oceanic on the beach.

BOMBAY, on the west coast, is the most aggressive of India's cities. Astonishingly reminiscent of Rio de Janeiro, it runs right to the beach, a broad avenue curving with the shoreline.

The "must" sightseeing here is a trip over the water to see the incredible sculpture of the Elephanta Caves, tremendous bas reliefs carved so intricately out of the rock that they seem completely dimensional. And from here you can drive to Aurangabad, then to see more ancient cave art in Ajanta and Ellora.

Bombay is the center of India's Parsee population, a relatively small group of Zoroastrians whose industry and probity have earned them positions of importance. Theirs are Bombay's famous Towers of Silence where the dead are left to the birds.

Filigree jewelry and "beggar's" necklaces and brooches of multicolor precious stones are typical of this area. We shopped for these and the region's striped silk at the Khadi Bhavan. And the City Handloom House, where the fabric assortment is fabulously good, for raw silk yard goods and neckties, saris, plaids and raw silk inset with mirror sequins.

In Bombay, the Taj Mahal and the Ambassador are Western-favored hotels.

In New Delhi, no shopper should miss the Central Cottage Industries Emporium, where the whole great profusion of the best in Indian Crafts is presented, from the rugs of Kashmir and the bird-feather-soft shatoosh "ring" stoles (about $40) to brass lamps, thong-toed chappals, appliquéd chikkan-work tablecloths, silk brocade handbags. For antiques, and the local color in quantity, don't miss the Chandni Chowk bazaar in Old Delhi.

New Delhi's most magnificent hotel is the government-owned Ashoka. The Imperial and Claridge's are well regarded. In Old Delhi, Maiden's continues in cozy pukka-sahib tradition. Don't expect great luxury.

As for Indian food, you'll love it if you like cardamom, cumin, coriander, chili, mustard, tamarind, and buffalo milk. The whole variety of breads is tantalizing—crisp papads, puffy pooris, and paratas like unsweetened puff paste. In the Moti Mahal restaurant in Old Delhi, the specialty is tandoori chicken and fish—baked in clay, served with mint curry, and bread drenched with clarified butter. Surroundings will never replace The Four Seasons, but when the ice-cream dessert of almond-flavored kulfi comes on, coated with real silver leaf, you'll open your eyes. In a private home you may be regaled with a carrot pudding covered with gold leaf. India teeters on the brink of prohibition. Some cities are totally dry, but tourists may get liquor permits through the government tourist office.

A car and driver for a day's sightseeing can cost as little as $10. Hotel rooms run about $8. The monetary unit is the rupee, at about 4.7 to the U. S. dollar.

You will probably have no language difficulties because English is commonly spoken in the cities. India officially recognizes 14 different languages, so Indians from different areas speaking different languages frequently communicate in English.

You will do well to make your travel arrangements far ahead of time through a travel agent. But you will get invaluable assistance in the U. S. A. from the India Government Tourist Office, which also has offices in every major Indian city. They can arrange guide service—and guides here are superior. In these offices you will again recognize the alert and dedicated modern Indians who are responsible for their country's already impressive accomplishments. And you will be particularly impressed in your contact with the modern Indian woman, who it seems to us tops her sisters the world over in intelligence, energy and competence.

attention to what the "natives" think—and why—as to their picturesque looks. There is no culture that has not something of value to teach us and, a more sobering thought, none whose attitudes will not inexorably affect our future, so interlocked are world affairs.

THE HUNDREDS of readers, who wrote HOUSE BEAUTIFUL in appreciative response to our August and September issues on Japan and the meaning of shibui and its application to American life, are heartening evidence that there are many Americans who recognize this responsibility. Unfortunately there are many others who are tripping about the world to whom the message has not come through—enough of them to make Mr. F. J. Pechman observe in his letter:

"We Americans are now engaged in a stupid mileage game . . . we race around the world playing hopscotch with countries, trying to see how many of them we can plant our big feet on, simply to be able to acquire a high total number. We crawl up mountains, duck into caves, speed through forests, gawk around in museums and cathedrals of the world . . . and in all this jet-speeding and motor racing over the world we see nothing, hear nothing, and learn nothing. But what important totals we have acquired! . . . 14 countries . . . 37 states . . . 27,000 miles and 213 color slides."

There is enough truth in this to make you wonder if he may not have something, when he suggests later in his letter that we and the world might be better off if we stopped for breath and sat for a moment on our back doorsteps . . . just to think. Certainly we should like to recommend this to certain of the avid voyagers we have met to whom travel is important as a prestige symbol, people who seem not really to care where they go as long as it is farther away and more expensive than the place the Joneses went last year. They don't take planes like the rest of us; they "jet." They place-drop, warily watching to see if their listeners are duly impressed or about to top them with a "better" name. They are usually keen reporters on prices and accommodations, but are generally voluble misinterpreters of the societies they've visited.

One of the most ironic results of America's present plethora of travel opportunities is the appalling opinion of some travelers that they've exhausted the world. We heard one American lady complain to another, "When this trip is over, there'll be no place left to go. I've been everywhere and seen everything." Her companion, instead of hooting at this inanity, replied that she still had Australia and New Zealand to do. They arose, when the flight to Bangkok was called, trailing cashmere stoles and the luxurious scent of "Joy," presumably off to corner the market on Thai silk and princess rings, as innocent of the world they'd just been around as if they'd been born that morning.

We have been in 55 countries to date and there isn't one we wouldn't like to visit once more in greater depth, and meantime there come immediately to mind 18 countries we still want to explore, plus the project of one time covering our own great country in a state-by-state itinerary.

We can testify to the fact that once you have made life-seeing as important a part of your traveling as sightseeing, you cannot travel any other way. You will, as a matter of course, prefer to concentrate your traveling time on one or two places, avoiding the one-night stands as you would the plague. You will find that some places call for more understanding effort on your part than others, but that makes them all the more satisfying. We are ashamed to admit how much effort and study it has taken us to begin to comprehend the Orient—a part of the world that is most crucial to Americans and about which we are so miserably ill informed. But we can count as two of the most rewarding experiences of our lifetime our attempts to delve into the attitudes that make Japan and India what they are.

The day has long since passed when travel and escape were synonymous words, when we could look at the world as if it were a musical comedy. Travel now has acquired a nobler dimension. It's America's chance to understand her relationship to the whole human family.

collecting plants for woodsy container garden. One is the horticulturist's approach. Only what normally grows together is grouped together in the bowl. This was followed in making the dish gardens illustrated on pages 214-215. This has the appeal of ecological rightness as well as the more practical value of making maintenance easier. Plants of a similar environment grouped together are easier to care for and will probably last longer because they all take much the same conditions of heat, light, and moisture. But you don't have to do your garden this way. If you see things you want to enjoy close at hand indoors, by all means include them in your creation. Whether you find them in sunny, shady, moist, or dry places, they will live together in a container for long enough to give you pleasure.

It is best not to start out with preconceived notions as to the design of your dish-garden. Collect the things that appeal to you, and let them dictate its make-up. You should, of course, keep in mind the size and shape of the container you have selected. Containers may or may not have drainage holes. If you use one without drainage, you must always be careful not to suffocate the roots by over-watering. Besides the container, all the equipment you need for this project is a trowel, basket to gather the materials in, and a pair of sharp eyes.

What to Look For

You'll find the best material among the mosses, lichen, evergreen seedlings, miniature ferns, and such dainty woodland plants as pipsissewa, rattlesnake plantain, and partridgeberry. Anything that takes your eye is fair game, including sticks and stones to help set the woodsy scene.

In the following list are some things to be found in the New England woods. These have all good "staying" qualities. You will find many other varieties in the East. Try them out and see how they perform. In other parts of the country, a container garden may be made similarly with various small delightful growing things to be found for the looking.

The main thing to remember is to make your planting as natural as possible.

As you collect them, observe how these things grow or lie on the ground. One can hardly find a better source of inspiration for design than Nature herself.

Here are some specific things to look for in the Northeast, with advice on how to handle them.

Moss and Lichen

"A rolling stone gathers no moss," but one that has been resting in the woods or along a shady roadside is more than likely to be covered with a luxurious bright green velvet carpet. Lift the edge of moss gently with your trowel, starting at one side of the rock and holding the whole "carpet" carefully so it peels off as nearly as possible in one piece. Place this moss-side down in your basket, the next piece moss-side up, and so on. This will prevent dirt and sand from soiling the mossy side. Some mosses seem to grow right out of the ground, deep and thick, each separate stem looking like a special kind of star-capped pine tree. Gather these with your trowel, don't worry if the underpart looks brown, because when they are planted in your bowl only the green tops will show.

You may often find lichens near star moss. The most usual are fairy cups, minute pale green, silvery trumpets, the red coats with bright red flowerets, so delicate they're hard to believe, and reindeer moss, a lichen that looks like curly gray string. This grows all over the world. North of the Arctic Circle it is the principal food of the reindeer all winter long.

Around old stone walls or beside the stumps of dead trees you may find other kinds of moss and lichens, too. Look for aqua or turquoise blue paper-thin lichens with curly edges. They are easily lifted. Little pin cushions of dark or light yellow-green moss may be found almost anywhere. Add samples of them all to your basket.

Coral beads, the earth lichen, grow in dense clusters, each little bead no longer than a pin head, but all together creating a mass of unbelievable pink, orange, and coral color. These are usually found growing on old banks along the side of a road, where the soil has been partly washed away. Lift them carefully in chunks with your trowel. Good-size pieces of this will prove most useful in making some of the contours and adding color to your garden.

Sticks and Stones

Always keep an eye out for small interesting pieces of bent or gnarled root or fallen branches. These may be covered with lichen, fungus, or delicately colored moss. Treasure these for they make perfect accent pieces. Or if you happen upon a decayed stump, green with age, gently pry loose some pieces and lift them out without disturbing the lichen attached. A piece of fallen bark coated with tiny ferns or some red coats is always a prize bit. A fallen tree, especially a deciduous one, may be covered with fungus, sometimes rows and rows of brightly striped "fans" with wavy scalloped edges. These are called cup fungi, and you should pare them off. They may be striated in orange, red, purple, gold, and green, or rich chestnut brown on one side and white on the other.

If you find a dead birch tree, there will more than likely be some shelf fungi on it. You may recognize it as the one that is used to draw pictures on. Add a small one or two to your collection. Small stones of unusual shape or color, especially those with bits of moss clinging to them, should also go in your basket.

Seedlings

Feathery little cedars or junipers, hemlocks, or long-needled pines are often found growing in profusion, especially near a well-established woods. Some of these are only a few inches tall. Lift them with your trowel, but dig deep to be sure and get all the roots without disturbing them. Take time to find attractive compact seedlings. They will probably be the largest element in your arrangement.

Ferns

Ferns are the essence of woodsiness. Keep a sharp eye out for the tiny delicate ones. Hair ferns, as the name implies, have fronds on stems no thicker than the hair of a horse's tail. They are only about a half-inch wide, several stems growing straight out from a little cluster close to the ground.

Then there are those that look like miniature Boston ferns, but are only two to six inches high. These are most likely to be found on a rocky bank or in clefts of rock. In the same place you may also find lovely pale green scalloped ones. If they're tiny, take them; they'll last. Pass over the larger feathery ones and the familiar maiden hair, because these don't seem to keep too well. Also avoid those that have been growing in moist places. They will require too much watering.

Woodsy Plants

There are other small woodsy plants, more difficult to find, that add the look of authenticity to the miniature landscape. Among these is rattlesnake plantain (Goodyera) which grows in small clusters mostly in deep or moist woods, under fallen leaves. It is pale green, mottled with pale and dark green, veined in white, and lies close to the ground. The leaves spread to form a small rosette about two to four inches across. This is a member of the orchid family and in the late spring or early summer, your garden may be rewarded with a lovely white waxen orchid borne on a tall slender stem. The flower, fortunately, lasts for a long time.

Pipsissewa (Chimaphila) is an herb, with shiny dark green and spiked leaves, roughly veined with white, the stem dark red. In the summer it also has a lovely little white waxen flower which might even bloom in your garden container next spring.

If you know where wintergreen (Gaultheria procumbens) grows, take some of it along too. It is easily separated from its tangled patch with your fingers. Take some of the surrounding earth with it. Try to get the vines that are spiked with red berries. They're a fine addition to your garden, because they seem to last and last, and they can be persuaded to climb wherever you may want them. Make it a practice to take only a few of any of these plants, leaving most of them in place and try to find another patch if you need more.

How to Plant the Container

If the weather is warm, it is easier to assemble your garden out of doors; if not, find a place where you don't mind making a mess. Put down some old newspapers and spread the contents of your basket out in front of you, leaving a place directly in front for your bowl. Keep all the same materials together, the mosses in one group, the stones in another and so on. You will need some gravel or bits of broken up flower pot for drainage material, some sand, and some humusy soil. Good to have at hand too, is a little charcoal which will help keep the soil sweet, but it is not absolutely necessary.

If you are using a glass container, use the largest pieces of carpet moss and lay it in, mossy side out. On top of the dirt side of the moss, put a layer of pebbles or broken pottery, fill in around the drainage material with sand and soil, and scatter in a few bits of charcoal. If your bowl is pottery or metal, start with the drainage material and proceed in the same way. Put in more charcoal and a deeper layer of this material if the container does not have a drainhole in it.

As soon as the planting is finished, water it thoroughly. Let the kitchen tap drip over it very slowly, turning it gradually so that all parts will be well saturated. If you have a bulb spray, soak it well with that. When it is thoroughly soaked, press everything together with your fingers, squeezing it gently and firming it into the bowl. Add water whenever the surface of the moss feels dry to the touch.

Except for careful watering, woods-gardens require very little care. If any of the leaves or ferns should die, cut them off with a pair of scissors or sharp knife. Should the seedlings get too tall, trim them back too—they can be trained to take almost any shape you like.

The mosses will eventually turn brown. You may not mind this. If you do, they can be replaced with fresh ones, as can almost everything else that grows in the garden.

A final word of caution: Because these are woodland plants, they don't like too much sun. Keep them away from sunny windows, but be sure to put them in a place where there is good air circulation. In the summer they may be used outside in a shady place. But in dry weather, don't forget to give them an occasional watering.

You will, of course, need permission from the owner to glean these small treasures from the land. This should not be difficult, for it takes very little to fill a bowl or two.

The many fruits of thoughtful planning

By CARROLL CALKINS

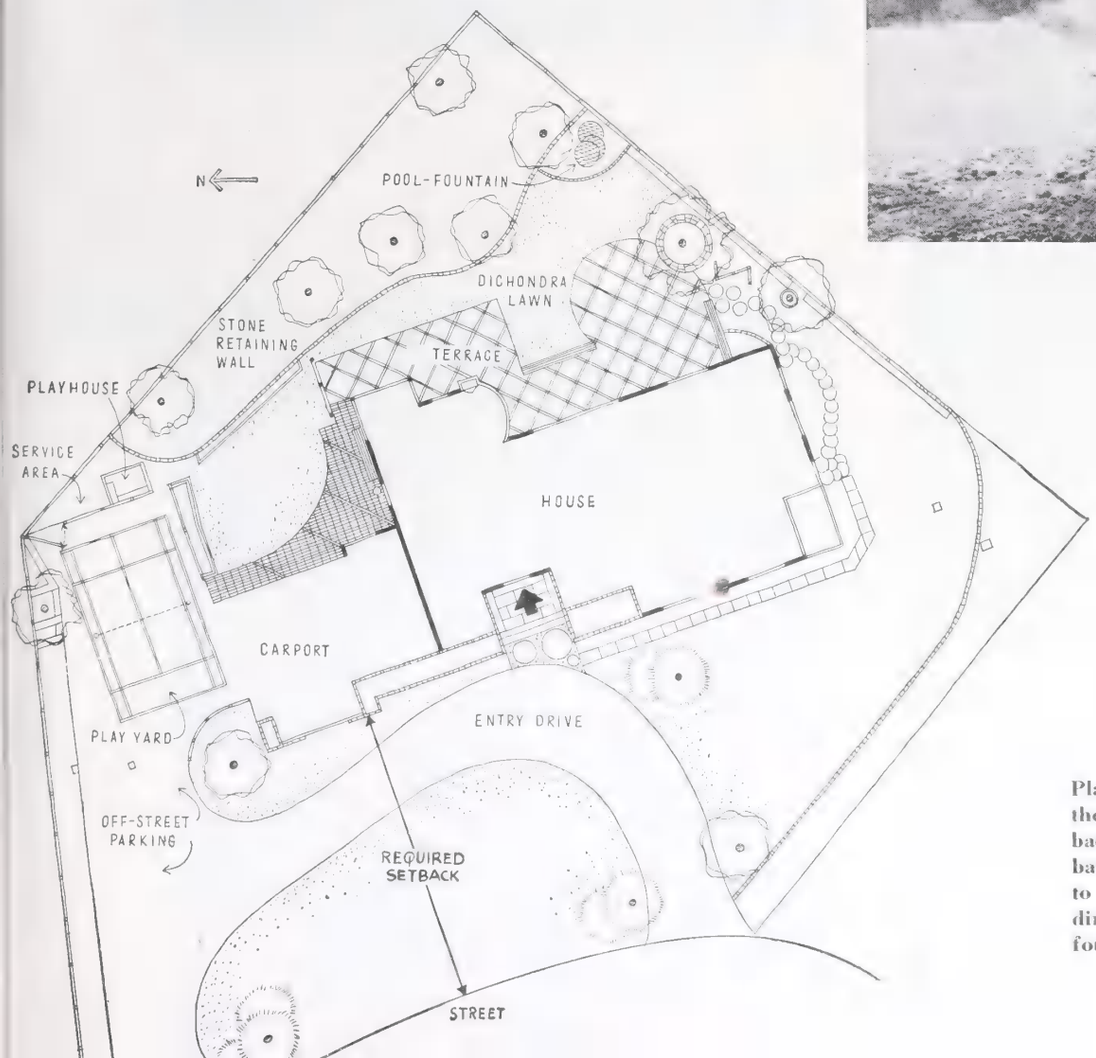
● This garden is much smaller than it seems here. And, as an example of good land use, it is more impressive than you can tell at first glance. The size of any garden is relative to the demands upon it. This, for example, would be a very large garden for a couple. But six people live here. The four children range in age from six to eighteen. The variety of needs in recreation and entertainment for such a family within this a relatively small space.

But, despite the limited size, its serves the whole family very well. There are facilities here for the needs of each child, the parents, and the guests of both. Much of the space serves more than one use. To attain this high degree of usability and integrate it into a good-looking whole called for closest co-operation between the owner-designer, landscape architect, and builder. They all had a hand in the planning of the house and garden as a unified project.



The first problem was the local setback law. This required that the house be at least (Please turn to page 309)

Roof of house is extended in back to cover part of the terrace. Overhang creates a protected outdoor area where there's always shade and shelter from showers. Built-in bench and seat-wall around tree in background help reduce need for garden furniture and the possibility of clutter in small space. Plan shows how little space was left for the house and garden between required setback from the street and the slope at the back of the lot. House was set at an angle to take advantage of the greater diagonal dimension. Entire left side of lot is paved for driveway, parking, and play-court.

From the seat-wall around the tree at the edge of the slope you can see that although the space is not large it is planned for optimum use. The rectangular terrace, with table and chairs, is off the kitchen and used for informal dining. The round terrace in the foreground is used whenever more space is needed. Lawn is a welcome contrast to paving. On right see the monotony before pattern and texture were added.

This raised bed was built to maintain the level of the soil around an important existing tree. Changing the soil level around roots will kill many trees. Excellent use was made of this necessity. It serves as a seat, as a planting bed for flowers, and as an important visual accent in the garden.

Picture below shows how a steep sloping corner was used to create a waterfall with three steel bowls. This is an ideal use of a difficult garden corner. The glitter of falling water and its musical sound brings light and life to a rather dark place. Submersible recirculating pump activates water.

50 feet from the street. This meant that about one-third of the land had to be given over to public view, and would be of limited use to the family. However some use was made of this by the curved entry drive and off-street parking.

The slope of the lot was another problem. It sloped toward the street, and there was very little flat land behind the setback line.

To remedy this, the foot of the slope was pushed back to make room for the house and for a garden area. In the desire for more level space this could easily have been overdone, but it was not.

Trees on the slope were spared. The hillside was used as a natural place for a cascading fountain-pool, and raised beds were built for trees around which the ground had to be lowered. Raised planting beds and retaining walls were planned to add interest to the vertical plane. The character of the land was maintained. The site was not arbitrarily leveled just for "usable" space.

Careful thought was given to the place for children's play. The paved play court includes space for badminton, paddle tennis, tether ball, basketball, skating, and tricycle riding. Adjacent carport is used for outdoor play in rainy weather.

There is also a playhouse, a rack for bicycles, a drinking fountain, and built-in seats to give the children a sense of freedom and independence out of doors.

Privacy from the neighbors is attained by fencing, screening with trees, and the slope itself. But there's also the problem of privacy within a small garden. The play court and adjoining grass area is completely screened from the terraces by a jog in the house and a free-standing baffle. The baffle has a chalk board on the children's side and a decorative appliqué of wood strips on the terrace side. A sense of order is firmly established by construction and planting. This eliminates the kind of clutter that can be most unsightly in a small garden. Most of the seating is built in. Definite patterns of lawn, planting beds, and paving guarantee year-round interest.

Much of the usefulness of this site is due to a facility that can't be seen. A well-engineered system for underground disposal of rain water prevents erosion and helps keep plants from drowning.

Your most talked-about garden plant

Plant the root crowns this fall, and next spring you will see an amazing performance by the foxtail lily

By MARK M. TAYLOR

● The most talked-about garden plant you can have, when once established in your garden, is the giant among perennials, the eremurus or foxtail lily. This magnificent perennial has that necessary attribute of any popular perennial: absolute hardiness. And it has the added quality of exceptional height, with a two-to-three-foot cluster of flowers at the end of the stalk. The plant will grow to the unusual height of as much as 14 feet. Flower color may be white, yellow, or light pink, according to the species.

Planted singly as a specimen or massed at the rear of a perennial border, this exceptional perennial is an imposing sight. Its true beauty unfolds with the opening of the hundreds of star-like florets that make up the flowering head.

Eremurus was first found in Asia and has been grown in England since early in the 18th Century, arriving in America, at Massachusetts, about 1900. The first hybrids came from Holland and England, though today there are about half a dozen propagators of this remarkable plant in the United States.

In all of the garden kingdom there is no perennial that approaches the eremurus' rate of growth. Any flower stalk that attains a height of nine feet by late May must grow several inches a day.

Considering the tremendous surge of growth it takes to produce such a towering flower stalk, it is to be expected that this plant would be a heavy feeder.

The rapid growth above ground is accommodated by the development of a new root system below ground. Each year the old roots are completely absorbed and a new set developed. Left undisturbed, the number of rootlets will increase. They will surround the crown until there are enough roots to support two or three crowns. The spreading root system can take up the nourishment necessary to carry the tremendous growth. It also serves to anchor the huge stalks against the wind—they don't need staking.

First of the species to bloom is E. elwesi, which has pink flowers, distinctive foliage, and an exceptionally strong root system. Then comes E. himalaicus, with its creamy-white flowers. Before it finishes blooming, E. elwesi albus, which has white flowers with pink midribs, comes on. E. robustus follows immediately with light rose flowers. E. bungei next comes into bloom about mid-June in a mild climate. Its flower stalk grows to only about five feet and bears bright yellow flowers.

The tall tapers of the eremurus bloom to the very tip, each about the top one-fourth of the flower stalk, leaving a dark withering stalk bristling with round seed pods. When parched by the midsummer sun, the pods pop open exposing 12 seeds covered with a papery tissue. The plants are dormant during August, September, and early October. They should be transplanted only during this period. Then, when the fall rains come, they develop their feeder roots and are best not disturbed.

The several species vary somewhat in their spreading root systems, though all are brittle and must be carefully spread out for planting when you get them. Roots look not unlike huge starfish. Planting must be only in a well-drained, sunny location. They perform best where the soil tends toward alkalinity. If your soil is on the acid side, add lime. No fertilizer need be used at planting time but after planting the roots six to nine inches deep, a heavy mulch of well-decomposed manure will be helpful in getting the plants off to a good start in the spring. A plant of this vigor needs plenty of nutriment.

These truly unusual and magnificent garden perennials have been successfully grown as far north as Ontario, Canada, attesting to their winter hardiness.

The showiness of the foxtail lilies, because of their stature and beautiful flowers, makes them delightful for use in large cut-flower displays. But in the perennial border their beauty is undiminished by association with other popular perennials such as the stately delphinium, iris, poppy, and smaller perennials with which you might combine them.

If you can't get eremurus from local dealers, it is available by mail from the following sources: Wayside Gardens, Mentor, Ohio; Lamb Nurseries, Spokane, Washington; Walter Marx Gardens, Boring, Oregon; Fred Stone, Box 195, Corvallis, Oregon.

PHOTOGRAPH BY HISE STUDIO

This is just the flower of the foxtail lily (Eremurus) which grows to two or three feet long in white, yellow, or light pink. In all, the plant grows 9 to 14 feet high. For sheer drama in a garden or in the house it is hard to match.

When they insisted that I meet you, I imagined just another complicated episode. But this is different, dear Gimlet. What could be as elemental as vodka, Rose's Lime Juice and ice? That's why we're going to be friends always. Why? Because you're so deliciously basic. Just like me.
Gin is also basic to the Gimlet. Formula: 4 or 5 parts vodka or gin to 1 part Rose's Lime Juice. Serve over ice in an old-fashioned or cocktail glass.

Decorator's Diary

New ideas in home furnishings and new ideas for putting them to work, from the pages of a decorator's record book

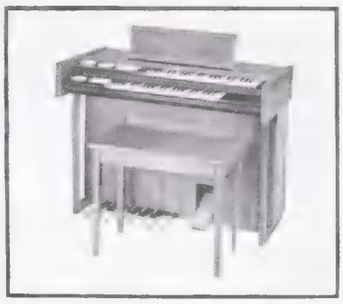
Idea—cribbed from the handsome New York apartment Melanie Kahane has done for Mr. and Mrs. Nathan Halpern, who are active collectors of art to live with. And, like all true connoisseurs, they insist that their paintings be displayed with proper lighting. A picture light may seem a minor member of an over-all decorating scheme, except that it can be just obtrusive enough to ruin the over-all. For a line-up of small dark fixtures over the pictures can make a room look like a 19th-century museum.

But entering the Halperns' living room, you're not even aware that such fixtures are there, until you take a good long second look. It's Miss Kahane's mastery of optical illusion that does it, for she has "painted out" the fixtures to match identically the pale nubby-silk covered wall. "Painting out" what you don't want noticed is a decorator's trick of long standing, but why didn't someone do it before to picture lights? As for us, we plan to do it again, should a client with an art collection come our way.

"My problem is briefly this," said Mrs. Chetley. "I have a sentimental husband who is a worse collector of small duffle than a magpie. Key rings, old photographs, lighters he doesn't use, useless neckties he won't throw out, the flower he wore when we were married—and I suppose there are some old love letters of mine in the pile.

"Since I've failed in every trick to get rid of them, the next best thing is to get him a piece of furniture in which he can stow it all away. And now we're doing over the bedroom, it might as well be a chest we can somehow squeeze in with the rest of the furniture."

The rest of the furniture was not great in quantity but mightily imposing in scale—a king-size bed, a wonderful double dresser that looked like something built into one whole wall, a pair of tall-back wing chairs separated by a round, antique-glass coffee table at the window. The room didn't look cluttered, except for Mr. Chetley's end of the dresser, but with tape measure in hand, I could hardly find a spare inch of wall space, except for the scant 30" between two closet doors which was occupied by an antique sewing stand and a picture on the wall.



The project had started out to be simply a re-do of the fabrics and colors in the room, for the furniture is quite fine. The idea was to lighten the room by switching from a green and gold palette to apricot, keeping the pale green carpeting. And all seemed to be going smoothly, until the need for a chest reared its head.

I was keeping my eye on that 30 inches, and what with all the new high and narrow chests on the market it would be no problem to find one to fit into the little space. The problem had to do with color, for the nicest chests I saw which would chime in happily with the other Chetley furnishings all seemed too dark to blend with the rough silk

Music lovers wanted ...no experience necessary

It's a happy paradox that an instrument as complicated-looking as an electronic organ should be perhaps the easiest of all to play. But there's such a thing as being too easy to play! How much better to start with an organ of concert-quality that makes even your practice notes sound rich, exciting, professional! How much more satisfying to learn on an organ of such unlimited versatility it encourages you to go on and on with your music! This is why it will pay you to look beyond the "too-easy" organ to a Conn. From the first moment you play it you will know there's a wonderful future ahead of you...a future of endless pleasures in the joy of making beautiful music. Try the Conn at your dealer's now. He has a wide range of Raymond Loewy styles in your choice of finishes, from $995. Low monthly payments, of course. Don't buy any organ until you try the incomparable CONN ORGAN headboard and the bedspread and upholstery fabric we had chosen for the chairs. And since the walls were practically white, with the faintest tinge of blue-green to make them more interesting, dark walnut or mahogany seemed too great a contrast.

We were in Grosfeld House, giving one last go-round to the chest search, when Mrs. Chetley spotted one that exactly filled the bill in drawer space—seven of them for Mr. Chetley to fill up with goodies!

"Too dark, too dark," I said, although it was an elegant, unusual thing—black lacquer, with its drawer fronts covered in brown, gold-tooled leather and fitted with brass ring pulls.

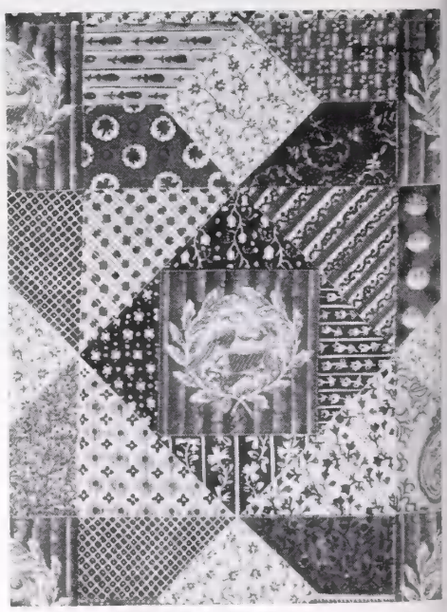
"It needn't be," said the salesman. "You can have that in any color leather you choose, with any wood finish, or have it all wood, if you like."

"How about a natural mahogany base with apricot leather drawers?" Mrs. Chetley and I chorused as one.

Well, that solved it. And it also re-arranged our thinking about the silk upholstery on the wing chairs. We did them over in leather to match the chest, and they strike that nice blend of the feminine and the masculine that it seems to me every master bedroom ought to have, if the gentleman isn't going to feel like a sissy.

As for the chest, it measures 29" wide, 19" deep, and a towering 67" high, so that it looks like the cushiest, custom-made built-in placed between the closet doors. And what did we do with the sewing cabinet? We moved it over to the lady's wing chair where it's used as an end table.

"American Biedermeier—Overfed Empire—Blonde Federal—I don't know what you call it but whatever it is, I have it in quantity—and what's more, I really like the old stuff."



Mrs. Turner was referring to the heavy, golden-toned curly maple furniture that her upstate mother had inherited and then passed on to her.

In a lesser room than her alcoved bedroom it might have been overwhelming. But here in this small-town "big house" with the cupola and the round-tower windows and broad porches such substantiality seems to go with the atmosphere. It's the kind of furniture "they don't make any more," as the cabinetmaker pointed out admiringly when we were having it refinished.

But I had the feeling that with the stolid lines of the four-poster and the broad chiffonier with its overhanging front, heftier fabrics were called for than are usually used in a bedroom. And certainly its tannish yellow color must be handled with respect. Pastels, for instance, would have made the room look like a blowsy strawberry blonde in negligee.

I had reluctantly concluded that heavy-textured white fabrics like a Marseilles bedspread and a quilted white chintz were our only answer, even if not terribly distinguished, when Mrs. Turner innocently passed by W & J Sloane's window one afternoon during a shopping trip to New York. The bedspread problem was settled once and for all. She was so smitten by a white spread patterned with an enormous gold-color Federal eagle that she marched right in and bought it. Although this kind of free-lance behavior on the part of a client can make a decorator's life miserable, in this case I had to admit it was a masterly choice in color, scale, and character.

From that point on, everything fell into place, because the noble bird reminded me of one of Cheney-Greeff's fabrics which I should certainly have thought of earlier in the game.

It's a screen-printed unglazed chintz that looks like the stitched-together patches of an old American quilt, chiefly because it is a reproduction of one of the most famous quilting patterns of the past century—Variable Star. Squares, triangles, and trapezoids of old-fashioned sprigged cottons, an acorn pattern, a diamond pattern, and all sorts of typical calico charm are represented, including the inevitable mango leaf from a Paisley design, and every so often, co-ordinating the whole composition, there's a square block patterned with a leaf-encircled eagle bearing a shield of stars and stripes. As an extra plus, there's a border running along its side which can be easily clipped to make separate edgings on a solid fabric.

Since it comes in a blend of saffron, spice, and green shades, as well as in five other color mixes, I followed my natural inclination to use it at the windows over straight white organdy curtains banded with the border.

But looking at it more closely, I could see how the shapes of its patches would lend themselves to bona fide quilting, taking on a texture and dimension particularly appropriate to the furniture. So the heavily framed sofa was upholstered in the quilted version—and very clever of me that was. Because the fabric is 36″ wide, we had to splice two widths together to cover the sofa back and seat. But, thanks to the quilting, you don't notice the seams.

The alcove was the obvious place for the bed, which is the very reason why we put the sofa there instead, along with the curly maple desk and chair. The result is a little office-sitting room for Mrs. Turner, one of those remarkable women who can dash off five or six long letters a day between household chores.

Betsy Maxwell, an old friend and girl careerist, has lived for years in suburbia, commuting to her job in town and complaining about the late-night trip home whenever she stays in the city for dinner or theater.

But lately Betsy saw the light. She called me immediately. "You are talking to a lady who has just acquired a pied à terre in town!" A fancy phrase for a maid's room and bath she had sublet from the owners of a city apartment. In fact, standing in the center of the room, you could practically touch all four walls. Yet it was large enough to furnish her a night-on-the-town sleeping space and to serve on occasions as a part-time retreat for work or study or for giving a snack or a cocktail to a couple of friends.

We gave it a sofa bed, two chairs, a desk and a phone, added a portable refrigerator and some shelves for a few pieces of electrical cooking equipment. It's shoehorn decorating, but even so, we had enough wall space left for a lamp table and, believe it or not, a rolling cart, too. All this function is furnished by a remarkable two-in-one nest table by Franklin Gidden. The lamp table, surfaced in white carrara glass, has a sort of trundle table beneath it—a small, clear-glass-top table on wheels. Pulled out this becomes a little serving cart for entertaining, or a coffee table in front of the sofa whenever Betsy eats a solo meal. It also has a shelf to hold magazines. It slips back under the lamp table as neatly as a comb slides into its case, and all is contained in a space 21″ wide, 23″ high, 28″ deep. Betsy's table is birch in dark teak finish, but since this is custom-made, any wood or color is possible.—M. G.

IT'S WORTH MENTIONING

By JULIE POLSHEK

Each triangle provides a snack table usable alone; when six are together they form a 36-inch coffee table. Solid walnut used for graceful leg-structure unites with Fiberesin panel identically matched with walnut's hue and grain. The solid-plastic laminate can take even abusive treatment without harm. Plastic tips (black) serve as gliders. Kroehler's Multi-Triangle costs $19.95 per section. From Gimbels, New York 3, N.Y.

Canape tray becomes a flower garden when accessorized with Nosegay picks; simplest cocktail snacks can, without extra work, be glorified for party serving. Flowers, polyethylene, are exquisitely formed; they and acetate pick-attachment create a unit guaranteed sudsable. Decoratively color-blended. $2.50. All-rose nosegay can be had. $3. Red, pink, yellow, tea-rose, or assorted (12 in all). Potpourri, Rockville Centre, New York.

Alphabetic pushbuttons operate Nordika directory. Their selecting action exposes index card desired; a glance leads you to desired listing. Essentially a telephone accessory, but complete in itself; handsome in desk use as an address directory. Top is a handcrafted block of Bangkok teak; tray attachment contains easily released index cards. Swedish import costs $11.95; from Casual Living, 108 Chatsworth Ave., Larchmont, N.Y.

PHOTOGRAPHS BY FRED LERNER

Ingenious designer adds backrest to dining-height stool and creates the compact Mini-Chair. Ideal size for small dining areas; stacked, a foursome tucks into any corner. Danish import has strong, hand-woven seat; weaving is done with a tubular plastic. Wrapped plastic trims the steel-rod frame. Royal blue or red with black frame; yellow or white with white frame. $11.50; $45 for 4. Be Seated, 43 Greenwich Ave., New York 11, N.Y.

just DIAL the Proper Humidity

For more healthful, more comfortable living

All winter long, the average American home, indoors, is drier than the Sahara Desert! Dry, stale, artificial heat robs the air of its natural moisture—inviting respiratory diseases...reducing comfort...drying out and damaging furniture and furnishings. This lost moisture must be replaced. Here's how: Aprilaire Humidifiers—high capacity units...automatic...with accurate, positive humidistat control provide and maintain the relative humidity that's better for your family's health and comfort. Models for every home or office.

In true color, you would see pumpkin, parchment, and sunny gold set into walnut-finished hardwood; coppertone, steel rod frame for metallic accent. Top and bin backs, the color insets, are lamination of satin-finish melamine and tempered hardwood. Very right for teen-age quarters. Top 36″ x 20″ x 28½″ high. Desk, $49.95. Chair, $10.95. Dependabilt's new Scandinavian Casual. From B. Altman & Company, New York 3, N.Y.

Luxurious hamper, bench type, is wood; and used with handsome effect. Fitting even with living-room décor; could be a bedding chest where you will. Invisible ½-inch opening ventilates interior. Wood (natural-finish walnut, mahogany, or cherry) is bonded to Duolux wallboard; as one, they receive Gruvwood design. Anodized aluminum frame, silver or gold. 29″ x 12″ x 15″; $45. Basket, $17. Hammacher Schlemmer, New York 22.

Lighting can be vertical or horizontal in placement with Westwood Modernaire. A 6-inch rod, hitched at wall end to pin-up block, alters lamp directionally by swivel action; projected mounting design also has illuminating value. Tubular shade (22″) is a new plastic, nonscorching in incandescent use. Fitted for showcase-type lamps, 40- or 60-watt. Solid walnut brackets. 8-foot, plug-in cord. $19.95. From Macy's, New York 3, N.Y.

Antique cooky molds, reproduced in ceramics by LaMirada Potteries, capture even genuine wood-effect and wood-grain; only finger touch "gives them away." Original boards are used for reproductions to insure authenticity of minutest detailing. English Cavalier, from 1640 original, $5.98; 21″ x 6¼″. Hearth Cat, from an 1820 original, $3.98; 11¼″ x 7½″. Charming ornaments for Americana décor. From Bloomingdale's, New York 22, N.Y.

Magnificent pulls, hand-cast solid brass, are available with mosaic inlay (variegated gold, green, red, brown, or turquoise). Blank pulls can be inlayed as you wish; handsome as is, displaying design in hollow. Round, 2¾″ diameter. Blank, satin or polished brass, $2.50; satin or polished chrome, matte black, $3.50. Inlaid, $5.85, $6.85. The other, 2½″ x 3″, $3, $4, $5.60, $6.60. Craft-Metals, Laguna Beach, California.

FURNITURE ADAPTATIONS BY KITTINGER

NOW . . . after years of development, Colonial Williamsburg and Kittinger, cooperating in an unprecedented venture, have used their knowledge of eighteenth century design to produce a remarkable new group of fine period furniture–WILLIAMSBURG® Adaptations.

WILLIAMSBURG® Adaptations, inspired by the documented antiques in the exhibition buildings in Colonial Williamsburg, retain the inherent beauty of the Originals, in a modified line and style that fulfills the needs of today's living . . . and all moderately priced.

See these Adaptations in the fine stores listed in the adjoining column. Write for free folder picturing the complete collection . . . for living room, bedroom and dining room. Kittinger Company, 1917 Elmwood Avenue, Buffalo 7, N. Y.

Questions & Answers about Chatham Blankets for Christmas Giving

PURREY MOSS ROSE 12.98

Q I think that blankets will make perfect gifts for some of my friends and family. Will you give me some suggestions, please?

A There are Chatham blankets in a variety of pastel solid colors, and pretty floral prints to please every taste. For example: Chatham's finest quality blankets: 100% wool priced from $11.95 to $19.95; 100% virgin Orlon® acrylic fiber from $11.95 to $13.95; 100% Acrilan® acrylic fiber priced from $11.95 to $19.95 and Chatham's luxury blend Purrey® blankets from $9.98 to $16.95 (all costs depend upon blanket size). There is also a smart selection of new blends of rayon and synthetic fibers priced from $4.98 to $8.98. Each is a good value at its price and a welcome gift. Many are attractively packaged.

SOLID COLOR PURREY (72 x 90) 10.98

Q In choosing gift blankets, what should I know about sizes?

A For a twin or single bed, use the 66" x 90" size; for a double bed buy 80" x 90". The 72" x 90" size can be used on either twin or double size beds (a wise choice if you're not sure of the bed size involved). The 72" x 90" is called the practical size because it can be moved from one size bed to another. And Chatham has king-size blankets 108" x 90" for the extra large Hollywood bed; or for twin beds with a single head board, this blanket is used sideways.

PURREY WINTER GARDEN 12.98

Q My sister is the outdoor, garden-club type, what blanket would make a special Christmas gift for her?

A One of Chatham's Purrey hand-screened floral prints should especially please her; this blanket would bring the beauty of a flower garden right into her bedroom. Chatham offers these floral designs in a choice of wonderful colors that will harmonize perfectly with modern or traditional decor.

Q Which blanket would be best for my teen-age daughter who likes to decorate and has an artist's appreciation of color?

A As an extra treat for her, we would suggest a Chatham floral print blanket for the bed and a matching solid color Purrey to be used over the foot of the bed. This delightful mix-and-match combination would appeal to her creative flair and would give her room an unusual decorative touch. Purrey is Chatham's luxury and practical blend of 75% rayon and 25% Acrilan acrylic with a double woven construction. Easy to care for—washes wonderfully; is mothproof and non-allergenic.

BED OF ROSES 10.98

PURREY ROSE ROMANCE 12.98

Q I know blankets will please my friends who like pretty gifts, but will they satisfy my practical-minded friends as well?

A Yes, indeed. All Chatham blankets are washable, even machine washable; our floral prints are guaranteed color fast, such as "Moss Rose", "Winter Garden" and "Rose Romance" pictured here. Every Chatham blanket carries the Hygienated® tag, too. This exclusive Hygienated process makes the blanket resistant to germs and bacteria through washing after washing.

Q Do you have a special blanket that would make an interesting gift for a small boy and might help to get him to bed more easily and cheerfully?

A "Space Ship" Chatham's colorful new print blanket, illustrated here, is a big hit with all children. Any young wild west fan would be delighted with "Rancho" our western design blanket. Chatham also has a charming collection of crib blankets that make a welcome gift for the new baby.

SPACE SHIP 8.98

Q Where can I buy Chatham Blankets?

A Look for them in leading stores and fine blanket departments, or write to Chatham Manufacturing Company, Elkin, North Carolina and we will tell you where.

AGED LIKE VINTAGE WINE

VIRGINIA HAM

NEARLY 300 years ago, Virginia colonists sent to England hams of a distinctive savory flavor that soon were acclaimed by gourmet and royalty throughout the capitals of Europe. Both the fame and famous flavor have endured. Today, as then, the true Virginia ham is one of the world's delicacies.

Each magnificent ham now hanging in our aging rooms, slowly cured, smoked to a rich mahogany hue, aged approx. one year, has been tended by hand through each unhurried step—as we have done for the past 120 years. These carefully selected hams are put down in dry salt in cool cellars for 25 to 45 days, and turned often. The salt is removed and the ham allowed to mature for three weeks. Next it is rubbed by hand with a thick coat of black pepper. Then it goes into the smokehouse to hang for 30 days and nights over hand tended fires, until the juices drip and the dense, pungent hickory smoke permeates and flavors the meat. Then to darkened aging rooms, to hang for months.

And finally, just before shipment, each ham (in a 40-hour process) is soaked, simmered, the skin removed, the fat trimmed, then glazed with sugar and baked with wine to a savory feast of firm, sweet and tender meat.

Your Jordan's ham arrives ready to be enjoyed, needs no heating. It keeps for weeks and weeks. Traditional for Christmas dinner . . . perfect for cocktail party or buffet.

Sealed in cellophane, nested in burgundy tissue in Old Virginia Smokehouse box (carving, serving and keeping suggestions enclosed), here is a magnificent gift for those you especially wish to please this year, and a grand treat for your family.

We guarantee complete satisfaction. Weight 8 to 15 lbs. cooked; $1.89 per lb. (net cooked wt.) shipped anywhere in continental U. S. Shipped anywhere in world for $2.24 per lb. Please specify whether wanted now; for Christmas; or other date.

Time is endless in Spain's solera system, where sherry lies mellowing year after year. Every harvest, the new vintage is added to the topmost casks. At years-long intervals, a few liters at a time are drawn... never more than half or two-thirds of any cask... and poured into the senior wines below. Thus each vintage will commingle with countless predecessors. Some day, in the far future, the wines in the lowest casks will be adjudged mature enough for shipping to Bristol, to Harvey's for blending and bottling.

Spain sends you true Sherry

The sea lanes lead from the Spanish town of Jerez to the English city of Bristol. Like her proud galleons of old, Spain sends to Bristol cask-laden ships bearing her choicest oloroso sherries.

In Bristol, John Harvey & Sons, Ltd. blend these aged, mellowed wines... by arts perfected here over centuries... into the most luxurious of true sherries, Harvey's Bristol Cream.

What years of patient, painstaking preparation are reflected in each precious, golden bottle! First the Jerez grapes, drying under the Andalusian sun. Then the sun-kissed bunches pressed and their juice poured into great casks lying in quiet rows in lofty-pillared bodegas.

Just one thing more remains to be done. Cream sherry must be given sweetness. This is done by adding wine made from highly sweet "Pedro Ximénez" grapes that have been sun-dried for a fortnight after picking.

That is all that man can do. Now time itself must work the magic... as the years pass over the shaded casks.

BY APPOINTMENT TO HER MAJESTY QUEEN ELIZABETH II
WINE MERCHANTS, JOHN HARVEY & SONS, LTD.
BRISTOL, ENGLAND. FOUNDED 1796

SAY A HEARTY "MERRY CHRISTMAS" WITH HARVEY'S BRISTOL CREAM®... the imported prestige-sherry... packaged with elegance... priced frankly as the finest. Harvey's Bristol Cream enables you to give anyone the most distinguished sherry ever imported from Spain. Look for it on the shelf with the other imported Harvey's sherries.

Shillcraft CELAIRIC THERMAL BLANKET

with the "Honeycomb" Weave—warms with air, instead of weight.

Now available by mail, at direct-from-importer savings.

Do your present blankets weigh heavily on sensitive feet? Restrain body movements? Cause tossing and turning? Waste energy sleep is supposed to save? Now, thanks to Shillcraft Celairic Thermal Blankets, you can enjoy a new sense of freedom and lightness, as you sleep —snug, warm, and unhampered by thick, heavy blankets. In fact, you hardly know you're under a blanket. It's a new experience in bed-time comfort.

Shillcraft Celairic Blankets weigh far less than ordinary blankets, yet prevent heat loss far more efficiently, without gadgets, wiring or synthetic materials. Shillcraft Celairic Blankets are made only of pure natural fibers —in famous old Whitley Willows Mill, Lepton, in Huddersfield, Yorkshire, where craftsmanship is almost a religion.

The secret's in the "Honeycomb" weave which traps "quiet" air (warmed by the body) in thousands of little "pockets." Thus, you are insulated against unnecessary heat loss by warm air, instead of heaviness and bulk. You're snug and warm, but under less weight, less restraint, less discomfort. So you sleep relaxed, wake up refreshed. You save energy. You don't waste heating fuel trying to make a cold room warmer, or making a warm-but-drafty room hotter.

SATISFACTION UNCONDITIONALLY GUARANTEED

Choose 100% wool or cotton. Both are suitable for summer and winter (no storage problem). Both have the same thermal efficiency and sleep qualities.

Want the soft downy touch? Choose luxurious, satin-edged wool. Retains its thermal properties through hundreds of cleanings, unlike ordinary wool blankets, which become less effective as the nap wears off through wear and cleaning.

Budget or other reasons? Choose cotton, unconditionally guaranteed to be machine-washable, without any loss of thermal qualities.

Colors for every decor. White, pink, blue, green, peach, lilac or primrose yellow.

EVER-WRITING BALL-POINT

JEWEL BALL

NO MORE REFILLS

INK LEVEL

For the first time...

You'll never have to buy another ink cartridge and temporary ball-point. NOVA pen is the happy blend of a permanent jewel ball point with a permanent fountain tube. You'll never run out of ink in the middle of a letter: the see-thru fountain shows you the ink level instantly! A twist-to-fill system makes refueling jiffy quick and whistle clean. For heavier or finer writing stroke, just tilt NOVA down or up.

Everything you liked about a ball-point—the never scratch, leak-proof, skip-free way it rolls over paper. Everything you liked about the fountain pen—jiffy feeding from a handy bottle of smooth-flowing ink. This is NOVA pen.

DISTINCTIVE GIFT TO BE REMEMBERED AND TALKED ABOUT

No replacement ever needed. 1 Yr. written guarantee. German craftsmanship made NOVA a precision writing instrument. ## Modavanti—Mediterranean inspiration by Heritage at prices you can well afford

From art and architecture of Italy, France and Spain come rich sources of inspiration for Modavanti, Heritage's brilliant new furniture collection for now and future living. In Modavanti you see motifs borrowed from marble palazzos and landscaped gardens beautifully interpreted in warm, mellow fruitwood. A Renaissance knocker inspired the hardware. You see decorative touches of color and hand-screened designs reminiscent of Della Robbia. The collection includes living, dining and bedroom pieces, and thanks to the advanced techniques and cost-saving skills of Heritage craftsmen, the prices are at a minimum for such lifetime quality.

For a gift of lasting beauty... a HIGH-FIDELITY® Mirror

How many rooms in your home could be made more inviting with a handsome, functional mirror? Your foyer, for instance, can appear larger, brighter and more attractive with the addition of a handsome mirror. In living room, dining room, bedroom or any other room around the house, a mirror can add a touch of graciousness and charm. You can make a small room seem larger with a strategically placed mirror . . . and a full-length door mirror in the bedroom is always on hand to help you look your very best. There are mirrors to complement any decorating scheme, but be sure the mirror you buy for your home or give as a gift is a HIGH-FIDELITY Mirror, of Twin-Ground Pittsburgh Plate Glass. Look for the red and blue HIGH-FIDELITY label at your department or furniture store, or glass dealer.

Have Fun... Sell By Mail!

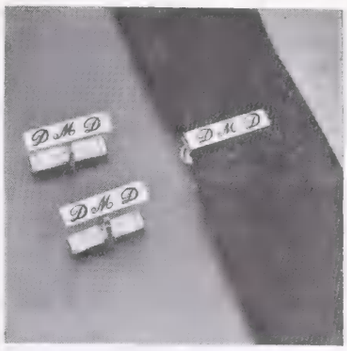
■ Have you ever thought about selling by mail? It's a profitable idea . . . and loads of fun, too.



■ Hundreds of newcomers enter the mail-order field every year. Many of them are just individuals with ideas they have handled on a "Sell-a-few-to-friends-and-neighbors" basis. Others are retailers who want to expand their area of operations.

■ Many have found mail-order selling very profitable. Some have even built substantial businesses from a small beginning. But all who try it say they have had great fun selling by mail.

■ Why not try it yourself? It's so easy to test your ideas in: HOUSE BEAUTIFUL'S WINDOW SHOPPING advertising section. For more details on just how to go about it, write to us today. We've got a kit full of information. You'll be happy you did.

This is an antenna; it has singular merit. Placement can be under room carpeting; attic placement on floor or wall is manufacturer's recommendation for top efficiency. The printed circuitry is engineered to equal conical, outdoor antennas. Mat itself is an aluminized, flexible plastic. Jerrold Magic Carpet antenna can service two FM sets or TV and an FM: 2′ x 5′. $9.95. Magnavox console, Imperial Stereo Theatre, provides FM-AM radio, stereophonic phonograph, 24-inch TV receiver, two complete sound systems. $750.

Three-way appliance basically is an automatic oven; with cover unit removed it becomes a grill; with heating element inverted, it becomes a broiler. Thermostatic dial affords heat settings from 100° to 500°; oven can be pre-set for automatic shut-off by 2-hour timer. Cover, all-window in front, is counterbalanced for flip-back action. Entire appliance dismantles for washing. Size 17″ x 14½″ x 11″; price $49.95. The Kroehler cabinet is our suggestion for handily storing the Dominion oven.

Timer control tied up with outlets of this extension cord pre-sets plugged-in appliances or lamps for automatic shut-off. The convenient service is suited for bedroom TV, for hall lighting left on until all are home for the night; or plug-ins can be cooking utensils, fan, sunlamp up to total of 1,000 watts. The Rhodes device costs $6.95.

Brisker electric dehumidifier safeguards foodstuffs which deteriorate by exposure to dampness. Plug-in appliance, "climatized" by heat unit (12-watt) built into insulated base, keeps oven-fresh flavor and crispness intact; keeps sugar, salt, gelatins in uncaked state. Whether foods are stowed at bottom or stacked, cabinet's very effective service prevails. AC/DC; UL-approved. Triple-chromed steel; magnetic latch. Radiates no heat. $19.95 Battery model available in 6, 12, or 32 volts for boat use.

NA SERVICE BY IROQUOIS

llabout table, Ramseur's handsome Tivoli, affords buffet cart for a full al, bar cart or dining space for a twosome. Plastic-laminate insets (white) coratively heat-proof 15-inch drop leaves and open shelf; end areas are sed cabinets. Solid cherry or walnut, finely crafted. $135. In pictured use, inch top serves to hold a Salton HoTray food-warmer.

This is Westmorland, the Lake District, Wordsworth's country and the land of the "golden daffodil"—lyrical beauty you can experience for yourself on a springtime circuit of England that distills the very essence of the season the poets sing about.

How to plan a pilgrimage to Spring

How to leave home and like it

By MARION GOUGH

Notes for blossom-lovers, bird-watchers, fanciers of zephyrs and Maypole dancing, and all traveling hedonists who've ever dreamed of England in "the sweet of the year"

● The British Travel Association are naturally experts on Spring. For, as everybody knows, Spring was invented in England. At least the British poets invented such lyrical ways to sing of it that there isn't a traveler worth his American Express card who doesn't long to go down to Kew in lilac time and find out what that's all about.

For the benefit of those bewitched by the idea of visiting England in springtime—mid-April through May are the tender season's magical dates—the BTA's blossom and bird-song department has lately come up with some suggestions for a vernal tour of England which distills the very essence of what the poets talk about, from asphodel to zephyr. They suggest a circle from London back to London, which would take you to some of the country's greatest landscaped gardens—more of them open in May than at any other time of the year—to palaces, to bird sanctuaries, through vales of blossoms into the rustic towns where the local Phyllises and Daphnes still tread the measure around the Maypole, then up into the Lake District where the daffodils are fluttering and dancing in the breeze, just as Wordsworth said they were. Spring is the marvelous extra here because, meantime, you will be seeing much of the England you'd want to include in a visit at any time (Please turn to page 182)

House Beautiful's

Seventh Annual Christmas Collection

Ours are the light-hearted, glittering decorations every holiday-happy house-trimmer dreams of. But they can also make your Christmas decorating an exercise in good design

● Once again, HOUSE BEAUTIFUL presents its own version of Christmas decorations to make your house bright, gay, and safe from cliché. There are 17 such things as you've never seen before—a curtain like a golden rainfall: wondrous, multi-faced gilt blocks for stacking in inventive ways; glittering foil tiles to use as place mats and to cover walls. For hanging, there are a star-spangled angel; sumptuous spheres of golden filigree; jewel-studded balls to make yourself: a color-splashed felt scroll for pinning up your cards: ingenious frames for shaping your green garlands. And there's a cone of rings to dress up as you will.

Frivolities all, but, as usual, practical ones. They fit into any background, from Colonial to Modern. They are neatly conservable, of materials with a year-after-year future. They are dramatically scaled to lend themselves to the decorating techniques you'd apply to your rooms year round.

Gene Moore, a master of store display, designed many of them. Home Decor by Austen, Inc., supplies them by mail.

The modern way to keep tradition alive

By MARION GOUGH

● We went to Colonial Williamsburg to demonstrate the adaptability of our 1960 Christmas decorations to traditional settings, for it is the most tradition-conscious town in the country, celebrating Christmas each year with the most nostalgic, holly-decked, candle-lit festivities that ever kept alive the dear old customs. It is also a treasury of zealously preserved 18th-century furnishings, which may be reproduced only by a few select licensed makers.

This year, while we were working on ways to make our ornaments usable in both traditional and modern settings, the Kittinger Company, licensed makers of Williamsburg furniture reproductions, was pursuing a similar project—the redesigning of 30 pieces of Williamsburg furniture so that they might adapt more readily to 20th-century living. The happy results of both our efforts are shown on these pages.

The furniture "updating" was chiefly a matter of scaling down 18th-century dimensions to fit modern rooms. Sideboards have lined and compartmented silver drawers, and changes in pitch make chairs more comfortable. While the character of the antique designs is handsomely retained—in mellow mahogany, brass hardware, and documented upholstery fabrics—these pieces are not to be confused with line-for-line "Williamsburg Reproductions," which are strictly authentic copies. These new pieces are "Williamsburg Adaptations," and carry this label in stores where they are sold.

THREE PHOTOGRAPHS BY WILLIAM HOWLAND

Table, set for Christmas dinner, is a drop-leaf fully extended to 76″. Table can diminish to 28″. A traditional space-saver is the bachelor's chest used as a server. Chairs have all the grace of their Queen Anne prototypes, but have been pitched for more comfortable seating. Table appointments (except for candles and place mats) are all authentic reproductions of glass, pewter, and silver in the Williamsburg collection, but no anachronism is apparent in the way these traditional forms blend with the quite modern bright-and-dull-gold pattern of House Beautiful's Golden Tiles. Tiles are 12″ foil-covered cardboard squares, endlessly usable (details, page 121). Two make a place mat. Above mantel, our Golden Filigree Roundels.

In the Blue Bell Tavern hallway, a two-piece sideboard and hutch combination functions as a breakfront, but could be used in many rooms. Its size is a reduction of its prototype, scaled down to fit modern rooms. Drawers are compartmented and lined for silver. Dining chairs have such substantial grace that they can stand alone as comfortable occasional chairs.

Christmas card Pin-up Panel (in hall above) is a felt scroll, appliquéd with an engaging reindeer whose antlers invite the pinning-up of Christmas cards. It has gold molding at top and bottom and hanging cord. In pink or chartreuse measuring 29″ x 60″ $8.

TWO PHOTOGRAPHS BY WESLEY BALZ

Williamsburg houses, dressed for Christmas with our Azure Angel and traditional green garlands, shaped on our ingenious wire Swag and Jabot Forms, show how "Williamsburg Adaptation" furniture lends itself to modern use. Brass-escutcheoned chest acts as serving table (above) or as a desk (below). Opposite, scaled-down Chippendale and Queen Anne drop-leaf coffee table make a contemporary team. More of this furniture on pages 124 and 125.

Azure Angel, agelessly lovely as the Botticelli angel that inspired her, is robed in star-scattered blue nylon chiffon, hand-sewn. Face, hands, and feet of hand-painted latex; body of wire armature. 24″ long with a 14″ gold-foil wingspread. $25.

Now, and in future, you can be sure of handsome shape and symmetry in your Christmas garlands. Our Swag and Jabot Forms, wire-mesh-covered wire frames, let you insert sprigs of green, fruits, glitter balls, etc., and hold them securely.

Swag and Jabot Forms have ring-eyes for joining, pack flat for year-to-year storage. Swags are 24″ long, 6″ deep. Swallowtail jabots, are 14″ long, 6″ at widest point. Set of 3 Swags and 2 Jabots, $15.

Pinbursts look like pretty explosions of jewels, were first used as display in Tiffany's windows. They are simple enough for a child to make —studdings of variously sized decorative pins stuck in a foil-covered cork ball—and their ingredients would intrigue anyone into trying his hand at playful, personal creations. We offer five versions, each in a packet including all the makings, and at various prices. Left, see how gloriously a Gem Pinburst pipes ruby, emerald and sapphire light, casting colored shadow through the plastic-jewel heads of its longest pins.

Gem Pinburst makings are an example of how all Pinbursts come to you, with foil-covered cork balls and a generous quantity of pins of lengths and types needed to create the most effective results.

Golden Tiles, shown above as they come to you, in sets of eight, four with their screen-printed pattern in bright on dull gold, four patterned with dull gold on bright gold. Package of 8, $5.

Shower of Gold Drapery, a supple, shimmering curtain of slim, flameproof metallized vinyl strands, brings fabulous dazzle to doorways and windows. Pin it to draperies or hang it with clip-rings from a rod. Luxuriously full, endlessly drapable, 3 feet wide, 7½ feet long, on cotton-tape heading. $9. Photographs above and at left taken at the Design Center for Interiors, New York City.

Golden Filigree Roundels are gilt-foil versions of paper balls that pull out to assume round dimensions, becoming 12½" hanging spheres. Half-rounds trim flat surfaces. Attach with masking tape. Packed flat, 3 for $5.

Golden Filigree Fan, like a mammoth frost crystal turned to gold, is a lacy cut-out of gilt-foil paper that opens from a flat accordion-pleated fan into a generous 39"-diameter wheel of glitter. Just like our Golden Filigree Roundels, the Fan is foil on both sides so it can hang free. Use it half-open for mantel or table decoration. See page 174. Left, Fan folded, as it comes to you. $8.

Christmas Box Blocks, generous 6" cubes of brightly patterned, extra-strong cardboard, offer a completely new dimension in Christmas decoration, teasing your imagination to construct compositions of your own. (Besides the Box Block and glitter ball mantel arrangement below, see other suggestions on page 175. They are also handsome gift boxes, each side emblazoned with a different seasonal symbol.

Christmas Box Blocks come flat, die-scored so that they are easily folded into blocks. Sides are silk-screen-printed with wreath, star, Santa Claus, snowflake, bird, and Christmas tree. Set of 5 boxes, $9.

Noel Letters give you a fresh new way to hang your Christmas greens, spelling out the holiday in beautifully bold wall decoration. Letters are flat wire frames, covered with wire mesh, like our Swag and Jabot forms, and need only snippets of green tucked in them to take on a luxurious dimension. Right, at John Stuart, Inc., we highlighted ours with glitter balls. Our article on page 194 suggests the kind of Christmas greens most appropriate for use in studding our wire greenery frames.

Holly Angel Scroll was especially designed to give the family the pure joy of Christmas "doing." For you color this charming angel yourself. This Blessed Damozel comes, serene and lovely as any pre-Raphaelite angel, outlined in black on a firm white paper wall hanging, ready for you to tint as you will with crayon, water color or tempera paints. Left, see her in two different colorations. She's the kind of holiday project the whole family can share and take pride in.

Mirror Wreath Frame, another of our ingenious forms that makes child's play of arranging Christmas greens, lets you add greenery to glitter. It's a 6″-wide mesh-covered wire frame circling an unbreakable bull's-eye mirror of metallized plastic. Studded with greens, it surrounds the mirror with a plump, importantly scaled wreath, the whole composition being 24″ in diameter.

Below, we decked out a Mirror Wreath Frame with holly and hung it on the door of a Williamsburg bedroom, where it looks as appropriately traditional as the Williamsburg Adaptations of the old Raleigh Tavern bed and the Queen Anne drop-leaf table. Commode, shown here as a bedside table, can also do modern service as a telephone stand.

Mirror Wreath Frame comes to you as a 24″ diameter round of wire-mesh-covered steel wire, centered with an attached convex mirror of metallized plastic, 12″ in diameter. It stores in its own box. $12.

Our Ring Cone gives you a present and future framework for as many different kinds of Christmas trees as you can dream up. Your tree could be a pyramid of laurel or ivy leaves, a holly tree, a topiary tree or, like this dazzle on a "Williamsburg Adaptation" Pembroke table, a ten-tier tower solidly hung with Christmas balls in graduated sizes. The Ring Cone is made of 10 gilded steel wire rings, varying in size from 3½" to 24½" in diameter. Rings slip over a 34" high metal shank or "trunk," attaching firmly to it with butterfly bolts. Wrap the rings with green or hang with ornaments.

Ring Cone ingredients are engineered like fine machinery. Each wire ring has a bolted center sleeve which slips precisely over the metal rod. Rod itself comes in two pieces which screw together, then into a metal socket in a round gilded wood base. Below, Ring Cone assembled in traditional tree form. Even unadorned, its airy pattern is appealing. $29.

Williamsburg setting for a Christmas buffet supper centers around a mahogany sideboard adapted from an original piece. A few minor modernizing liberties were taken, such as the slight scaling down of its dimensions to put it at a convenient height for help-yourself meals. Holly Angel Scroll not only enlivens the scene, but demonstrates how a long vertical shape can build up a wall over a horizontal piece of furniture.

Meet Gene Moore

An artist who finds art in the most commonplace things and makes us suddenly aware

By LEE WILCOX

● A walk past Tiffany's windows on New York's Fifth Avenue is an extraordinary experience. You may see diamonds scattered in a pile of sand. Or the most fragile glassware may hang from oversized ship's tackle. Or a frying pan may sizzle with diamonds instead of bacon.

These unusual sights are the usual thing.

What may seem at first to be delightful irreverence for the precious jewels and finely-crafted ware displayed is, at second glance, real reverence. It's an example of what Gertrude Stein called "pure vision," for you suddenly see, as if for the first time, things you have been familiar with all your life. A commonplace thing appears in brand-new perspective. You discover all over again the sandiness of sand or, perhaps, the wiriness of wire.

The materials are cheap and ordinary—tissue paper, string, hammers, nails. They set off objects of the highest intrinsic value—Tiffany diamonds, lead crystal, sterling silver, and gold. First you see, let us say, diamonds in a pile of something dull and gritty—the very antithesis of diamonds, a marvelous frame for the pure, glittering brightness of the jewels. The background seems to be the essence of the dull and gritty and grainy. Suddenly, a light dawns and you recognize that the dullness, coarseness, and grittiness make up into that familiar stuff from the beach, sand. You feel as if you'd never really seen sand before, and you laugh with surprise and pleasure at this sudden, fresh understanding. Zen philosophers call this flash of insight the "ah-ness" of things. HOUSE BEAUTIFUL calls it "the thrill of discovery."

The man responsible for showing us that the commonest things are beautiful and precious is Display Director Gene Moore. For fifteen years at Bonwit Teller's and the last five at Tiffany's as well, he has created witty and beautiful window displays that make strollers look twice, smile, and stare. Somehow, with props that run the gamut from stove pipes, garden hoses, or balls of colored string, to serious paintings from art galleries or mobiles, mosaics, or collages from the studios of important artists, Gene Moore combines elements that open the eye to the very essence of things themselves. Such freedom with his palette of materials gives the east side of Fifth Avenue between 56th and 57th Streets the air of a carnival of the arts. It is as if the Metropolitan Museum had lent its masterpieces to Copenhagen's Tivoli Garden for an outdoor exhibit. Joie de vivre and quality join hands, and it is fun.

Quality is what you do with what you have, this artist says. Look twice, and really see. The notion is refuted that something beautiful must cost a lot of money. The lesson of these windows is that anything may increase our appreciative awareness of the world around us.

Does it seem strange to talk of window display in such grand terms? Walter Hoving, President of Tiffany & Company, thinks not. When he put Tiffany windows into (Please turn to page 170)

Gifts for Growing Minds

By EPSIE KINARD

• The search for knowledge can be the most exciting adventure of our life. When you give a gift that will help a friend explore a new field, you are inviting him to enjoy this adventure. This invitation can make the simplest gift the most thoughtful.

Whatever present you give to a friend for tooling his or her mind—to open doors to a new experience, or to flush out a hidden talent—choose it with a knowledge of that person's interests and areas of awareness. If you do, the most modest materials can make a gift of great and lasting value.

The humblest array of seeds, soils, and gravel given to a child whose imagination can be aroused puts him in a front row seat when nature's most awesome spectacle unfolds. Give your own homemade bread with the recipe and ingredients for making it to a friend with a capacity to explore, and the gift may turn the key to a wonderful new world of tastes and aromas. A simple plastic grid to implement creative needlepoint could be a gift to take a friend out of the stereotypes of design into an art form in which she can express herself.

There's no law that says you can't give yourself any of the gifts we suggest on these four pages to make fertile any of your own fields that lie fallow. You'll find, as your friends will, that there's no exercise so exhilarating as keeping the muscles of the mind active for growth.

Ticket to ringside seat for the spectacle of growth

A child with a capacity to behold can find in this array of seed-growing materials—plastic flat, herb seeds, soil, gravel, vermiculite, and guide book. The Adventure Book of Growing Plants, by Frances M. Miner (Capitol)—an introduction to the wonderland of nature and a lifetime of excitement.

More Gifts to Interest Amateur Scientists

• To the mathematically-minded, give Geodestix, colored sticks that fit together, for making geometric figures and molecular structures and for solving puzzles. For more brain-teasing, supplement puzzles with The Scientific American Book of Mathematical Puzzles and Diversions, by Martin Gardner (Simon & Schuster). If you can't locate Geodestix, send $5 to Edmund Scientific Co., Barrington, N.J.

• Give an ultra-violet science lab (found in toy or department stores) for father and son to share. Together, they can explore a world of black light, marking money invisibly, discovering woods that glow, making tracer paints to track footsteps.

• Give a teenager membership in the "Things of Science" Club. It mails to members a monthly experiment or unit or kit, complete with materials for performing a wide range of scientific experiments. Address membership application—$5 a year—to ("N"), Science Service, 1719 N St., N.W., Washington 6, D.C.

Turn a dabbler in geology into a true rock hound

Open doors to the drama of the earth's history or the sciences of geology or engineering with this group of gifts. It includes "starter" rocks and minerals, field bag, geologist's hammer, cold chisels, compass, magnifying glass, notebook, field guides. The books will take the rock hound to his quarry, explain specimens, and send him back with interest to rock pits and excavations.

Gifts that give collecting more meaning

• If a child is adventurous, creative, and an avid collector, introduce him to the world of animal tracks. Fill a packsack for him with a small bag of plaster of Paris, bottle of tempera paint, and brush. Include a good book to teach what trails to follow and how to cast tracks: Tracks and Trailcraft, by Ellsworth Jaeger (Macmillan) or The Golden Book of Nature Crafts, by John R. Saunders (Simon & Schuster).

• To a friend of any age, fascinated by the world of flowers and insects, give a key to enter —tools for collecting butterflies. Give a net, magnifying glass, specimen tray, and perhaps as one specimen, a Monarch or Gemmed Satyr. For guidance, give A Field Guide to the Butterflies, by Alexander B. Klots (Houghton Mifflin) or The Golden Book of Nature Crafts, by John R. Saunders (Simon & Schuster).

• If a friend feels the primordial pull of the sea, shell-collecting will help him probe the world where land and tides meet. Give some shells, a magnifying glass, and the guide book, Seashores, by Zim and Ingle (Simon & Schuster).

• Coin-collecting will teach an alert friend as much about money as a banker knows. A kit with your choice of coins, album, coinometry and guide books will be assembled by Stamp & Coin Shopper, (116 Nassau St., New York 38, N. Y.) for about $9.

For sky explorers, a satellite-tracking telescope

Since everyone takes up a stance to watch Echo's comings and goings, a telescope can make sky-watching fun for the whole family. (Good telescopes start at about $22.) To make the child in the family more knowledgeful, include a book on astronomy, with a constellation chart that invites star-hopping—The Golden Book of Astronomy (Golden Press). Shown below, Atco Astronomical-Terrestrial Telescope from Macy's, New York, about $60.

To spur a needleworker to create her own designs

Encouragement to a friend to go from stereotype to creative needle- or grospoint is an erasable plastic grid with 10-to-an-inch squares, same as canvas squares. With it, she can create a design or use it to take one from a drapery fabric, as shown. To complete this gift: canvas, book, Needlepoint Made Easy, by Picken and White (Harper); yarn card of designer colors to order for $1 from Yarn Depot, 545 Sutter St., San Francisco, Calif. For plastic grid, 10½" x 14", with instructions for use, send 75¢ to Blue Print Co., HB-1, 101 Park Ave., New York 17, N. Y.

To flush out hidden talents and skills

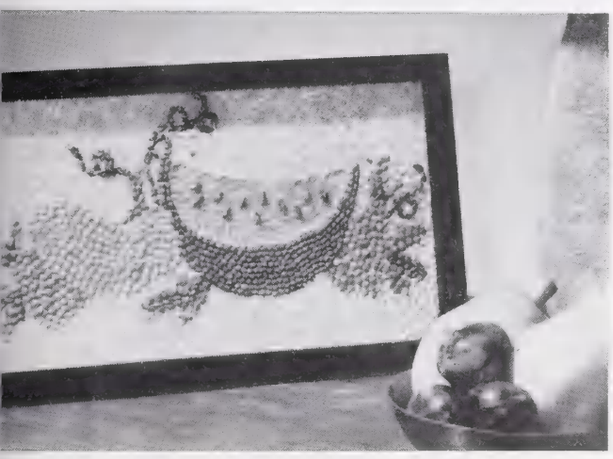
- To launch a "Sunday painter," give to a talented friend a course in an art class. Include with the gift: canvas board, six tubes of basic paints, one wide and one narrow brush, a bottle of linseed oil, and a bottle of turpentine.
- Give to a child who draws, The Poetry-Drawing Book (Simon & Schuster). Its blank pages with 40 visually-evocative poems are an open invitation to a child to create. You might supplément this gift with crayons and Edward Lear's The Complete Nonsense Book (Dodd Mead). The imaginative fun of Lear's own drawings will further stimulate a child's own creative efforts.

Gift with powers to persuade musical performance



To encourage participation, give a musical instrument with a book of instructions. He'll get good musical returns for a small time investment from recorder, ukulele, or auto harp. Good recorders for beginners range from $9.95 to $20. European-alto recorder, shown, G. Schirmer, N.Y.C., $9.95. Alto method book, $1.

Another gift for growing minds on page 173

The equivalent of "daily dozens" for muscles of the mind

- Memory-training aids: To strengthen the pillar of knowledge, give two games, "Names and Faces" and "Things and Places" (two to four people play) and a memory-training book, Stop Forgetting (Doubleday), all by Dr. Bruno Furst, who conducts a memory-training course.
- Give distinguished speaker-recordings with creative personalities discussing challenging subjects: Jacques Barzun on "The Care and Feeding of the Mind"; Frank C. Baxter on "The Nature of Poetry"; Preston Slosson on "Our Heritage of History"; Dr. Edward Teller on "The Size and Nature of the Universe" (all Spoken Arts); and "Henry Mencken Conversing" in defense of his rambunctious opinions (Caedmon).
- Give a traveler-friend language-study records in the tongue he'll need or a good bilingual dictionary.
- Give museum memberships; seasonal opera, ballet, or theater tickets.
- Give a certificate to a gourmet food shop tucked in the book The Food of France by Waverly Root (Knopf).

Gift that takes a beginner from kit to creative mosaic

To start a seed mosaicist off, give a kit from which to make a mosaic, like the one (left) that leads on to creative activity, as the half-finished one above shows. Or add little bags of beans, rice, coffee, spices, or shells to be mounted on plywood, beaverboard, or anything that holds glue.

Gift that might be a passport to a gourmet's world

Give, as inspiration to a creative cook, some of your own homemade bread. (Make it from the recipe for Sweet Saffron Bread, page 244, November, 1960, HOUSE BEAUTIFUL.) Include ingredients and the recipe. If your friend has a spirit of adventure, the gift can be a pass-key to new experiences of taste and aroma.

Gift to fan the spark of creative decorating

A gift to help overcome a teenager's timidity might spark a flair for creative decorating. Paint-a-mural kit with stencil for drawing offers choice of four designs on wall space 50″ x 76″, plus paints for coloring it. A creative girl can vary the colors, alter the design, and make her room decorations truly her own.

A Gracious Christmas

Constant entertaining can be a holiday delight—IF you get properly organized. You can even have "double-headers" on the same day. A veteran hostess tells how she does it

By VIRGINIA STANTON
House Beautiful's Party Editor

● We all love to go places and do things during the holidays and, if you have geared yourself to the mad hectic whirl, you will love every minute of it. The secret: Pull yourself together early in December and you can be on top of all that fuzz-buzz from December 15 to January 2.

I am sure this has happened to you. You hear a car drive up and friends are calling. The house is a mess. The tree is half trimmed. Presents to be wrapped are scattered about. You look a fright!

I used to scurry about, flinging things in the laundry hamper, waste baskets, whatever empty drawers were handy—anywhere to get them out of sight. Then I would try and muster up a wan smile to greet my friends.

But not any more of this for me. Now I wrap my gifties the first week of December. By the fifteenth my cards have been in the mail a week and my planning for parties and shopping is all done. The week before Christmas I trim the tree and get the house "all gussied up." Then I relax and enjoy it.

I can greet my guests with genuine pleasure and extend a warm welcome that I mean. The kids pile home from college, so relieved that they don't have to do the tree, hang the wreaths, etc. That puts them in a good mood to have fun. When you have got everything in (Please turn to page 139)

Some of the most interesting foods are the plainest and easiest to come by. It's how you present them that makes them party fare. Here mulled cider, coffee, and doughnuts are made inviting at "elevenish."

Ask them in at eight P.M. for cheese, port, and fruit. Not too hard for you to manage, and it gives them a little lift in their routine. Remember, a little social occasion is often more enjoyable than a big one.

Christmas is not the time to drag out that lace tablecloth, because that may be what every other hostess is doing. Do it freshly. Here I've paired my Thai silk stole to red carnations, safely held in those plastic water containers made for candlesticks. Such a table setting had to have red wine, and that in turn influenced the menu. Silver is "Craftsman" from Towle.

A new Do-Everything decoration:

Golden Feather Fringe

This is Golden Feather Fringe as you get it, but a little creative playfulness turns it into a world of decoration.

FOUR PHOTOGRAPHS BY WESLEY BALZ

Striking door frame is made of fringe lengths wrapped around Christmas balls. Start with two lengths of fringe laid side by side on floor, fringe sides out. Secure first ball by putting small safety pin through one fringe, then through ball's hanger, then through second fringe. Bring two lengths of fringe around ball, stapling where they meet. Tape fringe on either side of ball. Repeat with as many balls as desired. Tie string along the back, knotting at each pin, to support chain when it is hung.

Swags over mantel (opposite) start with cardboard cut out in shape of swag. Rows of fringe are attached with tape, starting at the bottom, with the fringe curving down and in. Finish top with gold rope or other decorative edge.

Feathery tree above has cone of acetate sheeting (from art store) as a base. You can get two cones from a 25″ x 40″ sheet by swinging 24″ arcs from opposite corners. Cone is formed by punching holes along meeting edges and connecting edges with brass-headed paper fasteners. Starting at the bottom of the cone, make circles of fringe around it, joining each circle with cellophane tape. Also tape circle to cone in several places. Put finial of fringe facing up through hole at top. Lighting tree from inside with small lantern flashlight will add greatly to the total effect. This tree uses 6½ yards.

● Christmas decorating is a heady mixture of traditional festival forms with the most extravagant tinsel inventions we can dream up. No holds are barred when it comes to dressing up our houses during the holiday season. In the burst of good spirits we forgive ourselves (and others) for lavish displays we might otherwise condemn. So Christmas is a wonderful time to give full vent to our playful natures, to try out with inexpensive materials the ideas that costly permanent decorations would prevent us from attempting.

On these pages you see a new feather-edged golden fringe that gives you delicious opportunities for creative playfulness. It comes as a simple roll but can burst into glittering decorations all over the house. It can be draped, wound, twisted, swirled or hung in dozens of ways, each giving a different effect, but each having the shimmer and life of a golden feather. Light enough to (Please turn to page 181)

How to order: Send $5 for 12-yard roll ($10 for 25-yard roll) to Craft Studios, 118 Evans St., New Hyde Park, N. Y.

Each finger of this fan is a ⅛″ dowel stick (from lumber yard) wrapped with fringe. Tape fringe at one end, twirl stick, spiraling fringe tightly around it. Cut fringe and tape end. Push dowels into plastic foam base to form fan. Mask base with shorter fringe-wrapped dowels and Christmas balls.

Everybody has windows —everybody can afford tissue paper

Christmas is the time when everyone becomes an artist. And everyone can be an artist when he plays this way with tissue paper

By ROXA WRIGHT

Every time you loop tinsel or hang a wreath you are making an aesthetic decision—for better or worse. One of the reasons Christmas is fun is that you are indulging in creative playfulness which you don't feel you should allow yourself at other times of the year. (Though maybe you should.)

HOUSE BEAUTIFUL feels you'll create a prettier house if you acknowledge to yourself that holiday house-trimming is a creative act meant to produce pleasure—for yourself and others. The more it is your own expression, the more fun. And the more likely it will be pretty rather than a cliché. Don't let a sense of a meager budget dwarf your latent creativity, for there is always colored tissue paper. With it and rubber cement you can create fabulous stained-glass windows all over the house.

On these pages we show you what you can achieve by layering colored tissue paper shapes over each other. By partially over-lapping similar forms, you can build up fabulously beautiful designs. For the color intensifies as the paper piles up, layer on layer. And you get color gradations from light to strong.

Different colors pasted on top of each other produce colors not existing in any of the separate papers. In short, you can create new colors. See the blue and purple rosette in the center of the color picture, for example.

All geometric forms are easy to play with. Cut them in quantity, fan them out on a table in different ways to see what effects they can create. Then get ready to paste.

What you'll mainly need for your fling at decorating is a variety of tissue paper in pretty colors.

Besides paper you'll need: sharp scissors, paper clips, round plates or pans for patterns, a pint can of rubber cement thinned down with rubber cement thinner (the sheerness of tissue paper calls for extra thin cement), ruler, soft pencil.

On the opposite page are some of the many possible designs you can make from circles, squares, strips, and other simple shapes. Expand their scope as much as you wish. Remember that even waste material and left-over cutouts have design possibilities.

You can cut any design shown here in multiple layers if tissue papers are firmly clipped together before cutting. Cement your designs, one layer at a time, directly to the window with thinned rubber cement. To make decorations stick, coat only the window pane with thinned rubber cement (don't try to spread cement on the tissue paper—it's too thin to work with).

Let cement dry until tacky. When it has formed a skin and is no longer shiny, put on a layer of tissue. Let cement dry between each layering. Rub off excess cement gently with your fingers. (Please turn to page 184)

See what lovely patterns and designs emerge from circles, petals, and cutouts. The base forms couldn't be simpler, but layering and overlapping make new arcs and more intense colorations. You can get such delicate effects from one color of tissue paper. Or go wild with overlapping of different colors.

HOW TO ORDER TISSUE PAPERS

If you can't find them locally, send for this set of tissue papers in 15 different, gay, positive colors (seen along the edge of the page opposite). The package has six sheets of each color plus four spools of gold foil ribbon. To get the Tissue Rainbow, send $5.50 to East House, 1075 First Ave., New York 22, N. Y.

Elegance at ease is the picture achieved by a rolling cart designed specifically as a telephone stand. It rolls easily over deep pile carpeting or hard-surface floors on large, free-wheeling casters. Gleaming brass framework stands 27″ high and holds three 10½″ x 12½″ shelves of black plastic laminate, just the right size to store bulky telephone directories with plenty of room left for note pads, pencils, and other phoning essentials. Roll-around telephone table, $42.50, from Mark Cross, New York, N.Y.

This electric pencil sharpener makes its point every time. Just hold a standard-size pencil in place and the weight of your hand will set the sharpener to work. Pencil is sharpened in seconds. Three tiny batteries furnish all the electric power required. Kent Cordless Electric Pencil Sharpener, about $11.

This new fry-pan combines the stainless quality of ceramic cookware with the convenience of electric cooking. Made of Pyroceram, originally developed to withstand the extreme temperature changes in the nose cone of a missile, it comes in 10″ size with easy-to-clean, rounded corners. Base unit has heating element embedded in it. Corning Ware Electramic Skillet and Base Unit, about $30.

Wall-mounted TV set comes with hanger bracket and shelf that swivels to aim the set at the far corners of the room. Wall plate is screwed into studs, then shelf is hung on it. Bar at front and top clamp keep set securely in place. TV unit is 19″, has clip-on doors of woven mesh framed in wood, can plug into outlet built into wall behind it or any baseboard outlet. General Electric Designer TV, with bracket and doors shown, about $250.

With this roll-about storage unit, a table for four can be set up in a jiffy and just as quickly put away. Practical for both apartment dwellers and homeowners, this caddy holds a card table hanging on one side, four folding chairs on the other. Perforated board is mounted on casters. Rolled into closet, unit takes up only 13″ x 35″ of floor. Stor-Roller, $15, available from Hammacher Schlemmer, New York, N.Y.

Guests will enjoy fixing kabobs to their own individual taste with this handy new cooker. Ranch brands identify the skewers, which are fixed in place around a vertical basket holding burning charcoal. When grill is plugged in, skewers rotate for perfect cooking on all sides and are self-basted by dripping juices. West Bend Kabob 'n Grill, about $30.

The popular fry-pan is given a new slant. An extra leg, snapped down from the handle, tips this automatic fry-pan slightly. Grease then drains away from pan-broiled food and collects against far side, giving lighter, crisper foods. Tilt-top lid can also be angled down to prevent spattering. Handle is slotted for wall-hanging. General Electric Automatic Skillet, about $29, including hinged lid and removable thermostatic heat control.

Here's a broiler that works like a toaster. Hamburgers and any other sandwich-thickness meats can be cooked to perfection in this vertical infrared broiler. It has a timer lever that pops up to report when the food is ready. This is truly spatterless cooking that can be done on any counter top. Grease drips into a tray at the base; it pulls out for cleaning at the sink. Cole Burg-o-mat Vertical Broiler, about $40.

Portable intercoms are simply plugged into normal 110-volt house outlets. Using a high frequency "carrier" in existing circuits, they need no added wiring. Each unit sends and receives. Any number can be used in one house; all will be connected. Units work between neighboring houses if on same power pole transformer, but have a control to prevent this if not desired. General Electric, $80 a pair.

Battery-operated lawn mower has the push-button starting and quiet operation of electric mowers—but needs no cord. Rotary model shown mows about 15,000 sq. ft. of grass without recharging. Reel model is rated at 22,000 sq. ft. Built-in charger connects to house current (above), takes about 40 hours but less than three cents to charge. Cover is removed here to show battery. West Point Lectro Lawnshear, about $150.

Music and narration can be added to color-slide shows with the aid of programmer (foreground) that can synchronize a Kodak Cavalcade Projector with most tape recorders. It keys your sound on tape to each slide and silently signals projector when to change slides. Kodak Cavalcade Programmer, about $95. Tape recorder shown, from the Telectrosonic Corporation.

Two-way floor machine can clean any type of floor covering. For carpeting, normal vacuum unit (above, rear) is attached to the power source in the handle. For cleaning vinyl or other hard-surface flooring, tank-type unit spreads cleaning solution (in operation above), scrubs floors thoroughly, then vacuums it dry. Bissellectric with Scrub-Master and Sweep-Master, about $60.

Ceramics— Now the Best Art Buy

Measured by either the price tag or art significance, modern ceramics are bargains. We are blessed with many great artists who are producing masterpieces. Here are some criteria to use in recognizing great ceramics, suggested by one of the world's great potters

By BERNARD LEACH Author of A Potter's Book

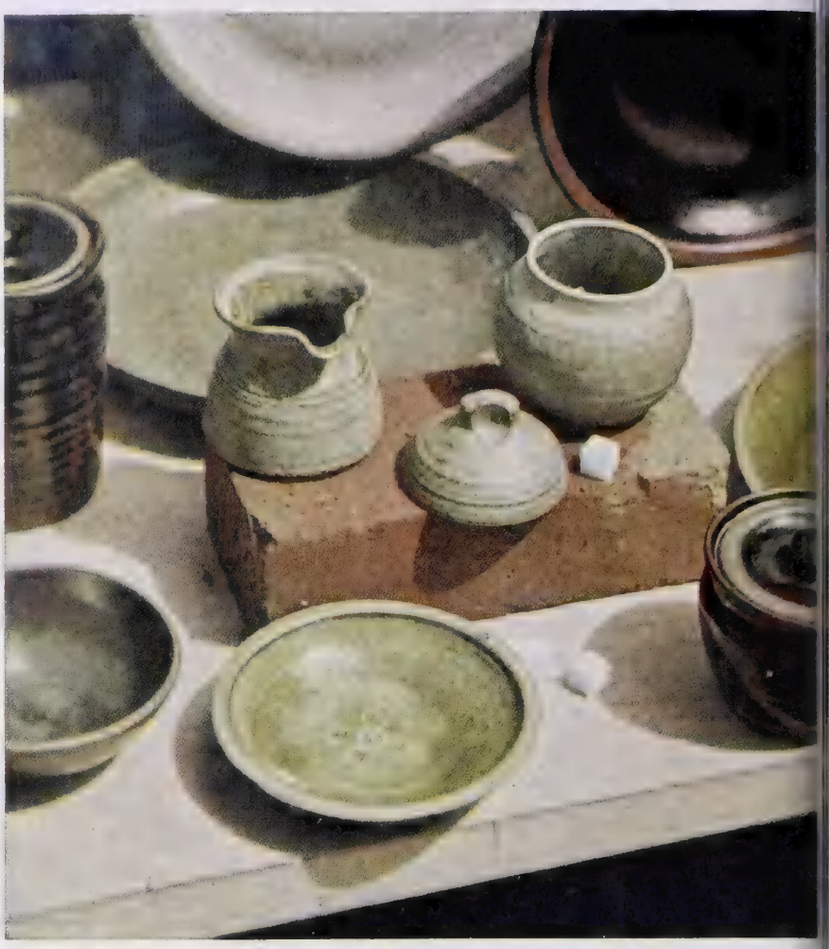
The work of the individual potter or potter-artist, who performs all, or nearly all, the processes of production with his own hands, belongs to one aesthetic category. And the finished results of industrialized manufacture or mass-production belong to another and quite different category. In the work of the potter-artist, who throws his own pots, there is a unity of design and execution, a co-operation of hand and undivided personality, for designer and craftsman are one. The work of the designer for mass-production, whose office is to make drawings or models of utensils, often to be cast or molded in parts and subsequently assembled, is quite another thing.

The art of the craftsman is intuitive and humanistic (one hand, one brain). Designing for reduplication, rational, abstract and tectonic, is the work of the engineer or constructor rather than that of the "artist." Each method has its own aesthetic significance. Examples of both can be good or bad. The distinction between them lies in the relegation of the actual making not merely to other hands than those of the designer but to power-driven machines. The products of the latter can never possess the same intimate qualities as the former.

There I think we come to the crux of the matter: good hand craftsmanship is directly subject to the prime source of human activity, whereas machine crafts, even at their best, are activated at one remove—by the intellect.

Pots, like all other forms of art, are human expressions. Pleasure, pain, or indifference before them depends upon their natures, and their natures are inevitably projections of the minds of their creators. It is important to remember that, although pottery is made to be used, this fact in no wise simplifies the problem of artistic expression. There can be no fullness or complete realization of utility without beauty, refinement, and charm for the simple reason that their absence must in the long run be intolerable to both maker and consumer.

I have often sought for some method of suggesting to people who have not had the experience of making pottery a means of approach to the recognition of what is good, based upon common human experience rather than upon aesthetic hair-splitting. A distinguished Japanese potter, Mr. Kawai of Kyoto, when asked how people are to recognize good work, answered simply, "With their bodies." He meant with the mind acting directly through the senses, taking in form, texture, pattern and color, and referring the sharp immediate impressions to personal experience of use and beauty combined. But as pottery is made for uses with which we are all familiar, the difficulty probably lies less in one's ability to recognize proper adaptation of form to function than in other directions, primarily perhaps in unfamiliarity with the nature of the raw material, clay, and its natural possibilities and limitations, and also in uncertainty as to the more imponderable qualities of vitality and relative excellence of form, both of which are indispensable constituents of beauty.



It must always be remembered that the dissociation of use and beauty is a purely arbitrary thing. It is true that pots exist which are useful and not beautiful, and others that are beautiful and impractical: but neither of these extremes can be considered normal. The normal is a balanced combination of the two. (Please turn to page 153)

The pots on the facing page were made by Bernard Leach (also the author of this article). He was born in China, learned his art in Japan, now works in England, knows both hemispheres from within. This gives him an unprecedented knowledge, and the outstanding characteristic of his work is the union of the ceramic values of East and West. These pieces were part of an exhibition of Leach's work held recently at Bonniers, N.Y., a shop specializing in fine ceramics.

Good potters exist all over the country, and you never know where you may find them or where their work will be offered for sale. Above are pots by David Stannard, of Eugene, Oregon. His work is seldom obtainable outside the vicinity of Oregon, for he has his own following there who buy all he produces. His pots have modesty, grace, and usefulness.

At left, pots by Beatrice Wood, another favorite among ceramic collectors. She works with strikingly brilliant colors and produces original, non-traditional shapes. Yet the majority of her pieces are functional. There is also a humor and lilt in her pieces that never go so far as to be outré or grotesque, as is so often the case with the "experimenters."

Below is a pot by Kylliki Salmenhaara of Finland, one of the many great potters of the north country. Her work reminds one of the great ceramics of Mesopotamia—earthy, crusty, rich with heterogeneous colors. Her pots always bespeak what a glorious thing clay can be in the hands of a true artist. No potter knows better how to arrive at a glorious "random" effect.

Above, is a sampling of the work of Hans Coper of England, who has a sizable following in this country. His forms are fresh, strong, and interesting as well as useful. He does not depend on glazes so much for finished surfaces, but strives for crusty textures that are expressions of the inner clay. These pieces are courtesy of Bonniers.

Left, pieces by Francine Del Pierre of France. Her work has the polished femininity that you would expect of a Frenchwoman. Ornamentation, when she uses it, is understated and haunting, rather than positively stated. Her pots with two sets of lids (in foreground) are triumphs of ceramic skill. Courtesy Bonniers.

TWO PHOTOGRAPHS BY MAX YAVNO

• All the pots shown on this page are the work of Gertrud and Otto Natzler, a husband-and-wife team working in California. Every serious ceramic collector owns at least one piece by the Natzlers. Their pots have the elegantly proportioned forms of the early Oriental ceramics. Many of their glazes are masterpieces in which the eye can lose itself discovering new things in line, color, and texture. They pioneered and developed several very new and different glazes, such as the crater glaze (reminiscent of verdigreed bronze or frozen lava) and a crystalline glaze that is peppered with thousands of tiny snowflake-like exploding crystals. Prices for their pieces start under $10 for small ash trays and go as high as $300 to $500 for big, important pieces. Their work is offered for sale by a few art galleries and also in shops specializing in ceramics and artistic accessories.

• Carl-Harry Stålhane finds inspiration for his stoneware in cliffs, trees, and the earth itself. The young Swedish artist and industrial designer wants you to enjoy the feel of his things, their texture and shape. His design is clean. When function is called for, the practicalities of pouring, lifting, and holding are beautifully satisfied. When he creates pure-form sculptures, they are abstractions of elemental shapes—mill stones, Viking flints, tree trunks. Stalhane's glazes are many layered and hard-fired. Patterns rise and fall out of the glaze and shape of the piece, suggesting again and again the facets of bark and stone. Changing light affects Stalhane's stoneware as strongly as sun and shadow affect pebbles in water.

Thus in looking for the best approach to pottery it seems reasonable to expect that beauty will emerge from a fusion of the individual character and culture of the potter with the nature of his materials—clay, pigment, glaze—and his management of the fire, and that consequently we may hope to find in good pots those innate qualities which we most admire in people.

It is for this reason that I consider the mood, or nature, of a pot to be of first importance. It represents our instinctive total reaction to either maker or pot, and although there is no guarantee that our judgment is true for others, it is at least essentially honest and as likely to be true as any judgment we are capable of making at that particular phase of our development. It is far better to run the risk of making an occasional blunder than to attempt cold-blooded analyses based upon other people's theories. Judgment in art cannot be other than intuitive and founded upon sense experience, on what Kawai calls "the body." No process of reasoning can be a substitute for or widen the range of our intuitive knowledge.

This does not mean that we cannot use our common sense in examining the qualities in a pot which give us its character, such as form, texture, decoration, and glaze. For analytic reasoning is important enough as a support to intuition. Beginning with the color and texture of the clay, one must ask, apart from its technical suitability, whether it is well-related to the thrown or moulded shape created by the potter and to the purpose for which the pot is intended. What, for example, is appropriate for a porous unglazed water jug is utterly unsuitable for an acid jar. Does its fired character give pleasure to the eye as well as to the touch? Does its texture contrast pleasingly with the glaze? Has it, where exposed to the flame, turned to a dull brick red which contrasts happily with the heavy jade green of a celadon? Does it show an interesting granular surface under an otherwise lifeless porcelain glaze? Has its plasticity been such as to encourage the thrower to his best efforts, for the form cannot be dissociated from its material.

The shape of a pot cannot be dissociated from the way it has been made; one may throw fifty pots in an hour, on the same model, which only vary in fractions of an inch, and yet only half a dozen of them may possess that right relationship of parts which gives vitality—life flowing for a few moments perfectly through the hands of the potter.

Apart from the basic clay, the form of the pot is of the first importance, and the first thing we must look for is, as already indicated, proper adaptation to use and suitability to material. Without these we cannot expect to find beauty in any of its modes, nobility, austerity, strength, breadth, subtlety, warmth—qualities which apply equally to our judgments of human and ceramic values. Nor do these qualities arise from human characteristics alone, but from a common recognition of forms whether man-made or natural, which we associate with them.

Of all forms we know best our own, and attach to it the greatest degree of evocative emotion. Next come animal, plant and mineral forms: lastly, and mainly in our own time, geometric abstracts, largely the inventions of man's brain. It is not without reason that important parts of pots should be known as foot, belly, shoulder, neck, and lip, or that curve and angle should often be thought of as male or female. Beauty of ceramic form, which is at once subjective and objective, is obtained in much the same manner as in abstract (rather than representational) sculpture. It is subjective in that the innate character of the potter, his stock and his tradition live afresh in his work: objective in so far as his selection is drawn from the background of universal human experience.

Subordinate to form but intimately connected with it is the problem of decoration, and the question arises whether the increased orchestration adds to the total effect or not. It is nevertheless of the greatest significance that some of the very finest pots are quite plain. Many a good piece has been spoiled by a weak or tasteless design, printed or applied in one way or another: not only must the pattern be good in itself and freely executed, but it must combine with and improve the form and harmonize with the natural variations of both color and texture of body and glaze.

In short, a pot, in order to be good, should be a genuine expression of life.

A pot thrown on a good wheel with responsive clay, but not too soapy in texture, is impressed and expressed, urged and pulled and coaxed through a (Please turn to page 178)

● Big Christmas ornaments are hard to find at any price. but here are huge colorful ones you can make for as little as $1.25. Use Pellon, the dress lining that stiffens. It takes dye beautifully, and its non-woven, felt-like feel is soft and resilient. Count on about one yard for each ornament.

Here are plans for big Christmas Balls and Stars. You need 36″ wide, medium-weight regular Pellon, available in dress-goods departments for about $1 a yard, Tintex or any all-purpose dye, a dinner plate, scissors, a stapler, cardboard, paper clips, and needle and thread.

Christmas Half-Balls

To make one half-ball (shown left), draw 9 circles edge to edge (Step One) using a 10″ dinner plate as pattern. Save the scraps to make the Christmas Star (above right). Leftover strips can be dyed and used as hanging ribbons.

Mix a concentrated solution of dye, (color of your choice), following directions on the package but using only enough water to dissolve the dye. Pour the dye about 1 inch deep into a shallow pan. Reheat if necessary. Stack your circles and dye the whole stack by rolling the edges slowly through the dye (Step Two). The dye absorbs irregularly, making pretty, blurry edges. Let dry or dry with a hot iron.

To dye the centers of the circles, roll each into a cone and dip the tip (Step Three). Let dry or iron dry.

Let's give Christmas back to the children

If the season has become more and more disappointing to you, try keeping its bright promise this year by letting your children fulfill it the way they love best

By MARIAN CARTER LEWIS

"Christmas isn't as much fun any more."

When I overheard my ten-year-old daughter say this early last December, I was astonished. I thought my own disenchantment with the Christmas season was just a sign of being grown up. Childhood Christmases were always sparkling, I thought. Now I began to realize how wrong I'd been.

At a top-priority family conference that began immediately and lasted on and off for several days I learned that well-meaning adults could engineer children into activities they (the adults) thought the children would or should enjoy, then put grown-up standards on these so that the whole season could become a hectic chore.

Out of the conference came a Plan, the gist of which was to give Christmas back to the children and let them express it in their own way. They would take part in some but not all of the celebrations at church, school, scouts, dancing school, and clubs. They would go to only three of the five possible dances, say "no" to the extra things that always come along, and very important indeed, they would not fall prey to the propaganda that Christmas means mostly more and bigger presents.

They decided themselves to have an old-fashioned Christmas with new-fashioned ease by pruning the list of activities, thus having enough time to spend on the ones they really enjoyed so that these could become really satisfying experiences. The result was not a finished performance by any means, and it was certainly not a time of tranquility (for creativity is always more or less chaotic), but it was what Christmas is meant to be—the joyous response to a world-shaking idea. The excitement they felt was as fresh and primitive as a Giotto painting. When it was all over, there was no let-down feeling, for Christmas had come alive once more.

All this may sound strange to the parents of small children, for to the very young and their parents Christmas is pure joy. But this easy-to-achieve stage lasts only a few years; after that a family has to decide what course Christmas is to take and then steer it in that direction.

The questions of presents came first. The children (aged ten to fourteen) decided to have us cut way down. There was to be one big present from us for each of them, with the crevices filled in with presents from friends, relatives, and each other. They became really convinced that the thoughtful present was what counted and did some heavy cogitating about each gift. In some cases they pooled their resources: one giving the bracelet, another the charm to go on it. Sometimes they made the present: a wastebasket covered in wallpaper to match a particular room; thanks to training in a home economics class, one child made a Madras skirt for one sister and two doll dresses for another.

Their presents to us were just as personalized. From one there was an I.O.U. "to make your bed every day from now until spring vacation." Certainly that was a well-placed gift of labor and love! From another we received a laboriously typed and framed copy of a poem which she had written as an English assignment, a ballad of thirty-two lines whose agonized creation we had all witnessed. Two of the children recorded the pieces they had learned for their piano recital and gave the record as a gift to their grandmother.

"Let's have a singing party," came an eager suggestion from one of the children. "We never sing enough carols." So we decided to have a carol-singing party for all the children's age groups together. We hinted in the initial invitation that older children were responsible for younger children or some adjustment would be made on the premises. By having one party that included everyone, we eliminated separate parties for each age group. We also eased the Christmas crush by holding the sing after Christmas in the long week that tends to be a let-down between Christmas and New Year's.

The Sunday School kindly lent us enough hymn books so that everyone had all the words, and all the same words. I typed copies of some little-known songs from our two favorite Christmas collections, "A Treasury of Christmas Songs and Carols" and "American Folk Songs for Christmas." This and marketing for the refreshments were my only contributions to the party. The children made creamed chicken, salad, and cookies and mixed the punch, a concoction of their own inspiration notable for its touch of glamour, a frozen mold of raspberry sherbet well studded with cherries. Those who could play instruments brought them along. Three clarinets, several recorders, and a violin joined forces with the two pianists who took turns accompanying their favorite songs. Our twelve-year-old, who had been studying Christmas customs in school, persuaded two of her husky classmates to carry in an extra large piece of fire wood well draped in greenery to represent the yule log.

"We really should have a boar's head, too, I suppose," she said hesitatingly, "so we could sing 'The boar's head in hand bear I', but I don't think I could actually face a beheaded pig with an apple in his snout just for a song!" They sang and sang and sang. From my position of watchful waiting in the upstairs hall, I could tell the gathering would not meet any adult musical standards, but I could also tell that the party was a definite success because big brothers and sisters controlled little brothers and sisters without "adjustments" and because my own children willingly bent to the business of cleaning up afterward.

When it came to the stockings, the children wanted them "hung by the chimney with care," as usual, but with a difference: We, the parents, were invited to hang ours up, too. A special aura seems to cling to the hanging of the stockings; even the fourteen-year-old twins confessed that the fun of coming downstairs in the first light of Christmas dawn and finding the stockings bulging with unknown surprises had not diminished.

Our custom has been for the children to bring the stockings back up to our room and, while everyone crowds on the bed, to take turns pulling out the presents one by one. The surprise and fun over the things they had put in our stockings and the veiled jokes about how Santa Claus came to include us in his rounds added new sparkle to the event. I'm sure St. Nick did not mind in the least this reversal of his original intention.

"I want to do the crêche all by myself," Cathy said, "and I'm not going to use the same figures everyone buys." So we never unpacked the clay figurines we had used in other years. Instead, after choosing the hall table as the best stage for her nativity scene, Cathy brought down certain dolls from her doll-house. Some of these she dressed in bits of silk and velvet to represent the Kings and Wise Men; others she wrapped in pieces of wool to act as the Shepherds. We found some dried grass under the snow for the bed of hay for the Christ Child. The props of gold, frankincense, and myrrh were dishes and a little box from the doll-house. She borrowed animals—several horses and a pack of hounds—from her sisters' vast collections. The sheep she had to make out of pipe cleaners and the cattle, too, she made from the red-brown, self-hardening clay found in any art store.

Even the Christmas tree came in for a new look according to the Plan. "We'll just use the lights and make everything else," they decided. Here, to our surprise, the usually non-togetherness teenagers shone. Carol could not find enough time to make all the things she had seen or wanted to improvise. Her sputniks, as we called them, were the most effective of all her creations. These were made by sticking round toothpicks, as many as thirty, in a small rubber ball from the ten-cent store. The next step was to paint the whole thing white and, while it was still wet, sprinkle glitter on both ball and spikes.

We all worked around the dining-room table which was well protected by an old blanket, stringing yards and yards of cranberries and popcorn. Friends who dropped in sat down either to add a few feet to our strings or make some for their own trees. One little girl brought the Christmas present she was sewing for her mother to our house so she could work on it without fear of possible discovery. Everyone made cornucopias of gay stiff papers to fill with the well-tested (and tasted) fudge recipe. Some they labeled for members of the family and friends; some they left unmarked to give to Christmas callers.

Paper chains seemed to grow out of the fingers of the smaller children like silken strands from a spider. They also enjoyed the easy job of decorating plastic foam balls with sequins, which they pinned on in lovely colorful designs. The candy wreath they made was a tremendous hit. They started with the wire wreath frame. Then they stuck the ends of paper wrapped around candy pieces into the frame until it was solidly filled. A pair of scissors was tied to the wreath with a long red ribbon and the wreath hung on the inside of the front door. Each departing guest was invited to cut himself a piece of candy.

We had cookies by the score, decorated in great flights of fancy with the old frosting standby (confectioner's sugar, milk, and food coloring, bejeweled with citron). Little wires were tucked into the cookies before baking so they could be hung on the tree. One young neighbor who did not like to cook or make things, but who still wanted to be part of the gathering, copied Bible verses from the Christmas story and stuck these on colored paper to hang on the tree. "The story is more than just the same old words when you have to decide which verses you will use and start writing them down," she said, holding up her carefully copied lines.

Our new approach to Christmas was a glowing success. As much as we would all like to borrow the eyes of our children at Christmas time and behold, in C. Day Lewis's words, "our own young world again," it is not easy. But we can be led there by our children. As I finished our Christmas cards ahead of schedule for the first time in years, listened to the mysterious gigglings and whisperings of their preparations, and attended the few chosen functions at school, church, and friends' homes—all without a racing pulse or frantic mind—I felt that this, the children's way, was best for all of us. Indeed, they had fulfilled the bright promise and made it an old-fashioned Christmas with all the spontaneity and sparkle we had longed for and remembered.

What will your children remember?—X-XIII

Do you remember the morning of Christmas?

TEXT BY ELIZABETH ENRIGHT
PHOTOGRAPHS BY JOHN ENGSTEAD WITH MARVA SHEARER

Do you remember the morning of Christmas? The particular morning when you woke up long before the others? Of course you always woke early on Christmas, but this time it was so early that it was still partly night. You had to turn the light on to see what was in the stocking you had hung in your room. Even when it had all been explored—when everything had been examined, experimented with, tried on, listened to, sniffed at, or tasted—even then it was only beginning to be day.

The house was quieter than you had ever known it to be; it was quiet with waiting. Dead still, waiting. There was a sweet, pervading smell in the air: a forest smell. You knew what that was, and the next thing you did was to get out of bed, creep from your room, along the hall and down the stairs. Creep was the word; and even so, stair-treads that ordinarily never made a sound suddenly developed voices to express displeasure. You weren't supposed to be going down them.

Never mind. The thing was done, and guilt was small compared to joy. The forest smell growing stronger, more exciting, drew you to the shadowed living room, and the first sight of the tree that nobody had seen before you.

It was as tall as a church and gorgeous as a church, and it was very still. Nothing is so still as a Christmas tree before it has been used. Not one ornament turned on its stem, not one needle fell. It was not lighted with its lights but it didn't need to be; it was dazzling enough without them.

That was one time in your life when you were glad that you were the youngest and smallest. Who else would have been able to squeeze down and creep under the low branches of the tree and live there for a while among the presents? You were honorable about the presents, never touching them, though you enjoyed their company. You did not even touch the ones that were marked with the newly-learned arrangement of letters that meant your name.

You breathed and breathed the smell of the tree, and listened to its stillness, and thought about the presents, and nothing had ever been better in your life. After a while you lay down on your back and looked straight up into the branches: a lace and a maze of needles and twigs. You could see the undersides of the Christmas balls, the points of the cornucopias, the angels' feet.

But when you sat up, you forgot how low the boughs were and jarred the tree, so that the whole fragile, complicated thing shivered and tinkled, and one of the baubles, bouncing and toppling down the branches, shattered on the rug with the sound of skim-ice breaking.

It was time to go!

Your heart was beating hard, but you managed not to hurry, since hurrying is noisier than being slow, and crawled out from under the tree most gingerly, tiptoed through the hall, up the malicious stairs, and back to the barricade of bed. Later, when you got up for good, you saw pine needles on the pillow.

You never told anyone about your sojourn under that tree. For some reason it was secret. But very often during your life, especially at Christmas time, you would remember the morning when for a little while the Christmas tree, in all its splendor, had been yours alone.

There was always a stocking for Buff

The dog, Buff, had belonged to the family even longer than you had. He was older than you by quite a lot, and for years he had been larger. He was a calm, benevolent animal who had allowed you to take many liberties in the past. When you were extremely young and ignorant, he had submitted to more than his share of ear-pulling, tail-pulling, and being ridden like a horse. He had permitted you to take naps in his basket, to take bones from his mouth; had even on occasion consented to wear a cowboy hat without damage to his personal dignity. For he was dignified; and in his attitude to you he was protective, kindly, tolerant, an uncle among dogs. It was impossible to imagine him as a puppy.

But among his virtues there was one weakness. When it came to sweets, he was like a drunkard with alcohol.

The first time you ever went on an Easter hunt, carrying a basket made for this purpose, you discovered that Buff had been hunting before you. He had eaten every jelly bean and chocolate egg and candy rabbit in his reach, and afterwards was extravagantly, dedicatedly sick all over the house. From that time on, the Easter Bunny, who apparently had his sources of information, hid his offerings on the mantelpiece and bookshelves and other lofty places, and at Christmas, for the same reason, only the highest cornucopias had candy in them.

When you and the others hung your stockings up on Christmas Eve, there was always one for Buff as well: five stockings for the saint to fill, and a plate of cookies for him to eat to help keep his strength up on his world-wide, night-wide journey.

Every Christmas morning the cookies were gone, and the stockings were filled, and all was as it ought to be.

But finally a Christmas morning came when, looking at the empty plate, you said: "Santa Claus must be an awful neat eater. He hasn't left a single crumb, even. Not one single one!"

You said the words. Then suddenly you turned and looked at Buff, and that was the very first doubt you ever had concerning Santa Claus.

"Dear Santa Claus, I want a shooting gun and a..."

Christmas most of the year was far away; so far away, so slow in coming. And then all at once it came flashing forward, nearer and nearer, faster and faster, and there was hardly time to get all the things done that had to be done. There was haste in the house, and there was mystery; things were hurried out of sight, things were being whispered about. The door-bell rang often, and the postman's bag was so heavy that it bent him sideways.

One of the most important things that had to be done was to get a letter off to the North Pole in plenty of time.

Your sister, an elderly girl in the third grade, knew how to write in loops and chains the way grown-up people write. Your brother knew how to print. He printed so hard he sometimes pushed the pencil through the paper. You knew how to write; at least you hoped you did. With your kind of writing you didn't have to ask people how to spell the words, and you didn't have to make it go in a straight line; you just went up and down and round and round with your pencil and, as you wrote the letter, you sang it at the same time:

"Dear Santa Claus,

I want a shooting gun

And I want a clam-shell scoop

And I want a Indian belt

And I want a jumping-stick

And I want a fireman hat

And I want a really plane, a really little flying plane that I can ride in by myself up above the house, up above the sky . . ."

Your brother said: "Will you please quit that! How can I get my words down right if you keep singing yours?"

Your sister, looking at your letter, said: "That isn't writing; it's just nothing but scribbling."

"It is so too writing!" you told her. "It's the way I write to Santa Claus, and he knows how to read it."

And so he did, as Christmas morning proved. There under the tree, among all the other things, were the shooting gun, the clam-shell scoop, the Indian belt, the jumping-stick, the fireman's hat. The only thing that wasn't there was the little plane for you to fly in. You didn't really mind; you had known all the time, even when you were singing and writing the letter, that of course Santa Claus would never bring you a really plane that you could fly in. It had only been a play wish, not a live one.

It was exactly the right thing because it was # a kitten

You were fond of your dolls. Most of the time you enjoyed them as if they were people, but every now and then, for some reason you could not guess, you looked at them coldly; they were only dolls, and you found yourself bored by their unchanging faces. They closed their eyes or they didn't close their eyes; some of them cried toy tears, some of them bleated a word or two, some of them were able to do a sort of imitation walk, but at the times when you looked at them in this different way, you saw that they were only things made out of plastic and cloth and china. There was nothing real inside of them: no heart, no stomach, nothing. And their eyes were only colored glass.

So one Christmas when they asked you what you wanted most, you said you wanted "something alive." You were not absolutely decided which kind of live thing it was you wanted. A puppy? A baby sister? A rabbit?

But someone, Santa Claus or someone, knew better than you did what you wanted and he brought it, and it was exactly the right thing because it was a kitten.

There had never been anything so soft as that kitten. He was little and gray, with the beginnings of tabby-stripes on him. His eyes were as round and clear as dolls' eyes, but they were alive and they could see. His paws were playful, liking to tap and turn things, and the pads of them were pink, shaped like violets and small as violets, and when you touched them they felt cool. He was by no means all sweetness and softness; his flower paws could put out thorns that drew blood, his pink mouth was armed with tiny daggers, his licking tongue was rough as a nettle. But since you usually treated him as he wished to be treated, his weapons rarely turned against you.

He was lured by anything that moved: a leaf, a shadow, a turning page. His own tail persuaded him to capture it; he was often funny, but never ludicrous, because he had been born graceful. He could do nothing clumsy. Another thing was that he never thought of himself as a kitten, but as a cat; he climbed like a veteran, washed himself with the mature assurance of a cat ten years his senior, and when he crouched and stalked it was only because he was tiny that he was not terrible.

In the morning when he felt friendliest, he liked to climb onto your pillow, tuck his velvet paws under his velvet chest, and let his purr begin. That little rippled sound made you think of the guttering candle in a Jack-o'-lantern.

He was friendly like that in the morning, and when he was tired and went to sleep in your lap; but most of the time he was very good at doing what he wanted to do and going his own way. He was what your mother called "independent."

You loved the kitten with all your heart, but because of him you loved your dolls more dearly, too. They belonged to you, they stayed where you put them, and nobody could call them independent.

The best time to teach your child to sing is between the ages of three and five. A good time to start is this Christmas season

A Time for Singing

● If there is one time of year when we all feel an irresistible urge to burst into song, it is Christmas. The three-to-five-year-old feels this too, but usually he is frustrated by songs too complicated and keys too high or low for him. So we assume he can't sing. But child development research indicates that actually this is the most effective age for him to learn.

Choose the right song for him, pitch it in the right key, and practice with him several times a week—by Christmas your preschooler will be able to join in the family caroling with competence and joy.

The truth of the matter is that the preschooler has a potentially good ear, a delight in rhythm, and unbounded eagerness to learn words and music. He wants to sing and is ready to learn. In the beginning, the toddler "sings" notes just above middle C and he simply goes up and down when he hears the melody go up and down. He doesn't really sing tones, he just slides around. Later on, he begins singing individual tones in a range usually between middle C and the G above. If he practices singing within his own range, a child seems to develop his own kind of "perfect pitch." That is, he will recognize a song by the key it is in as much as by its melody. This is probably because the child's vocal range is so limited at this stage in his muscular development that each tone he is able to sing feels very different to him from the one or two others in his range. Untrammeled by traditions, he can learn an archaic mode as easily as the major scale. You can teach him a "sophisticated" folk carol as easily as "Mary Had a Little Lamb." That is, if you can sing it yourself or have a record of it in the right key for him.

If there isn't a regular singing time in your family now, here is a way to start. After supper is a good opportunity to sing, and it begins the calming down process from the excitement of day to the peace of sleep. Those of us who were brought up with singing as one of the "things we do in our house" remember these as deeply happy times, worthy of revival.

A few simple techniques for teaching preschoolers have been successfully tested at the Child Development Laboratory of the University of Illinois, where a study has been made of how and when children learn to sing. Robert Smith, director of the project, and his researchers have found that among normal children there is no such thing as a tone-deaf child. Of course, very young children must learn to distinguish tones and then train their muscles to sing what they hear, but these are techniques like walking and talking. A child will learn, given the opportunity and the practice.

Several points should be considered in choosing a Christmas song for your young singer. It should have phrase repetition so that the song won't have too many new words. Hopefully it will repeat melodic refrains. No wonder "Jingle Bells" is such a favorite. "We Wish You a Merry Christmas" is another good song for the preschooler. Both songs have repeated refrains, small vocabularies, and melodies that are simple. Choose a song with a small (Please turn to page 177)

THE CHILDREN

FOR CHRISTMAS

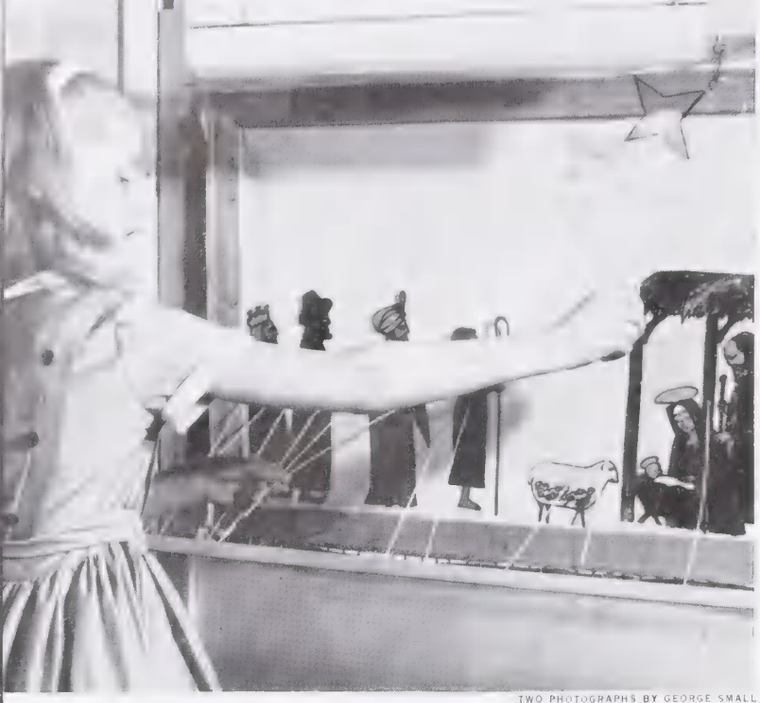
● Add a new kind of fun to your family Christmas celebration with shadow theatre. An ancient tradition in the Far East, shadow play will soon become part of your own Christmas or Hanukkah tradition. With a little help from you and a budget of about fifteen dollars, children as young as eight or nine can present shadow plays in stained-glass window colors.

Shadow theatre is, most simply, a puppet show in which flat figures are moved between a strong source of light and a translucent screen. Because of its two-dimensionality and the rigidity of its jointed puppets, shadow theatre is inherently highly stylized. Its style, simplicity, and vivid contrasts make it particularly appealing to children.

Plays can have dialogue, be narrated, or be pantomime with musical "interludes" or accompaniment—the sound coming from the puppetmeisters backstage or from phonograph records.



Old as mankind itself, shadow play touches an elemental chord deep in our nature. Its art dates to ancient Chinese and Javanese rituals, but while the traditions are old, new techniques of acetate, see-through (Please turn the page)

PHOTOGRAPHS BY GEORGE SMALL

We chose The Christmas Story to illustrate shadow play. Its action is simple, the tableaux uncomplicated, and the essential characters, few, although the ambitious child can add ox and ass, flocks, innkeeper's wife, angels, and shepherds to his basic cast of the Christ Child, Mary, Joseph, their donkey, the angel Gabriel, Herod the King, innkeeper, three Magi, shepherds, sheep, star.

You can set up the stage in a doorway so that the room beyond is "backstage," a place for scenery, puppets, and theatrical clutter. The three-panel beaver-board screen stands 5½ feet high. Its stage area is 18 inches high by 24 inches wide and is surrounded by a proscenium painted in bright colors. The screen is easily set up and taken down.

TWO PHOTOGRAPHS BY GEORGE SMALL

DRAWING BY ALICE UCHIYAMA

The three-panel stage (see page 186 for how to build) is framed backstage with wood strips for extra sturdiness. Leftover beaverboard makes a roof to shield the 15-watt fluorescent tube, hanging by heavy wire from a 6-foot-long pole attached at the extreme edges of the outside panel. The light hangs just above the puppeteer's head. Another pole at the bottom of the screen, also attached to the ends of the far panels, has tacks spaced along its length as props for the puppet control sticks when figures are at rest on stage. The bottom edge of the screen is at the child's elbow height. The beaverboard stage folds for storage between performances (photo, right).

paints, and fluorescent light make unnecessary the traditional materials of donkey skin, oiled paper, and tin.

House Beautiful, with the help of painter Margo Hoff and poet Kappo Phelan of the Shadowlight Theatre, New York, has developed plans to give you and the children a start. But once the shadow theatre buff has played with these ideas, he will be off on his own, both technically and dramatically. The theatrical possibilities are almost limitless, depending on the bounds of fantasy and the number of hands available. You can make underwater scenes with rising and falling waterlines, seaweed and jointed fish. Outer space with stars, saucers, and satellites can be created. Let the children originate a Noah's ark of never-seen-before animals. Abstract designs, shapes, patterns of light, dark, color, fuzziness, and sharpness are possible effects.

What to Present?

The first step is to choose the material to be presented. In making up a "repertory" for the beginner, be guided by these requirements: simple plot and action, few characters on stage at any one time, characters visually strong in outline. Examples of figures that have bold, dramatic shapes are giants, Babe the Blue Ox, Jack's beanstalk, and the wooden shoe of Wynken, Blynken, and Nod.

Any play or poem or story or song where the action is simple and the characters dramatic in outline is good material for shadow theatre. Ballads, Christmas carols, nursery rhymes, fables, and stories are good sources for plays. (See list at end of article for more suggestions.)

After choosing the play it should be organized into scenes. Writing out a "scenario" helps solve problems before they arise.

If you choose the Christmas story from the Bible, your Christmas shadow play can have dialogue, or you can narrate it with passages from the Bible. Your play could be a pantomime with Christmas carols appropriate to the action as accompaniment and between-the-scenes music.

The Stage

You can build a simple stage out of one sheet (4′ x 8′) of beaverboard (about $2.50 at a lumber yard), cut according to the plan on page 186 and framed with 1″ x 2″ wood strips. It is essentially a three-panel screen that can be folded away when not in use.

Even more simple is a sheet (Please turn to page 186)

Mr. Moore's hands, he said, "Do two things: Make them very beautiful according to your own view, and don't try and sell anything." This radical order has paid off so well that other shops along the Avenue are quietly following suit. The "pay-off" is reputation for taste, for design, for style, for personality, for an individual point of view: The Bonwit "look," the Tiffany "cachet."

Gene Moore's art is direct and needs no translation. His ingredients apply to every area of living. The fact that we see it in Bonwit and Tiffany windows should not obscure its transposability to our own kitchens, living rooms, dining-room table settings and our gardens. He makes much of little.

His most striking technique is contrast—the contrast of materials and values, colors and shapes—to enhance the essence of the thing. The heavy block and tackle that ludicrously holds up a fragile long-stemmed wine glass exaggerates the fragility to such a degree that we are forced to pay tribute to the trembling exquisiteness. What would happen at home if we set a table with our most fragile pieces on burlap place mats? It might be fun. It might be breath-taking. Moore delights in the juxtaposition of extremes—a toy derrick scooping jewels out of dirt, stove pipes angling through and around the latest Paris creations, mammoth knots of rope looping together diamond pins and brooches.

Economy is always and everywhere apparent—a case of acute contrast in itself, when one considers that Tiffany's and Bonwit's hardly need to limit themselves to string and tissue paper. Velvet and brocade are available. But with no restrictions, Gene Moore continues to choose tissue paper and string. His economy goes further. In his Tiffany windows, each only 36″ by 48″ by 22″, he says only one thing. Only one diamond is shown. One effect is strived for, but so fresh is it that the overtones reverberate into double and triple takes.

Here is another leaf we can take from his book. Perhaps after all, it isn't necessary to fill up the garden with many varieties of flower, bush and even tree. Why not try for a single effect, making the one tree that is there the focus, letting every other thing have a relation to and about it.

Gene Moore's play with perspective is remarkable. He can, by layering screens or distorting the expected, make his windows seem to go back to infinity. Strip lighting, a theatrical trick, has come to be a Moore trade-mark. By shining light up the back wall from a fluorescent tube below and out of sight, the sense of depth is vastly increased. He says the effectiveness of his work depends on lighting and the focus it gives his arrangements.

Again, we can apply Moore's techniques to our own living. For example, it might be interesting to light the Christmas tree from one low-lying source this year. The light shining behind the branches will silhouette the tree against a glowing wall and make the ornaments glint in a different way.

Moore's own criteria for good arrangements are imagination and humor. If those who look laugh, he is pleased. A recent favorite display of his started with 20 or 30 balls of colored string that an assistant brought back from Italy. Moore piled the balls of string in bowls, dangled silver flatware with it, let strings of diamonds, sapphires, and emeralds emerge from white, blue, and green balls, and even staged a race of turtle brooches, the trail of each traced by a string matching the color of the turtle's jeweled shell. Each window had a different and new relationship between string and jewel, enhancing the pleasure in the jewelry and leaving one with the haunting feeling that string had never really been seen before Gene Moore began playing with it. He revealed the very essence of string. But don't look too hard for deep meanings (which aren't there), says Moore, or you'll miss the fun.

TYPICAL Moore creations are the Christmas balls he designed for HOUSE BEAUTIFUL made of bright-headed pins, shown on pages 115 and 120 of this issue. (He originally played with pins in a series of Tiffany windows.) Who would have thought pins could produce such airiness?

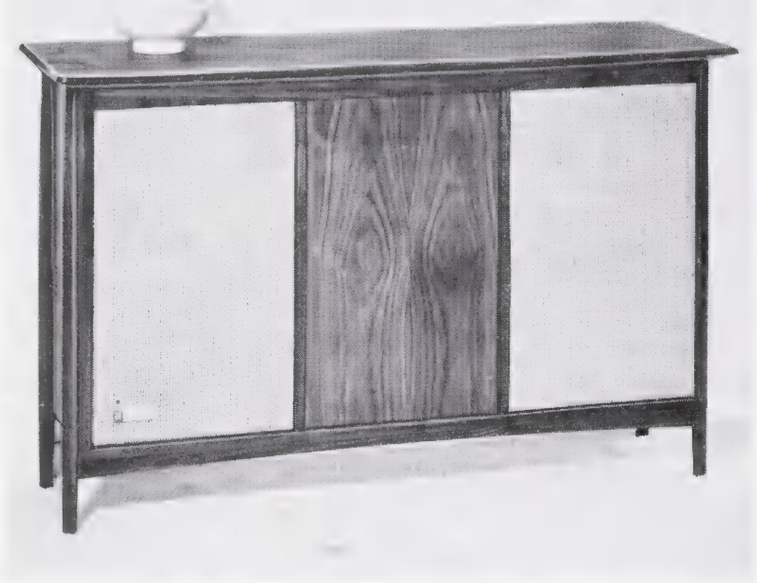
Moore never simply accepts the old familiar shapes of things around him. Instead he finds new and interesting lines, angles, curves, and facets so that we, too, begin to see the world freshly as if for the first time. The materials he likes to play with are either very earthy or very elegant. His list of favorites includes: old burlap bags, iron girders, wind, wire, fire, bark of trees, bows and arrows, sheet music, moss, split rail fences, rubber bands, stuffed birds, road maps, sea shells, the alphabet, shadows, yarn, cellos, camera film, ostrich feathers, dirt, moving water, china silk, vegetables, needles, rocks, hay, the tops of tin cans cut by a hand opener, light bulbs, pencils, and the insides of clocks.

His influence is felt up and down the Avenue, by Bonwit Teller branch stores across the country and by alert store owners who come to New York to see what that city is up to. Thus, Gene Moore affects store windows and, if we will extrapolate, the way of life of us all.

The history of window display before Gene Moore came along was mostly a sober—and dull—story. Store windows were simply filled to bursting with merchandise, one section vying with another to catch the attention of the passerby.

But by the time World War II came along, the effects of the surrealist art movement and especially its captain, Salvador Dali, had led window display from hodgepodge to minor art form. The vigorous originality of Dali opened up a new world of space, things, color, and perspective. This was the great period of window display art. Since contemporary art movements exert the major influence on display, surrealism was rich in impact.

TODAY Gene Moore's inspiration comes from museums, galleries of contemporary and primitive art, and books. A voracious reader, especially in the field of art history and travel, Gene Moore is sharply critical of "modern art" movements and current literature. He says Di Lampedusa's The Leopard is "the first good book since Hadrian's Memoirs," and he finds present art trends "sadly uninspiring." Most of it is cold, has no heart, no meaning and is without relation to real people, he says. A notable exception, he feels, is the work of Jonah Kinigstein, whose paintings have appeared in Bonwit windows and then have been sold out of them as successfully as the merchandise.



"People in creative work are too busy 'creating' for each other," he says, "instead of communicating important ideas to their true audience—the real world outside the narrow, inbred clique of their craft. Unable to express deep feeling, they want only to be known to one another for their 'originality.' They are not interested in doing anything about the sterility of contemporary artiness. They are too interested in cocktail parties, in being chic, and talking to each other. They talk but there's not much in their heads."

What has happened to standards, he laments, quoting John Crosby with unhappy relish: "The decline in competence, the decline in standards of performance seem to touch every line of American endeavor. There is no pride anywhere in doing things well. Just get it done, get paid, and leave town before the suckers catch on."

Some of the sting is drawn from these remarks by the behavior of the gloomy critics themselves. Gene Moore is a perfectionist, wonderfully creative, infinitely patient, willing to work all night to see that his windows are "right." Artists are eager to work for him. His thirteen staff members are devoted to him. In the temperamental world of merchandising and art, he is famous for his pleasant even temper and his efficient, economical office administration. remaining circle and staple through each bottom loop where it touches the base (Step Five). Glue smaller cardboard circle to back of base to stiffen. Hang on a dyed leftover strip.

Round Christmas Ball

To make Christmas Ball, use a larger plate (15") and make 12 circles. Add holes for decoration around each circle by folding again and again and snipping with scissors.

Dye the entire circle. You may have to reheat the dye from time to time. Let dry or dry by ironing.

Assemble two groups of six-circle units, but don't add bases. Instead run carpet thread through all six tips of each, stitch and let end of thread dangle. Attach half circles to each other with staples. Pull both thread ends through the top of one unit to make a hanger. The ball will hang more evenly if you attach a stick of lollypop dimensions in the top between opposite loops.

Take left-over scraps from Christmas Ball (cut in half those that have 4 points) dye completely, or dip just points. Let dry or iron dry.

• Following are the instructions and materials needed for making a leaf-embedded plaque like the one shown in photograph above.

Materials: Besides dried leaf specimens you'll need: a 5-pound bag of plaster of Paris, liquid green soap, salad oil, pan for mold (we used a shallow jelly roll pan), mixing bowl and cup, thin knife, and piece of wire window screen or small mesh wire, cut to fit the pan.

Press and dry leaves between blotters. (Botanical leaf press above is equipped with blotters for drying, tightly buckled straps for pressing.) Choose specimens for the kind of arrangement you like. Use liquid soap to coat inside of pan to the very edges, let dry, then coat with salad oil. Lightly oil only face of leaves, and place face down in pan the way you want them to appear in plaque.

As plaster of Paris sets quickly, it is better to mix small batches of it, one at a time, than to prepare one big batch. To mix, start with a quart of water in a mixing bowl and sprinkle plaster of Paris into the water—never the other way around. When the powder has absorbed water without dry peaks appearing, stir to the consistency of a thin custard. Using dipper, start pouring mixture carefully over leaves. Take care not to push leaves out of place after they are covered. Fill pan about one-half inch deep.

Next, press into plaster the piece of window screen or chicken wire. This serves as reinforcement. If you intend to hang your plaque, now is the time to insert a loop of wire. Add about one-fourth inch more plaster to pan for embedding loop, and level off.

After use, clean mixing bowl at once. Since crumbs can plug up plumbing, never throw any down the drain. Allow the plaque to harden for several hours or overnight. Invert pan and gently remove plaque. Some plaster may have blurred the clear edges of the leaves. This can be carefully chipped off with a thin knife blade, and smoothed with fine sandpaper.

How to order House Beautiful's Christmas Decorations

Pinbursts (page 120) are hanging spherical baubles you make yourself, studding 1" foil-covered cork balls with variously sized pins. Balls each have a screweye for hanging. Pinbursts in five different versions, packaged and priced separately as follows:

Gem Pinburst: 100 crystal-headed pins; 144 round-head 2½" pearl pins; 54 faceted plastic gem-headed 3" pins, 18 each of ruby, sapphire, emerald; 54 gem-headed 4" pins, 18 of each color. Makes three 8" spheres. $13.50.

Golden Pinburst: 100 gold round-head 1" pins; 288 pear-shaped 2" pins. Makes five 4" spheres. $6.

Dewdrop Pinburst: 100 round-headed crystal 1" pins; 72 dewdrop-shape glass 3" pins, in assorted ruby, sapphire, emerald colors; 72 dewdrop-shape glass 4" pins in same colors. Makes three 8" spheres. $10.

Pearl Pinburst: 100 round-head crystal 1" pins; 144 round-head pearl 2½" pins; 144 pear-shape pearl 3" pins. Makes three 6" spheres. $6.

Christmas Card Pin-Up Panel (page 117) is a 29" x 60" hanging of supple felt to which cards are easily pinned. Patterned with a reindeer head, appliquéd in felt. Round gilded wood dowels top and bottom. Gilt hanging cord. Pink or chartreuse. $8.

Azure Angel (page 118), copied from Botticelli, a 24"-long, blue-eyed, brown-haired angel, with hand-painted face, hands and feet of unbreakable molded latex. Body is wire and wood armature. Dress is hand-draped blue nylon chiffon, scattered with silver-star sequins, girdled with a silver gilt cord, over acetate taffeta underskirt. Packed separately, to attach to the body, are 14" wide, double-faced gold-foil cardboard wings, a halo of silver-foil stars, and the makings of a garland of silver-foil stars. $25.

Shower of Gold Drapery (pages 118, 122) is a luxurious curtain, 3' wide, 7½' long, of slim, supple, gold metallized vinyl plastic strands. Flame-proof. With a stitched-on cotton-tape top. $9.

Swag and Jabot Forms (pages 118, 119) are a revolutionary way to make short sprigs of greens assume the dimension of garlands. They are flat, firm, steel-wire frames, shaped like swags and jabots, covered in wire mesh into which greens are inserted. Swags are 24" long, 6" at deepest. Jabots are swallowtail shape, 14" long, 6" at widest. All pieces welded with ring-eyes for joining and hanging. Green finish. Set of 3 Swags and 2 Jabots, $15.

Noel Letters (page 123), flat, wire-mesh-covered steel wire forms, shaped from the elegant letters in a book of old type, to be filled in with sprigs of green and hung on a wall. Finished in green, each letter is 12" high. Available only in N, O, E, and L. Set of these 4 letters, $16.

Mirror Wreath Frame (page 124) is a 12"-diameter bull's-eye mirror of silverized plastic, encircled by a flat, 6"-wide steel wire frame, covered with metal mesh for holding sprigs of green in wreath form. Over-all diameter, 24". Green finish. $12.

Ring Cone (page 125), 10 reinforced gilded steel wire rings, varying in diameter from 3½" to 24½", which slip over a metal rod to form a tree-like frame for greens or ornaments. Each ring with an adjustable screw for fastening to rod. Rod comes in two parts, to be screwed together, then into a metal socket on a gilded wood base. 34" high. $29.

Christmas Box Blocks (pages 122, 175), 6" cubes for building up decorative constructions or to use as gift boxes, come as flat pieces of die-cut, foil-covered cardboard, ready to be folded into block shape. Silk-screen-printed in five colors, with wreath, star, Santa Claus, snowflake, bird, Christmas tree. Set of 5, $9.

Holly Angel (pages 123, 125) is a hanging scroll of heavy white paper, screen-printed in black with the outline of an angel, color to be filled in by owner. With gilded wood dowels top and bottom and gilt hanging cord. 26" x 60". $5.

Golden Filigree Roundels (pages 116, 122) are double-faced gilt-foil paper cut-outs, in a lacy pattern, which pull out to become balls. 12½" in diameter. Packed flat. 3 for $5.

Golden Filigree Fan (pages 122, 174) is a double-faced gilt-foil paper cut-out, accordion-pleated, which opens into a lacy round, 39" in diameter. $8.

Golden Tiles (pages 116, 117, 118, 121), are 12" flat squares of gilt-foil cardboard, screen-printed with a star and leaf pattern in two ways—dull gold on bright gold, and bright on dull. In sets of 8 (four in each printed version), $5.

Mary Had a Baby

The preschooler will enjoy the folk carol Mary Had a Baby. Repetition of the first phrase means the child is not faced with a large and changing collection of words. The range is limited and even the youngest child who may not be able to grasp the entire song will relish joining in on "Yes, Lord."

range and pitch it in a key that places most of the melody between middle C and the G above.

When you are teaching your preschooler a song, always repeat it in the same key, the one that fits his range. If you sing the song in one key while washing dishes and in another while getting a sleepy-head ready for bed, you will not produce a tuneful young singer by Christmas.

And then, practice. If you sing with your child, or play records with him for ten or fifteen minutes a few times a week, in three weeks or so he should be able to join in on several songs.

A mother or father with some musical training can do a great deal in the month before Christmas. Choose only a few songs and always play and sing them in the same key. Since the young child often attempts to sing only one phrase while he listens to a song, encourage this at first. Suggest he sing "Yes, Lord." (Mary Had a Baby) and "A Happy New Year" (We Wish You a Merry Christmas) or the repeated phrase "Jingle Bells." With repetition the whole song will then be learned easily.

Songs and Collections

Mary Had a Baby can be found in "American Folk Songs for Children," edited by Ruth Crawford Seeger, published by Doubleday.

"Songs to Grow On" and "More Songs to Grow On" by Beatrice Landeck (Marks-Sloane) are outstanding song books for young children with good Christmas carol collections. Band of Angels ("Songs to Grow On") is an ideal Christmas counting song in a perfect range. I Saw Three Ships ("Songs to Grow On") has good word and melody repetition, but the key should be changed to G major. Oh, Christmas Tree is another good song for the very young.

We Wish You a Merry Christmas is in "More Songs to Grow On." This collection also includes another appropriate song, The Carol of the Beasts. Change the key down to D major and start on D. The words of this carol are a little complex for the very youngest singer but the total note range is ideal.

"The Fireside Book of Folk Songs" (Simon and Schuster) is an excellent family collection of songs. It has ballads, hymns, spirituals, cowboy songs, folk songs, and Christmas carols. While most of the carols are not completely suitable to the youngest singer, a large number have phrases that the child can sing. The Twelve Days of Christmas is too complicated, but the preschooler can join in on the first phrase of each day. Deck the Halls has a fa-la-la refrain in the proper range that is fun to sing.

Records

If you are unable to read musical notation, if your voice is very low or very high, or if your pitch is uncertain, use recordings.

The best records are Alan Mills, "More Songs to Grow On" (Folkways FC7009), which includes We Wish You a Merry Christmas and Carol of the Beasts, and "Christmas Songs from Many Lands" (Folkways FC 7750). These records are especially good. Mr. Mills sings clearly with the accompaniment of a guitar. Usually he chooses keys that are appropriate to the young child.

Tom Glazer's "Twelve Days of Christmas" (Young People's Records, YPR-225, from Educational Record Sales, 153 Chambers Street, New York 7, New York) is an excellent 78 rpm disc.

If you are not confident enough of your own abilities, by all means use records, but choose them carefully. See that the recorded songs are in the ranges already mentioned. While choral recordings with orchestra and bells may be lovely, the performance is usually too complex to encourage your youngsters to join in. Choose a record where one voice is dominant and the accompaniment uncluttered.

Records will slow down your child's learning to sing for he may not be used to listening to music. He may be shy about joining in, so you should sing along to encourage his response. Records will have to be repeated more often than a "live" song because the performance is usually faster than practicing would be, and your child will need more time to feel secure. So don't give up after the first attempt. Repeat the record, sing too, and soon he will want to sing along.

If you begin now, spending a little time each day or so, your three-, four-, or five-year-old will be ready to sing several songs by Christmas. His pleasure at being able to participate will be shared by the whole family. And, say the experts, children who learn to sing at this age may well have a lasting musical advantage over those who must wait for kindergarten to learn.

series of rhythmic movements, which, like those of a dance, are all related and interdependent. The spinning wet clay must be kept dead true to the center of the wheel while it is being hollowed and drawn up, expanded and contracted into a living embodiment of the potter's intention. The preconceived shape will include the mark of each part of the process of throwing, the ribs left by the fingers, the upward thrust of the cylinder from the wheel-head to the major curve of the belly, the fullness or leanness of that curve, the pause and turn on the shoulder, often accentuated with ridge or collar, where convex movement changes to concave, the neck tapering to the lip with a concluding accent and conciseness of finish.

Many of the noblest and most spontaneous pots are complete at this point, but others, especially such as are to have a foot-ring or bevelled lip, need to be pared on the wheel when half dry. This cutting off of shavings gives a different and sharper quality of finish; the difference between modelling and carving; and the two surfaces must be brought into harmony with one another.

The foot, upon which the pot stands, should be reasonably wide for stability. But over and beyond that, its angles and proportion should relate to the lip, to which the eye instinctively leaps. The cutting of the foot does not end with the profile; the inside of the ring is nearly always hollowed out in the East. Stoneware pots are seldom glazed over the bottom, and the exposed clay tells how thoroughly the potter felt the contrast between the profile with its necessary concluding foot and the perfect curve of the pot through it.

There are many types of foot-cutting well understood by Oriental potters and often associated with certain kinds of vessel or with certain localities, in which refinement has been worked out by a long process of trial and error into a fixed tradition.

It is interesting to see an Oriental pick up a pot for examination, and presently carefully turn it over to look at the clay and the form and cutting of the foot. He inspects it as carefully as a banker a doubtful signature—in fact, he is looking for the bona fides of the author. There in the most naked but hidden part of the work he expects to come into closest touch with the character and perception of its maker. He looks to see how far and how well the pot has been dipped, in what relation the texture and color of the clay stand to the glaze, whether the foot has the right width, depth, angle, undercut, bevels and general feeling to carry and complete the form above it. Nothing can be concealed there, and much of his final pleasure lies in the satisfaction of knowing that this last examination and scrutiny has been passed with honor.

Artists of many races have believed that there are fundamental laws of proportion and composition, and I too believe it. What we call laws are no more than generalizations founded on our sense experience, but when the attempt is made to reduce such generalizations to mathematical formulae, it is difficult to believe that they can be applied in practice without robbing the craftsman's work of its vitality. No formula, however accurate, can take the place of direct perception.

1. The ends of lines are important; the middles take care of themselves.

2. Lines are forces, and the points at which they change or cross are significant and call for emphasis.

3. Vertical lines are of growth, horizontal lines are of rest, diagonal lines are of change.

4. Straight line and curve, square and circle, cube and sphere are the potter's polarities, which he works into a rhythm of form under one clear concept.

6. A small foot for grace, a broad one for stability.

7. Enduring forms are full of quiet assurance. Overstatement is worse than understatement.

8. Technique is a means to an end. It is no end in itself. If the end is achieved, and a fine pot comes out of the kiln, let us not be hypercritical about fortuitous blemishes. Some of the most beautiful pots in the world are full of technical imperfections. The accidentals of potting have to be considered consciously as such.

Round the question of accidentals and incidentals in pottery making revolve some of the chief difficulties we encounter in reaching a new idea of standard. After the symmetries and microscopic precision of mass production these two words seem such mouthfuls to swallow. But if T'ang or Sung pottery is accepted as the highest achievement in ceramics they will have to be swallowed. Eastern and Western thought alike regard man and his work as very inadequate and variable affairs, and an Oriental art lover eyes any very perfect piece of technique with the suspicion that it contains little depth of meaning.

In all the greatest pottery of the world the natural limitations of both the material and the maker are accepted without question. In China the clays are often coarse and usually exposed, the glazes are thick, and crackled, and run, and occasionally skip, the brushwork is vigorous and calligraphic, not realistic and "finished", the throwing and molding are frank, and accidental kiln effects are frequent.

A more recent dictum occasionally heard is to the effect that where irregularities occur the potter "has not realized his intentions." It should not be forgotten, however, that within the potter's intentions are included all sorts of variations depending on the nature and manner of use of his materials and ranging from the fortuitous and often highly effective skipping of a glaze to wide differences in its color and quality, and that so long as they do not involve structural weaknesses or by their eccentricity detract from the beauty of the pot, they are acceptable to him. It is the uniformity of perfection that kills. On the other hand, if a pot is spoiled by blistering or cracking, it is spoiled, and there is no doubt

PHOTOGRAPH BY EZRA STOLLER

The ceramic lover finds many ways to use his treasures. If he has collected wisely, he will own many shapes for many purposes. But even when they are not in use, the interplay of their shapes permits making interesting compositions—in bookshelves and on horizontal surfaces.

During the long Victorian period "perfect finish" came to mean two things, either great realistic detail and meticulous surface finish, or a concealing of the means by which the end had been achieved. Even so great a rebel as Whistler proclaimed the latter idea in print if not in paint. An unprejudiced survey of pre-industrial pottery, especially Far Eastern, must lead to the conclusion either that its makers were first class bunglers or that we have got our values upside down.

But at the same time, if feeling in this matter is indeed changing, in spite of the emphasis on technical precision necessitated by mechanically made products, nevertheless, the way in which craftsmen rightly make use of "accidentals" and "incidentals" has inevitably been lost sight of. Technique has become so complex and so hidden away from common sight that we no longer know good clay, good throwing, turning or brushwork, or good firing when we see them. Nor are we constantly reminded through doing things by hand, how from each part of a craftsman's job of any real interest variations emerge, which must be dealt with on the spur of the moment. The closest analogy is that of the kitchen, with which a pottery has so much in common. Many of the problems touched on in this chapter will appear more familiar if translated into terms of good home cooking, for despite individual preferences we all know something from experience about good and bad food. But today the average man or woman judges pots by a Victorian trade standard. And although a few people turn to books, museums and collectors for enlightenment, there are few good books, save technical, and the acquisitive impulse of the collector is responsible for many false values. Rarity is no guarantee of beauty, and the cunning search for it is only a hindrance to appreciation of beauty as normality.

A NEW DO-EVERYTHING DECORATION: GOLDEN FEATHER FRINGE

DRAWING BY GRAMBS MILLER

Glorified version of paper chains all children make at Christmastime is done with six-inch strips of fringe stapled into rings. For the best effect, be systematic in using the open ends of the fringe: always make these face the same way in the alternate links.

wave and twinkle in the gentlest breeze, this film is surprisingly tough because of its Mylar base. The roll of Feather Fringe is 3¼" wide, in 12- or 25-yard lengths, and all but a ¼" of its width is slit into curved golden fingers that spray out as film is wound or twisted.

We show four different uses of it on pages 136-137 and two more here, but there is really no limit to the things it will do, so flexible is it. Decorations can be made as self-contained units to be placed in position (those on pages 136-137 were made this way). Or the film can be applied directly to walls, moldings, doors, mantels, or what-have-you. In some cases it needs the added strength of cardboard or other backing materials. The only tools you'll need to work with it are cellophane tape, a small stapler, safety pins, and scissors.

PHOTOGRAPH BY WESLEY BALZ

Use fringe to improvise accessories. Candle holders, made-over old-fashioned glasses, use taped-on fringe in various ways. It can curl in or out, be used in one or several layers. For fat puff at base of the candle at right, run tape across fringed ends and bend this back to meet the uncut edge.

DUXBURY CHAIRS

#1993-5 Arm
#1993-1 Side

The practicality of Colonial craftsmen is reflected in every line of these Duxbury chairs, making them as popular today as in the past. Smart homemakers choose them for dining, or for occasional chairs.

#2089-3

All the gracious charm of the original Windsor design has been retained for your everyday enjoyment. For extra comfort, the seat and back have been slightly modified without altering the simple classic beauty.

ARROW-BACK SETTEE
#1-9D

A Colonial favorite reproduced with all the care of a bygone era . . . the arrow-like spindles typical of its authenticity in every detail. As in the originals, simple gold stenciling decorates the black finish.

#2036-5

An exact replica of an early Windsor. From the curved archer's bow back and seven supporting spindles to the vase-and-ring turned legs, it has been copied faithfully to bring Colonial elegance to your home.

PILGRIMAGE TO SPRING

of the year—London, Oxford, Stratford-on-Avon, the Cathedral towns of Chester and Lincoln, Cambridge.

Specifically, here are the experts' recommendations for savoring the English spring at its best. By all means make the trip at your leisure if you can, but if you're timeharried, you can cover this ground in 14 days and still have three days to sample the London spring.

Here, as a starter, visit London's leisurely, lovely parks—St. James's, Green Park, Regent's Park, Hyde Park, and Kensington Gardens—flowering on a sunny day with prams and nannies and a kindergarten of some of the world's most beguiling toddlers. For those lilacs, take the short trip to the Royal Botanic Gardens at Kew. And, in the nostalgic, appropriate mood of the season, go to the home of Keats in Hampstead Heath, where he heard the voice of the nightingale. This can be your initiation in the London Tubes, for the house is near the Hampstead Heath station.

On the fourth day start your swing into the hedgerows and the blossoming countryside, driving through Staines, stopping at Hampton Court, Windsor Castle (lunch at The Grapes Tavern here) and Frogmore Gardens. End the day at Oxford. Bed down at The Mitre, a 13th-century inn, or The Randolph. If you're there on May Day morning, arise betimes to hear the traditional dawn greeting to spring by the choir boys on Magdalen College tower.

Next stop is Stratford-on-Avon, and if your schedule gets you there on April 23, you'll be in on festivities celebrating the birthday of the greatest poet of all. There are the Shakespeare memorabilia to be seen, Ann Hathaway's cottage, and a performance at the Memorial Theater. The Welcombe is an engaging hotel.

Now head through the white-blossoming Vale of Evesham for Bibury in Gloucester, a paradise of birdsong, heaven for bird-watchers. On the subject of birds British understatement collapses, for England is the springtime nesting place for 120 million birds. Farther on in Slimbridge is another ornithological thrill, the huge bird sanctuary called The Severn Wild Fowl Trust. Spend the night at Symond's Yat in the Wye Valley, at the Royal Hotel.

From here, on to the cathedral-town of Chester, a goal in itself for the medieval-minded. Stop en route in Shrewsbury for lunch at The Lion. Hotels in Chester are The Blossoms and Grosvenor.

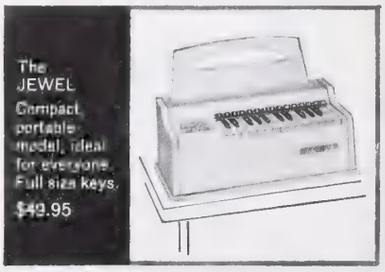
From Chester, a 40-mile side trip through green valleys and wild flowers takes you into Wales and to Lord Aberconway's Bodnant Hall and its 50-acre terraced gardens.

From Chester the trip into the Lake District lies before you, and you'll be an insensitive one indeed if this solacing country of silvery waters and misty green hillsides doesn't make Wordsworth and the poems you recited as a child take on a vitality they never had before. This was Wordsworth's world of "awareness" where he drew personal refreshment and universal meaning from the natural beauty around him—the tiny celandine that carpets this land in Spring, the green fields sleeping in the sun, the wild daffodils that cover the hills and rim the lakes.

Windermere is suggested as your first stopping place. Good hotels are the Langdale Chase and the Old England.

On a hillside near Rydal Mount the famous daffodils still burgeon. En route to Keswick, still in the Lake District, you can stop by at Grasmere and visit Dove Cottage, where the poet lived. From Keswick any true Wordsworthian would make a side excursion to Cockermouth and the house where he was born.

This region is the kind of place that gives us a yen to get out and walk. The more energetic are urged to hire a bicycle and take to the flat roads that circle Derwentwater—"water" meaning "lake."



Needless to say, a reperusal of Wordsworth would stand you in good stead as orientation here. But even if you never read a line of poetry in your life, you can enjoy the whole area as a sojourn in serenity.

From Keswick, start back towards London, via Penrith to the resort town of Harrogate, which makes a flowery to-do over spring. Hotels here are the Cairn Hydro or the Granby.

Next lap is to the cathedral town of Lincoln, where you can put up at a hotel with the Pickwickian name of The White Hart.

Carry on from Lincoln to Spalding, a trip easily managed in a day, providing you strongly resist the temptation to stop off at the May fairs in progress in the towns en route. Here are where the "maids come forth, sprig-muslin drest," May queens are crowned, maypoles are danced around, and merry old England makes merry indeed. Boston, in Lincolnshire, has already set its Fair dates—May 3 to 10. Spalding, fortuitously situated in a tulip-growing area, celebrates tulip time with parades and tours to the flowering farms from April 21 to May 13.

After Spalding and tulips come Cambridge and wisteria and the gardens along the banks of the River Cam. Stay the night here and next morning head for London.

A final and fitting fillip to this vernal circling of England would be a stop at Hatfield to see not only the house where Elizabeth I once lived, but the flower borders she personally tended and the very hat and gloves she wore.

Back in London, if you get there by May 17-19, you can see the season out in a blaze of glory at the famous Chelsea Flower Show.

This suggested springtime route covers about 840 driving miles. Driving yourself in England, a small 4-passenger car rents at about $46 weekly; a small 6-passenger car, at about $72. You pay for all gasoline and oil.

Rented by the day, a small 4-passenger car is about $6 a day, plus 2¼ cents per mile after the first 80 miles; a small 6-passenger car is about $6.50 per day, plus 5½ cents per mile after the first 35 miles. You pay for all gasoline and oil.

Chauffeur-driven, a 6-passenger car rents at about $17 a day, plus 14 cents a mile after the first 50 miles, gasoline and oil included. You pay for the chauffeur's board and lodging, approximately $4.20 a day.

You could also cover this ground by train, bus, and local car hire.

The British Travel Association does not make reservations or transportation arrangements.

These essentials are up to you and your travel agent, and do come to grips with them soon, because although you may wander lonely as a cloud through springtime England, hotel accommodations in London are another story, hard to get at any season of the year.

To help you plan this visit, or any visit to England, the BTA is well equipped to give you advice, maps, and literature. Gardens in Britain, one of the particularly handsome and informative books among many, covers in 24 colorful pages the major gardens and botanic displays that are perennial lures for traveling gardeners. It's pertinent background material for a springtime trip, so this month it is especially offered to the first 500 HOUSE BEAUTIFUL readers who write for it. For this and any further information address: British Travel Association, 680 Fifth Ave., New York.

Lovely is the Lee Country

Apparently the BTA's research departments have thoughtfully observed that the U. S. Civil War or War Between the States, depending upon one's geographical location, engages the whole world's imagination as no other historical event ever seems to have done. Not only in the U. S. is the war constantly being re-fought by armchair strategists but Arabs, Danes, Frenchmen, Japanese, South Americans, Britons—you name the world—all are included in the astounding army of buffs fascinated by the period.

Nineteen hundred and sixty one is the centennial of the struggle, which will be commemorated here at home by both North and South. But the British point out that the lovely Lee country in their own Shropshire played an important part in the American war since it was the original homeland of the Lee family. They've mapped a suggested 7-day tour which takes you to Coton Hall, the ancestral homestead now owned by Mr. and Mrs. Howard Thompson who are themselves authorities on the Lee family. The trip calls also for a visit to Sulgrave Manor, seat of George Washington's ancestors, to Oxford and Stratford-on-Avon, and of course Shropshire itself is A. E. Housman country. The Shropshire part of the tour could be encompassed in three days, which suggests to us that it might be added to the springtime tour mentioned above.

Notes for Domestic Spring

Paradoxically a recent autumn visit to Longwood Gardens in Kennett Square, Pennsylvania (off route U. S. 1 from Philadelphia or Baltimore), urges us to pass on the news quickly that this spectacularly lovely shrine to botany should be on the springtime junket list of anyone who can possibly find a way of getting there. So fabulous are these gardens that we blush to report that we've only gotten around to seeing them—and they've been in operation since 1937, when Pierre S. Du Pont established them as a public institution, free for the gazing.

On a 1000-acre tract of land, not far from the scene of the battle of Brandywine, for this is historic country, there are such conservatories burgeoning with orchids, camellias, acacia, ferns, and exotica as you have never seen. Ideas

Chartreuse liqueur is one of the most elegant gifts you can select for a friend on your list who has a taste for good living. This rare liqueur has a colorful history dating back to 1605. Today, its secret recipe is known only by a handful of Carthusian Monks who produce it in Voiron near a secluded French monastery. Chartreuse is delicious served straight, on the rocks or over ice cream or fruit.

in the open gardens are bonanza for anyone who has ever planted a petunia. There is an Italian water garden, rose gardens, apple orchards, an arboretum, the whole an impeccably kept sampling of the wild and the cultivated. And as if this weren't enough, there's a system of fountains, which by night turn into sheer magic when they are lighted and played to music. This luminous show is put on once a week during the summer, and theatrical performances are occasionally produced on the open air stage centered in the fountains.

Longwood is open year round, its planting and greenhouses naturally in tune with the season. Its spectacular springtime show starts in March with cymbidium orchids; dogwood is the cynosure in late April and May; lilacs take over in early May; mid-May the rhododendrons are in full flower, until June, when the roses start.

You could make this part of an extended tour of this particularly beautiful and historically significant area where Pennsylvania and Delaware meet. The country is house- and garden-tour happy, proceeds going to charity. Among the annual festivities of the area, which include visits to some of the old houses and their gardens are: Dover Day in Dover, Del., the first Saturday in May; Wilmington Garden Day, Wilmington, Del., the second Saturday in May; New Castle Day in New Castle, Del., the third Saturday in May.

EVERYBODY HAS WINDOWS

Fig. 1. Showing how to fold tissue-paper sheets to make our rosettes.

How to Make a Rose Window

The delicate rosette in the middle of page 138 is very simple to make. Take four squares of tissue paper each a different color. Fold diagonally, making a triangle. Fold in half, then again, and then again. Clip the folds tightly with paper clips. You will have a cone (see Drawing 1). Now draw scallops along the folded edges, or simply cut free style with your scissors. Dotted lines on Drawing 2 indicate where you should cut. The shaded portion will be the rosette. Save all the ovals and scallops you cut away. You can make lovely designs with them. (See the turquoise rectangle, at left of rosette, dotted with cutouts, on page 138.)

Paste the roses down one at a time in over-laps, and there you have a rose window. And see the new color you have made in the middle.

Stars

The cherry magenta stars running diagonally down page 138 are all made from one basic form. Take a 20″ x 30″ sheet of tissue paper and fold in half bringing short ends together. Fold in half twice more, bringing short ends together each time. Make a square by bringing a corner up to make a triangle with the short edge of the triangle on top of the long side of the folded paper. Cut off the excess paper. (See Drawing 3.)

Take a 10″ dinner plate or pie pan and make arcs according to Drawing 3. Cut out petals (along the dotted line in Drawing 3). Now you have pointed squares and large and small petals to play with. One star can be made of two squares (bottom center of page 138). Another star (upper right of illustration) is made of four squares. The star at the top right of the page is two squares and four big petals. The huge sunburst at the bottom of the page is made of large and small petals.

Other designs on page 138 are made of squares and circles and strips cut from many colors. Weave strips together, and you have the plaid at the bottom of the page. Criss-cross strips, and you have the sunburst in the upper left corner. And use the cutout left-overs to decorate and embellish.

If your patterns are too pretty to throw away and you want to save them for next year, you can. Instead of cementing tissue paper to window panes, glue to 20-point acetate film (available at all art supply stores). Cement it the same way as on glass, pierce the top of the acetate with a hot needle, thread and hang. Or cut to fit window pane, if you wish. Or, make a sheet of designs and hang them in back of each other as Gene Moore, Display Director for Tiffany & Company, did (see photo below). If you hang large dark-colored designs close up and pale smaller ones farther back, you will increase the sense of depth.

As you play with colored tissue paper, you will find all sorts of new patterns and designs growing under your fingers until, lo and behold, you have become an artist with tissue paper.

PHOTOGRAPH BY WESLEY BALZ

Glue ¼" dowel stick, 14" long, at right angles to the puppet's center of gravity. The puppet should hang balanced in an upright position from this main control rod. Attach a second stick to the end of the moving segment. If you exactly follow our gluing instructions on page 188, the control rods will swivel, giving the puppeteer ease of manipulation and reduce shadows thrown by controls.

TWO DRAWINGS BY ALICE UCHIYAMA

stretched tightly across a doorway. Mask the "off-stage" area with blankets, so only the right-size, right-height stage area is exposed.

The Screen

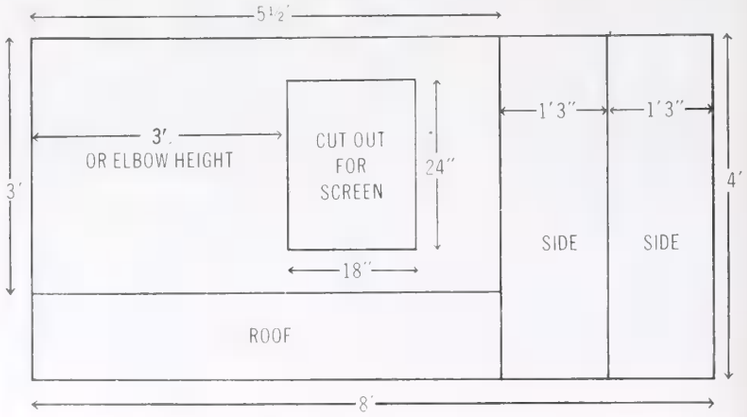
The stage area should be a rectangle roughly two feet wide and one and a half feet high. The lower edge should be at the child's standing elbow height, so he can comfortably manipulate puppets. A ledge along the base of the screen-stage helps keep the puppets steady and another bar about twelve inches in back of the ledge provides a resting place for the puppet handles or sticks.



The most successful screen material is bleached muslin sheeting stretched tightly on a frame. If the material is slightly damp when stretched, it will shrink as it dries making it even more taut. For best effect, the screen should be hung at a slight angle, the bottom edge tilted toward the puppeteer. This helps keep the puppets in good position.

Light

Your light should come from only one source or double shadows will be thrown. The lamp should be behind the screen, high enough so that no shadows are thrown on the screen except those of the puppets. A 15-watt fluorescent tube, hung at the top of the screen and back about nine inches, is most effective since it spreads the light source the width of the stage. Such fluorescent fixtures are available at most electric supply stores, for under $7.

Scenery and Props

Scenery can be cut from cardboard or 20-point acetate film and propped against the screen or tacked to it or hung from above. Acetate can be bought at art supply stores for about $2 a sheet.

Your shadow theatre can be made from one 4' x 8' piece of beaverboard. Have the sheet cut at the lumber yard according to this pattern, being sure that the bottom edge of the stage opening is at your child's elbow height. Use 1" x 2" wood strips to frame the panels.

Play it big and bold. Make extra large puppets when your shadow play cast is small. Here huge fish, their tails jointed for "swimming," fill the stage-sea. A school of fish, painted on a single piece of acetate, is manipulated by one control stick. Because the light source is above and a bit back from the screen, the control sticks tend not to throw shadows. The waterline is twisted chiffon.

TWO PHOTOGRAPHS BY HALL WINSLOW

You will need 1 or 2 sheets. A "frame" of scenery, trees, for example, could be painted on a sheet of acetate the same size as the screen and simply leaned against the screen. To make your puppets travel an extra long distance, move your scenery by attaching a control stick to it, and manipulate it like a puppet.

Interesting scenic effects can be made by twisting ribbons or scarves. By shredding the ends of crêpe paper and shaking it, you achieve the effect of fire. By hanging colored chiffon or gauze over the screen you suggest sky, water or mood. The vivid color and drawing of Ivan Chermayeff in his "The Thinking Book," with Sandol Stoddard Warburg (Little, Brown & Co.), gives many good ideas for scenery and use of color. In general, the simple effect is the most dramatic.

Puppets

Puppets can be made of cardboard, but the color effects possible with 20-point acetate film are most exciting. The size of the puppets is determined partly by the number on stage at any one time. Generally, they should be not less than six nor more than twelve inches high. The smaller the figure, the easier it will be to manipulate. Decide which way the puppets must face (they are one directional, remember) and draw the figures on heavy paper, dividing them into movable segments. Since realism is not the goal of shadow theatre, be free with exaggerated arms, legs, noses, chins, and color. Place a sheet of acetate over the drawing and outline it with opaque black acetate ink, such as Artone or other removable, nonpermanent acetate ink. Artone comes in many colors at art stores. Use transparent colors except for opaque black for outlining and opaque orange for flesh color. A heavy black outline around the edges of the figure helps define him. After the outlining ink has dried, turn the figure over and paint.

Use as few segments per puppet as possible, choosing what will move by the particular action which is required of the puppet. Joints should overlap. To attach segments, make only one hole for the pivot with a large pin (a corsage pin will do) heated at the tip with a match. Sew loosely with heavy cotton or carpet thread. A glass bead on each side of the outer sides of the figure makes the joints move more easily.

Attach the main control sticks, about 14 inches long, to the neck of the figure. This provides best balance and control.

If the puppet is a fish or other shape, you will have to find its center of gravity by testing. The puppet should hang upright from the main control stick. Use one-eighth inch dowel sticks for contact sticks. Weldwood contact cement from the hardware store is an excellent glue. Make a small dot of glue at spot where stick is to be attached and dip end of dowel in glue also. Do not attach but allow to dry separately for about 30 minutes. Dot figure and rod with glue again and dry. When dry, bring glued end of dowel at a right angle to the spot of glue on the figure. They will stick tightly together without any pressure, and the stick will swivel at right angles to the puppet. Attach rods to the moving parts the same way. The rods are like fishing poles with a puppet at the end. Because of this, the sticks do not throw much shadow. But don't worry about the sticks showing. Shadow theatre is not realistic; its bones may show without detracting from its effect.

Working the Puppets

Hold the puppets in complete contact with the screen for sharp shadows. Move them back for fuzziness and to make them disappear. The ledge at the bottom of the screen helps "walk" the puppets. The main control stick should be held in the hand opposite the direction the puppet is going. With a little practice all kinds of exciting action can happen. Be sure that each puppeteer's responsibilities are clear. It is a good idea to pin back-stage the scenario with a list of who does what next so that nothing crucial is forgotten in the excitement of the performance.

Children can do almost all of the puppet and scenery making themselves. The toughness of the acetate sheets gives them a sturdy life. Your help will be needed to build or arrange the stage, screen, and light and, perhaps, to start the project off. But the final production will be most fun for everyone in the family if the children keep their theatrical secrets to themselves. Their surprises and dramatic originality will make the event a special family celebration and the beginning of a satisfying pastime.

hand, you can sit smugly by, take a deep breath, and enjoy your friends, and all the goings on. Best of all, you can feel superior because you've got things under control.

In giving parties for the holidays, I have friends in literally from morn till night. When the house is all geared up for entertaining, you'll be amazed at how many parties you can give with a minimum of effort and expense. For one affair will sort of help another, food-wise and drink-wise. What you don't use for one party, can carry over for another gathering.

Your entertaining can be as simple or as elaborate as you wish to make it. Try and work out a schedule that is pleasant and happy for you and the family. You'll be amazed how your friends will be delighted to come at any time you say. Ask more than you expect and call it "open house" so they won't feel too weighed down by obligations.

Here is a list of gatherings that I have whipped up: they work either the week before or after Christmas. Don't think I do them all—at least not all on the same day. They are suggestions for you to adapt to your own way of life.

1. The coffee hour at ten-thirty
2. The continental bouillon at eleven-thirty
3. Tea from three to five
4. Chocolate at four
5. Hot grog gathering at five
6. Cocktail party from six to eight
7. Dessert, coffee and brandy at eight or
8. Port and cheese at eight thirty

For one open house I might ask my friends to drop in for coffee or bouillon, whichever is most convenient for them. Another day I might have tea. Then later in the day a hot grog gathering, for a lot of the same things can be used for both "do's." Another evening I will ask friends in for after dinner.

The cocktail parties are a completely different type of shindig. These you really have to get well organized for, as they are a little more complicated and the guests seem to linger longer.

After Christmas I have a party for the college crowd and also a dinner party for us parents. After the big day there seems to be a lull before New Year's and it is a good time to have something different, such as a Sunday luncheon or a dinner party.

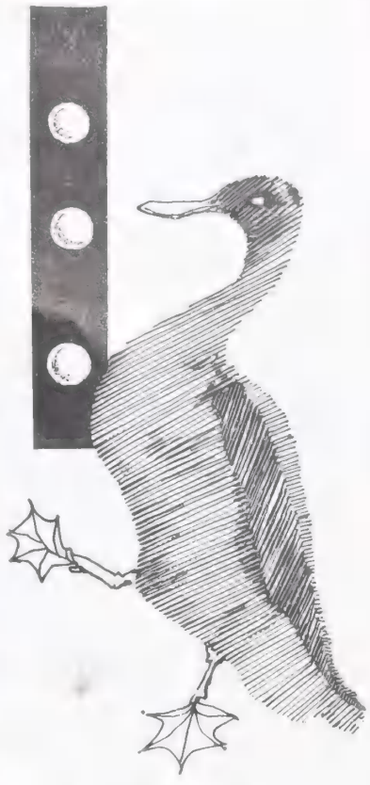
Since I believe in "be kind to hostesses" entertaining, think about a morning open house. Telephone your friends and ask them to drop by any day on their way to town to shop. Ask them for from ten on or set the hour when you can conveniently get the beds made.

There are several liquid libations you can serve: orange juice, pineapple juice, and tomato juice are all good if you wish to splash in a little vodka. It is amazing how they will anticipate their shopping if they are given a light lift. Cider is a good drink, and this can be mulled with a dash of brandy. I serve sugared doughnuts on a funny tree (like a hat rack) along with these drinks. (See photo on page 134.)

If your guests wish to drop by as late as elevenish, then have hot consommé going, as it is a nice change of pace from the usual coffee routine. Just dear old Campbell's Consommé with a twist of the pepper grinder and a slice of lemon. Sherry, either in the soup or in a glass and served with the consommé is delicious.

You will need a "hot tray" for so much of your Christmas entertaining and, if you haven't one, ask Santa Claus for one early in the fray. (I have two stainless-steel numbers with good-looking wooden handles, produced by Lakeside Manufacturing Co., Milwaukee, Wisconsin, Model Number 811.) As most of my parties are buffet numbers, I find that the hot trays are indispensable.



With your hot drinks steeping on the hot tray, your hot coffee cakes or muffins in the good old electric frying pan, the wooden tree hung with doughnuts frosted with powdered sugar, you are all set to yak with the guests and have fun. I keep several frozen coffee cakes to whisk out of the freezer when I need them.

If you wish to have more to eat, then have a pan of dollar-size sausages or the smoky lengths cut in three sections (for ease of eating), and a big platter of red baked apples. That old favorite standby of mine, the cheese fondue, is always a welcome addition, and would turn the party into a brunch. (Send for my Cheese Fondue recipe if you didn't save it when I wrote it up for you.)

A tray of interesting crackers should accompany the consommé. I am crazy about the sesame seed crackers now on the market put out by several companies.

I think luncheon parties are too much trouble during the holidays, and I would rather have friends in

How to Take Advantage of the Knowledge of our time

In the past fifteen years, vast new areas of knowledge about man and his environment have been uncovered. In the excitement of these discoveries—in nutrition, climate control, how to prevent aging, air pollution, acoustics, and many others—the vital link to your everyday life has often been forgotten. In the January issue you will see how this vast storehouse of knowledge can be put to work to make your day-to-day life easier, more healthful, and more satisfying.

Don't miss this precedent-making issue! It will be another famous House Beautiful, to be saved for years to come.

at odd hours for tea or hot grog. So I ask them to come in after shopping, from three on, to put up their feet and get unwound. There is nothing in the world that can take the place of that "cup that cheers."

On the same day as your open house for tea, you might also have the "Hot Grog Gathering." Ask them to come in at five. Some may prefer tea, so leave that on the hot tray. But now you add to the hot tray the glasses you are going to use and the liquor which can be bourbon or rye or brandy or gin or rum—whatever you have on hand. This is not a lot of fuss and feathers, but you just have the kettle boiling and everything laid out on the buffet table.

There is one vital point to remember: You must not pour too much whiskey (or what have you) into the drink or you will get "fumiated." Heat brings out the fumes of the alcohol, so an ounce of liquor is plenty for each drink. Never put more than an ounce and a half for your guests will be unable to drink it, and the pleasure of the grog is to be able to partake of it while it is steaming. If your guests come a few at a time then you can manage to flame their drinks. Put the hot water, lemon, and cloves in the glass with half the whiskey. Then lay a teaspoon across the glass, put in a tiny lump of sugar, fill the spoon with the warmed whiskey and then light the sugar and serve with a flourish.

For each serving you will need:
1 small lump of sugar (C. & W. cocktail cube)
1 jigger bourbon (or whatever libation you wish)
2 to 4 cloves
A few slivers of cinnamon bark

If you wish to make the drink even more sensational, use a whole stick of cinnamon, it acts as a stirrer or "muddler." It's a waste of cinnamon, but I think it is worth it. All you will have to add to the buffet table is a platter of cheese, crackers, and sliced French bread.

For an evening party, dessert, coffee, and brandy at eight are so easy. An even simpler way of entertaining guests is to have port and cheese and apples. Again the wonderful wooden tree serves as a decoration as well as holding the apples to eat. There is a trick in hanging these apples. Buy new screws at the hardware store, at least three inches long. Wash them well and then tie red ribbons on end, screw them into the apples and hang them up (they slide off nails).

I think this is perhaps the most relaxing gathering of the whole mad holiday whirl, for you can sit in front of the fire leisurely, and have good conversation. I usually put on some Christmas records, turned very low so there will be soft background music. We are cosy and warm and we enjoy our guests to the utmost.

If you are giving them dessert, have something that holds well and looks pretty. For instance melange of canned fruits with raspberry sauce is attractive. I lean to individual sizes: A chocolate mousse made in individual cups, pecan tarts, coffee eclairs or cream puffs are all attractive on the buffet table. I like to have a fresh fruit bowl and one or two rich desserts, depending on the number of guests.

You may want to toss all these ideas out the window and just concentrate on that good old cocktail party for your open house.

I HAVE a couple of new items to simplify your buffet table for the cocktail party. One is elegant gold or silver paper plates. They are expensive, but they save on dish washing and they add a nice note to the table. They are made in England by Mansell, exclusively distributed by Freund Mayer Co., Inc. in New York. I got mine at Neiman Marcus in Dallas. They come in all sizes, but the six-inch plate is the best. The silver ones are elegant if you have silver serving dishes. However, my accessories are brass so I use the gold ones. (Price: 2 for 25¢.) (Also at Dennison's in New York City.)

Another discovery I have made looks like and tastes like a million dollars. As you know a baby block of pâté de foie gras that is four inches long and two inches deep (weight 7½ oz.) is hideously expensive, costing over $15. While in Texas, going through a fine grocery store, I found a giant block more than 7 inches long, 3½ inches deep, weighing over 2 pounds and in the same block shape as its expensive little brother. It is called pâté de foie de Strassbourg, aux truffes du Perigord, Alsace brand, packed by L'Hafner, Strassbourg. I like it better than the dear little one, but you do have to buy a small tin of truffles to go with it. I cut one truffle in slices to decorate this proud beauty, then chop the rest and fling them around the pâté. Surround it with thinly sliced French bread. How much does this giant pâté cost? I paid $5.95 for it. Try and find it at your gourmet shop. It will serve 40 guests!

A cold veal roast covered with glimmering chopped aspic is a welcome change from the ham and turkey routine. If you wish to be more elaborate, add a beautiful smoked salmon to the groaning board, serving it with wedges of lemon, freshly ground pepper, a side dish of capers, and rye bread or crackers. For the cheese tray I select several varieties, including Swiss, Colombo, Roquefort, Port du Salut and Bel Paese. Have a bread and cracker tray alongside, with pumpernickel, rye and French breads, chipper crackers, rye, sesame, and soda crackers. Your guests can make their own favorite cheese nibbles. (You know cheese is a good "blotter.") This tray can be run up in no time flat, looks well after two hours on the buffet table, and is a must for all my gatherings.

For my dinner party this year I am planning to have a dreamy dish called Clams in Aspic for the first course. It will be served in the living room in front of the fire in lieu of hors d'oeuvres. For the sit-down part of the dinner we will have Duck Orientale, wild rice, braised celery hearts, and a green vegetable—either broccoli or brussels sprouts. We may have a salad and cheese. For dessert there will be pears in port with whipped cream and a Christmas cake.

The party for the college crowd is certainly easy to plan, for the kids are so happy with so little. A pizza party can be "swingin'." Bowls of popcorn, potato chips, a "dunk" and fritos are all they seem to want. I go further and fix masses of dollar-size hamburgers and have them in a large pan keeping hot, along with tiny buttered Parker House rolls, and all kinds of trimmings. They disappear like magic.

So with all these ideas buzzing in your head, I will give you some of the recipes for the various parties that I have suggested.

Mulled Cider

Heat the cider in a sauce pan, allowing the following for each cup of cider:

1 teaspoon brown sugar
2 cloves
4 whole allspice
A few bits of cinnamon bark
1 slice lemon

Simmer this brew for 15 minutes (do not boil) and serve in hot glasses. Add a slice of lemon and a dash of freshly grated nutmeg and serve. If you wish to "lace" it with a lifter upper, put in a jigger of apple brandy.

Soufflé of Caviar

In order to make caviar go further, yet look very opulent, I experimented and came up with this dish to make your buffet table lush. It must be made the day before, which helps.

2 egg yolks
1 egg white
1 scant tablespoon melted gelatin
2 tablespoons cream
¼ pint whipping cream
4 ounces of Philadelphia Cream Cheese
¼ teaspoon M.S.G.
¼ teaspoon dried lemon peel
2 tablespoons lemon juice
¼ teaspoon salt
3 shallots, run through a press

Put gelatin in a Pyrex pitcher, then add cold water to dissolve. Place this in a pan of hot water to melt. Beat the quarter pint of whipping cream until stiff and press the cream cheese through a sieve. Also beat the egg whites stiff. Now you are ready to begin to commence. Put the egg yolks in a sauce pan with the two tablespoons of cream. Beat over low fire until creamy. Now add the melted gelatin and slowly add the sieved cream cheese. Add the lemon juice and peel. When this is all a nice thick goop, add the whipped cream and the stiffly beaten egg whites. This is all done away from the fire. Put in a soufflé dish and refrigerate for at least two hours, or overnight.

Just before your guests are expected, unmold the soufflé on a large plate. Put caviar over the top and have masses of chopped chives around the base. Also offer beside this beauty, a cup of finely chopped onion and some wedges of lemon.

I use the cheapest caviar I can find for this dish—Land O'Lakes Whitefish Caviar, from Wisconsin. It is really very good. The two-ounce jar is sufficient for the above recipe.

Tartare Steak Log

If you have no aversion to raw meat, I know you will find this about the best steak tartare you ever flipped a lip over. First off, have the butcher use the leanest beef in the place, then take a deep breath and ask him to grind it three times (how they hate this). Try and have it ground the same day you are to use it, but it will still hold its color after 24 hours, if properly packaged. Better yet, grind it yourself if you have one of those wonderful new electric meat grinders.

2 egg yolks
1 teaspoon Colman's Mustard
¼ teaspoon M.S.G.
½ teaspoon salt
⅛ teaspoon freshly ground pepper

A GRACIOUS CHRISTMAS

½ teaspoon Chef Howald's Seasoning salt
2 shallots run through the press
¼ cup olive oil
1 teaspoon Worcestershire
1 tablespoon red wine vinegar

Put the finely ground beef into a bowl. Put the egg yolks into a mixing bowl and beat until lemon colored. Add the dry ingredients, then alternate the oil and vinegar, adding slowly and stirring well.

When this is smooth, add the Worcestershire sauce and shallots. Mix well, and then lightly fork into the beef. Mix well, keeping the beef lightly mixed, don't mash it against the side of the bowl. When you have finished mixing, roll out onto wax paper, and mold it into a log, again being careful not to mash it down.

I make my logs the size of the long French bread that I will serve with it. Roll the log in masses of chopped chives, so this green lovely will add a color note to your buffet. Put it on a large platter, surround with thinly sliced French bread.

Veal Pot Roast

The cut of veal I ordered came out perfectly for my use. I ordered the "eye" of the rib. It weighed four pounds and resembled a whole filet in shape.

1 good-size onion
4 carrots
1 clove of garlic run through a press (optional)

Chop the above ingredients and lightly brown them in butter in the casserole that you are going to cook the veal in. Take the vegetables out of the pan and brown the veal, adding more butter if necessary. Now this is important: The veal has no fat, so it must have the vegetables placed on top so as to keep it moist. These vegetables seem to "baste" the veal through its cooking period. Add some chicken consommé, cover the casserole and put in a 300° F. oven for 2½ hours, or until it is tender.

Cool the veal overnight, then refrigerate it. This makes it easier to slice. Slice thinly, arrange on a platter with chopped aspic (recipe follows) to give it a lift and a sparkle, surround with thinly sliced French bread, the same size as the roast.

Topaz Aspic

I use this aspic to decorate everything from a veal roast to clams. It makes your dish sparkle.

Refrigerate Swanson's Chicken Soup, so that you can lift off the coagulated fat with ease. This aspic must be clearer than clear. I will give you the recipe for three cans of broth, for you will use this over the holidays. It will keep for some time in a very cold part of your refrigerator.

3 cans Swanson's Chicken Broth
5 tablespoons gelatin soaked in dry white wine
2 egg whites and crushed shells
2 teaspoons cold water

Boil chicken broth for a short time, to reduce it to five cups. Cool. To make this broth crystal clear is simple if the temperature is right. Beat the egg whites lightly with crushed shell and cold water. Add it to the cooled broth and bring the brew to the boiling point, stirring all the while. Turn the heat down and let simmer for three minutes, then turn off the heat and let it stand for 20 minutes. Strain through two thicknesses of wet cheesecloth put into a sieve. As you pour off liquid from egg white, pour with care to leave the coagulated egg whites in the pan. Also do not try and pour out every vestige of broth, for there might be a little residue in the bottom. I pour mine with strong light shining through into a Pyrex pitcher so that I can see what I'm doing. I sometimes strain it twice, using fresh wet cheese cloth each time.

Now heat again, add the gelatin, which has been standing in white wine, dissolve and then pour into a covered dish. Cool, cover, and refrigerate.

This may sound crazy to you, but it works like a charm. In Peggy Harvey's cookbook, Season to Taste, she gives you this secret. To chop aspic to make it the most glistening in the world, moisten a piece of brown paper. On it put as much aspic as you need, and chop. I put all this on a cutting board and use one of Bob's big chopping knives. You can do this same thing using Campbell's Beef Bouillon, which is excellent over beef, etc. However, you should use red wine, or half water and half sherry to moisten the gelatin.

Peggy Harvey's Clams in Aspic

Salt, dash of cayenne, and a dash of thyme
½ tablespoon gelatin, softened in 1 tablespoon cold water

If you do not have clam shells use coquille shells, those little scalloped darlings. I really think the tiny shells are the prettiest, but you have to have a lot of refrigerator space, as they take up a lot of space. They are a glorious addition to your table, served on a bed of ice or parsley.

Melt the butter in a frying pan, stir in bread crumbs, cook for a few minutes, stirring all the while. Add clam juice and the cream. Heat, but do not boil, add dry seasonings and mix well, keeping hot. Stir the softened gelatin into the brew and when melted (you have to guess at this) add the finely chopped clams last. Fill the shells (this is murder, for they tip over; I have used everything from coasters to matches to keep them from tipping). Refrigerate overnight. When ready to serve, put a copious amount of the chopped aspic on top of each. It glistens like shattered topazes.

Pears in Port

Allow one pear per person and a couple of extras, so that the platter won't be bare when all are served. Peel them carefully; this takes time. And when you are selecting them, get the most uniform, choosing those with stems. Leave a half inch crown of peeling and the stem for a touch of decoration. Place them carefully in a pan and cover with a sweet white wine (I use Pinot Chardonay, because it is open) with some sugar added. Cover and poach over low heat until tender. Cool and then refrigerate. Do these a day or two before your party.

Make a sauce of the following: Defrost two packages of raspberries, and run them through the electric blender. Then pour through the finest sieve you can find (I usually do it twice, so as to catch all the seeds). Flavor the sauce with 6 to 8 tablespoons of ruby port. There should be two cups of sauce. Arrange the pears on a platter or in a lovely crystal bowl and pour this ruby sauce over the top of each. Serve with sweetened whipped cream, made pink by the addition of some port and red cake coloring.

If you wish to glamorize the pears even more, before poaching them in the sweetened wine, core them with an apple corer, and when cold, stuff them with creamed Philadelphia Cream Cheese that has been mixed with chopped almonds.

This dessert is better if prepared the day before your party. But you must remember to store each separately—the pears in their syrup and the sauce in covered containers in the refrigerator. You can whip the cream an hour or two before your party for it will hold.

Do extend to your friends an invitation for one or more of these hospitable and convivial affairs. You will have a joyous atmosphere in the house. Merry Christmas!

Choose the best evergreens for indoors —and out

These trees and shrubs have landscape value plus foliage that stays green in the house

By CARROLL C. CALKINS

● Some of the finest conifers for garden use have handsome foliage with remarkable keeping qualities indoors. If the fresh look—and delightful smell—of greens is important to you in winter, consider planting some of these double-duty conifers. We show only needle-leaf, cone-bearing plants (conifers) here because they offer the widest selection of foliage and form for most of the country.

There are, however, some fine broad-leaf evergreens for indoors and out. Holly, the hardy rhododendrons, leatherleaf viburnum, and pyracantha are all good. Southern gardens of course have many other year-round, broad-leaf plants to choose from.

Besides the conifers shown here, the false cypress (Chamaecyparis), fir, and arborvitae keep well indoors. But these aren't so easy to use in the garden. Hemlock, on the other hand, is a useful garden tree but the foliage doesn't keep so well after cutting. Any of the evergreens can be planted whenever the soil is ready to dig, and before they start into their active growth in the spring.

What you should know about pruning

You can prune conifers lightly at any season, but it is least desirable in late spring and summer. Heavy pruning is best done in spring before new growth starts. Fairly heavy trimming is safe in winter—for the holidays. In fact you may want to delay necessary pruning until winter when you can make good use of the trimmings in the house.

The pines can't take much cutting without endangering the plant. You can remove only the growth of the last year or two without trouble. Cut the main stem back to the side shoots. New buds will break and form a new leader. If you take more than two years growth, the new buds may not start and the limb will die. If you want a lot of pine foliage, plant more pines. There are many handsome ones.

Yews can take heavy pruning at almost any time of year and fill out again. Junipers also yield a good harvest of foliage and come back strong. After cutting greens, put them in water if possible or spray with an anti-transpirant to keep them fresh longer in the house. Sketches show typical form of mature plants, but not their ultimate size.

Japanese white pine
(Pinus parviflora)

The individual branch ends of this elegant pine have substance and quality enough to stand alone as decoration. The tree grows slowly and can be pruned, though sparingly, but even a little foliage is well worth having. The tree grows to 45 feet or more, and there's a dwarf with a more picturesque shape.

Pfitzer juniper
(Juniperus chinensis pfitzeriana)

Red Cedar
(Juniperus virginiana)

Cedar has a wonderful fragrance and is a classic for holiday wreaths. There are two dozen different kinds of cedar in various shapes and sizes, and most are worth while. Shown here is the typical form of the Eastern native. It grows to 60 feet or more. There are similar red cedars native to the West.

White pine
(Pinus strobus)

Long needles and flexible stems make this good for swags. It grows fast and provides a lot of foliage for trimming without danger of destroying its character. In small gardens it needs trimming to keep it in scale. As a forest tree, it grows to 100 feet. There's a dwarf spreading form too.

Japanese black pine
(Pinus thunbergii)

The foliage of this tree is dense with a heavy over-all texture. It is valuable for accents in conjunction with other foliage or used alone. Only short-stemmed pieces can be taken because it grows slowly. Tree is full-foliaged with an attractive irregular outline. It grows to about 20 feet in American gardens.

Japanese yew
(Taxus cuspidata)

DRAWINGS BY ZOE MARTIN

This accommodating plant can be pruned at almost any time of year and trimmed to any shape. It can be a low hedge or tall tree. It is more useful for short sprays of foliage than for long self-supporting branches. Handsome red berries appear in fall. There are more than 50 kinds of yew in all.

How to enhance a really high screen

When a fence must be more than five or six feet tall, it calls for definite visual enrichment to avoid a sense of monotony and confinement.

Contrasts of color, pattern, and texture in both the structure and planting can be used to good advantage, as in these two gardens

Two tall screens are required here to provide privacy for forecourt and entry from front and side of house. Notice how trees are trimmed to create a strong horizontal line and reduce apparent height. Owners: Mr. & Mrs. J. Metcalf. Landscape Architect: Thomas Church.

ALL PHOTOGRAPHS BY MAYNARD PARKER

For privacy while dining, a roof-high screen was needed at the edge of this narrow service passage. Landscape Architects Osmundson & Staley designed the tall fence as a decorative garden feature. It has two planes, one on each side of the two-by-four frame. Forward plane has vertical battens for contrast of texture. Shadow-play on the planting and on the two planes of the fence make this ever-changing scene a great asset to the dining room. Vine on fence is a climbing rose.

Off-season reflections on the Fungi and the Blights

By WILLIAM ALVADORE BUCK

It is much more restful to contemplate the cures for garden ills than to practice them. But be forewarned— one usually leads to the other

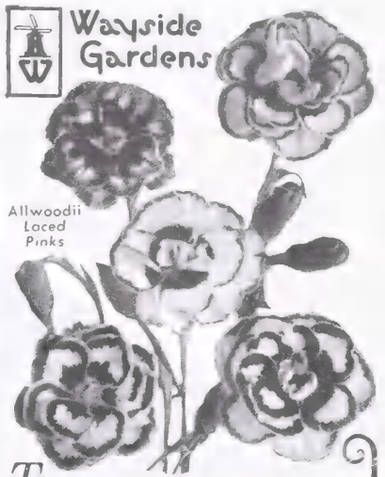
• In view of the fact that science has identified and named some 100,000 kinds of fungi it does seem astonishing that the average gardener's system of dealing with plant diseases works as well as it does. While bacteria and viruses cause some of the infectious garden diseases, fungi are the pathogens of the large majority—and they call for understanding.

The average gardener, novice or old hand, when he notices a plant that does not look well, will eye a leaf with his naked eye, put his hands in his pockets, shake his head and say, "I can't think what is the matter with it." End of the treatment.

Fortunately the great majority of vegetable and flower ailments are not killers. Of all my plantings over 25 years, I can remember only one failure that was total—sweet peas. Everything else I have planted, flower or vegetable, has brought in some harvest. I know many others whose spirit seems to be, to quote one, "What the bugs and blights get is theirs, as far as I am concerned." They go on planting and are able to brag about their tomatoes and corn most years.

The problem of the kitchen gardener is not at all like that of the commercial grower, who must produce a fairly perfect and storable product. The lovely cook in the kitchen does not mind paring off a few spots of bacterial blight from the tomatoes or cutting out a bit of rusty-brown anthracnose from the Kentucky Wonders, with a few wholesome complaints. The gardener does not plant fields, counties, and states with one crop, giving the pathogens that live on it monstrous opportunities to mother a virulent strain.



In 1946, a wet year, the late blight of potatoes converted to tomatoes; many fields in commercial tomato country were devastated. But I lost only a couple of vines in late summer and maybe a third of my crop, the third I give away.

This same disease first came to light in Ireland, where it developed such might in the wide fields of potatoes that it became for a time one of the worst killers in the annals of agriculture. Everyone knows what happened—the Irish potato famine, whose effect on history and American politics we still measure.

Only in the last century or so have we been able to identify disease and locate its cause. All that looks like disease to the ordinary eye is not disease. Often a leaf that has served its time will yellow and drop off, dying of old age and uselessness. Lower leaves that can not work because the growing plant has cast them into the shade go out of business as naturally as a flower unfolds. Even evergreens shed some of their leaves every year; in the fall when your arborvitae turns its older leaves brown you probably have no cause to fret.

Some disease conditions—wilting, leaf curling, rotting, chlorosis—are not caused by pathogens, but by flaws in the environment. Yellowing, for instance, may be caused by a microscopic bug, virus or mould, by a lack of iron or nitrogen, by weather, a pH so high that the iron or other necessary elements present in the soil are not available, or something else. Also, of course, a wan and wilting appearance may be the work of aphids or nematodes at the roots, mites on the leaves or a borer in the stem.

OFF-SEASON REFLECTIONS

Some diseases do little damage, such as the powdery mildew that defaces lilacs, phlox, and zinnias toward the summer's end, and the sooty mold that often blackens plants, soil, and rocks under tulip trees, fed by the honeydew which the aphids on the trees shower down on everything below, including automobiles. Some do considerable harm in average seasons but not enough to prevent a fair harvest, like the Fusarium wilt in the South and Verticillium wilt in the North, which attack tomatoes, coming from the soil in midseason, and kill lower leaves and branches, then work up until, once in a while, the whole plant dies. Just a few of these plagues are as deadly as they are incurable, like the chestnut blight from Asia, which years ago destroyed almost every American chestnut from shore to shore.

In any event, the matter of disease in the garden merits serious planning. For one thing, it hardly seems fair to the neighbors to encourage the pathogens of disease in the back yard and thus pass infection to other gardens. They will travel, sometimes fast. Some go on the wind, some on visiting birds and animals, blowing leaves, the mud on the mailman's shoes, or in flowing water. Moreover, they can build up strength in your own garden from year to year.

PREVENTION is always more reliable than cure. So make your plans to watch your garden closely and do exactly what I tell you to do in the next several paragraphs. I don't promise that I perform every little thing I counsel you to do, but I hope you will. I will say I am a good watcher, that is important.

Make sure that your land has good drainage, for nearly all vegetation, except some bog and water plants, will sicken and die in time if they do not have air at their roots. The beneficent bacteria and fungi that are the life of the soil must breathe. If there is any doubt on the matter, dig a hole eighteen inches deep and fill it with water. If the water has not drained away in 36 hours, you have trouble.

Make sure that your soil is adequately supplied with organic matter and a balanced store of plant nutrients. The all-organic evangelists argue that this is the end-all solution to plant disease, if the nutrients are "natural" organic and not chemical, but the Department of Agriculture disagrees.

A plant may be growing with fine vigor and have the best of care, and yet take down with something; in fact, some rusts, smuts, and mildews thrive only on vigorous plants. In corn breeding they have found that hybrids in the highest health, growing as only hybrids can, have less resistance than those of low vigor to corn smut—a weird and astonishing growth on the ear which looks more like the black embodiment of a witch's curse than anything I know.

Add barnyard manure to cotton fields in Arkansas infected with wilt and the disease wanes; add the same manure to a field in the delta of the Nile and the severity of the disease increases. But on the whole, authorities agree that a well-nourished plant in soil with the right pH has more resistance to most diseases than others.

PERHAPS the balance of fertility is more important than the quantity. For good growth plants need nitrogen, phosphorus and potassium. A balanced fertilizer includes all three. Most soils of the South and East are especially low on phosphorus so a fertilizer relatively high in the element, such as a 5-10-5 formula would be the right "balance" for such soils. Having the soil tested will tell you what it needs in order to fully do its part in producing healthy plants.

Rotate crops in the garden if you can possibly do so, especially plants of the cabbage family, tomatoes, and asters. Some ills live in the soil winter after winter for four, five, or six years, inactive until the plant they love appears again. If they are starved for the right period, they die out.

In rotation the important idea is the classification of crops according to the kind of nutrients they take from the soil; there are three classes: leaf crops, which consume a relatively large amount of nitrogen, root crops that use more potash, and seed or fruit crops that demand phosphorus particularly.

The best argument I know for spraying or dusting on a regular schedule is that many kinds of insects carry disease. Some day I may come down to such a schedule and, who knows, stick to it. Moreover, certain plant pestilences can not enter and infect the plant until they find a wound in the epidermal tissue, such as a chewing bug might make.

If your insecticide is an "all-around" spray or dust, which contains a fungicide, while it will not control all things in all weather, as perhaps advertised, it should give fair protection from both bugs and blights. The label will tell what it actually has in it. Every gardener should cultivate the art of label-reading. The law requires honesty herein, and clues to success are on the label—even if in fine print.

Here is a pretty experiment you might try some day. Try to pull a squash or other cucurbit through the season with an insecticide containing DDT and see what happens to the vine. I think you will become the best of label-readers.

When plants are wet, stay out of the garden. Microscopic life may cling to clothing and hands and pass around in the wetness. If you water the garden with a spray that showers the leaves, do so in the morning if the weather is humid; at any rate, do not indulge in the pleasure of playing with the hose after dinner. It may seem like a crystal charm, a benediction to close the day, but there will be less disease if the leaves go into the night dry. I have heard an old wives' tale that plants should not be watered when the sun is on them, but I could never see that it did any harm.

ALLOW ample space between the rows and between plants in the row. There should be free circulation of air, and, except in the shady garden, as much sunlight as possible. In your winter planning place the taller things, such as pole beans, at the north side of the plot, or, at any rate, where they will not cast shade on the other rows. Sunlight is a strong destroyer of microscopic mischief. The practice, old as time, of sowing three or four times as many seeds as you expect to raise to maturity is as good as it ever was, for accident and disease are sure to strike down some of the baby plants, but do not let weak sentiment prevent you from thinning them out at the right time, for plants need air around them.

Select disease-resistant varieties where you can. Science is giving us more resistant varieties every year. Note that the catalogs say resistant, not immune, and resistant only to certain infections, not all. So do not ignore all the rules of good gardening and rely on their resistance to carry through every event.

Use treated seed if possible, or seed grown in a region free of seed-born infection. On his trouble shelf every gardener should have a fungicide for treating seeds against the damping-off fungus, and use it on all seeds planted in pots or flats, at least, and on those he has had trouble with in the past. Order plants only from the most reliable firms; some berry plants, as well as seed potatoes, can be certified virus-free and these are the only ones you want.

It seldom pays to nurse a plant that is obviously diseased throughout its system. The careful gardener will place it in a paper bag to carry away for burning, for it may be shedding spores that can infect other plantings. Then, he will wash his hands with soap and water before he handles any other gardening task. Always wash your hands after touching an ailing leaf before you touch another—that is, if you want to be more careful than I sometimes am. Also keep down the weeds, for weeds can nourish and spread disease.

IF I HAD space, I suppose I could describe some of the common diseases that herbage is heir to, but I have found that word descriptions are generally more confusing than fun. There are thousands, and sometimes the plant pathologist in a laboratory can not be sure. I can refer you to a good book which I think must be in every public library. It is: Plant Diseases, the Yearbook of Agriculture for 1953, published by the United States Department of Agriculture. You may be able to secure a copy free by writing to your congressman. It contains many plates in color showing several score of the more common and damaging ills.

If you run into real trouble, the best course would be to wrap up the patient or a twig or a few leaves, according to the nature of the ailment, in a newspaper and send it to your state agricultural office, or wherever your county agent advises you to send it for identification.

Above all don't lose heart in the face of wilt and blight. You might say to yourself, philosophically: "Perfection is not a practical ambition for this world, but merely a notion we have in our minds, something Nature knows nothing about. After all, if the antelope were perfect in speed and alertness, that is, in his specialties, would the tiger ever eat?" This incantation won't help your ailing plants, but may help keep things in perspective.
